A Bad Change.

While holding a term of court at Augusta once Judge Walton sentenced a man to seven years in prison for a grave crime. The respondent's counsel asked for a mitigation of the sentence on the ground that the prisoner's health was very poor. "Your honor," said he, "I am satisfied that my client cannot live out half that term, and I beg of you to change the sentence." "Well, under those circumstances," said the judge, "I will change the sentence. I will make it for life instead of seven years." It is almost needless to add that the respondent chose to abide by the original sentence, which the judge permitted him to elect.—Argonaut.

Fine Old Spanish Emeralds.

"Fine old Spanish emeralds" is a phrase which means something quite different from what it seems to imply. There never was an emerald mined in Spain, but after the conquest of Peru the conquerors brought home great quantities of loot, of which emeralds formed an important part. In this way the finest emeralds came into possession of the old Spanish families and as very few had been seen in Europe previous to that time all the best stones soon became classed as fine old Spanish emeralds. Today the expression still applies to the best emeralds of any source.

PLAYING GYPSY.

Titled English Couple, Who Emulate the Professional Wanderers.

Owing to the recent death of the four-year-old son of the Duke of Westminster the latter's uncle, Lord Arthur Grosvenor, has become heir presumptive to the most valuable landed estates in the world. This property includes 600 acres of the choicest portions of London's best residential section, a $5,000,000 palatial country mansion surrounded by 5,000 acres, 20,000 acres in Flintshire and Cheshire and 40,000 acres in South Africa. The estimated income from this vast property is $2,500,000.

By the law of primogeniture title to all land in England is vested in the eldest son. Now that the present Duke of Westminster has no male heir the title to the property passes to the duke's uncle, Lord Arthur. The latter, being a younger son, did not share in the estate when his brother, the father of the present duke, succeeded to the title and property. He consequently turned to a military career and won distinction during the Boer war. Since then he has been living quietly in the country.

Lady Arthur Grosvenor, however, though her husband did not inherit any portion of the Westminster estate, possessed considerable wealth in her own right, being the daughter of Sir Richard Sheffield. Lady Arthur Grosvenor is anything but "retiring" in disposition, and is one of the best known all 'round sportswomen in England. She has an abhorrence of conventional life, and gave ample evidence of this fact three years ago by buying two gypsy wagons and literally going about with them through the country. She assumed the name of "Sarah Lee," which she painted upon the caravan and went through the formality of taking out a hawker's license so as not to be molested by the country police as she went from place to place.

The adventures of Lady Arthur, who was accompanied by her husband, made her the talk of England for some little time, and quite a number of her society friends cut her because of her strange whim. She went all over England, however, and seldom took the trouble to explain her identity. On one or two occasions she found it necessary to extricate herself from an embarrassing position by letting it be known that she was a titled lady simply enjoying an outing. As a rule, English farmers are not at all partial to nomads of the tramp persuasion, as Lady Arthur Grosvenor often found to her great inconvenience.

While out on these journeys Lady Arthur does all her own cooking over a regular camp fire. She rises every morning at 5 o'clock and has breakfast ready "in the open" at 6. A tent is always carried along and usually one of the wagons is loaded with a stock of household necessities, such as brooms, mats and wickerware, and she enjoys the experience of going into the farmers' cottages and disposing of her goods. For several months each year she has stuck to this gypsy mode of life.

Her example has given rise to a "fad" among the upper ten in England. A month or two out of the year many of them attempt to practice the "simple life" by camping out on the lawns of their country mansions, walking barefooted on the grass, and limiting themselves to farinaceous diet. There are not many, however, who have the hardihood to go in for the "real thing" to the extent indulged in by Lady Arthur Grosvenor. The Grosvenor heirs to the Duke of Westminster have one son and two daughters.

Agreement With Portugal.

The exact terms of the new agreement between the Transvaal and the Portuguese authorities regarding Delagoa Bay are not settled, but the general principles have been agreed upon, and the final draft will be ready for signing at the end of the month. The agreement will follow the main lines of the present modus vivendi, the chief fresh feature being a clause allocating to Delagoa Bay half at least of the Transvaal traffic. This will not involve joint management of the wharf at Delagoa Bay by a board of control, but there will, of course, be perfect understanding between the two administrations regarding the methods of handling trade. The principle of free trade for the products of the Transvaal in Mozambique will be maintained, and the agreement will cover all points between the two Governments, but apart from the definite allocation of a minimum of 50 per cent. of railway traffic, it is understood that there are no new features of importance.

Women Form Military Companies.

There is a company of young women at Brunn, Moravia, who evidently believe that they will some day be called upon to defend their country, for they parade every Sunday in a dashing uniform and carry rifles. Their marksmanship and soldierly bearing have won the admiration of the citizens, says an Austrian paper, and the officers of the Amazon organization say: "We feel proud of our men." In Servia women have also formed military organizations, but these are not only for target practice and exhibition drills, but for home defence. A picture recently received in this country shows a non-commissioned officer drilling a squad of women, composed of housemaids, shopgirls and factory employes. They stand at attention, the firearms in strange contrast with skirts, aprons and plumed hats.

The Climate of Arabia.

Of Arabia's climate a writer says: "The desert air is extremely dry and clear, always invigorating, and even the great heat in summer is not as insupportable as in a damper climate where the thermometer is probably lower. Climate has without doubt a great effect on the human character and intellect, and the nervous, high-strung temperament of the Arab is to a great extent the creation of his environment of desert, with its splendid mirages to fire the imagination and sparkling air to keep the nerves always alert."

JUDGING A CIGAR.

The Only Real Way to Find Its Quality Is to Smoke It.

On no point is the average smoker so ill informed as that of judging a cigar. Nine times out of ten, upon being handed a cigar, he will hold it to his nose, unlighted, sniff at the wrapper with a critical air and deliver his verdict in a self satisfied manner. This characteristic maneuver is always a source of amusement to any tobacco man who happens to observe it. There is only one way to ascertain the quality of a cigar, and that is to smoke it. No expert will pass judgment on a cigar until he has lighted it and smoked it well down toward the middle. The first and most important point upon which he bases his opinion is the "burn." Tobacco may have every other virtue, but if it does not hold the fire and burn evenly it is poor tobacco. Next in order of importance comes the aroma—the smoke must have a pleasing "smell;" next comes the flavor—the smoke must be smooth and not "scratchy" or bitter. Then there is the color—rich brown, indicating a ripe leaf, well cured—and last is workmanship—good if the wrapper is put on smoothly and the "bunch" is made so that the cigar "draws" freely and is neither too hard nor too spongy, bad if the reverse.—Bohemian Magazine.

ROMANCE OF HISTORY.

These Things Read Like Legends, but Are Matters of Fact.

A peasant girl called half witted did promise to defeat the victors of Agincourt and did it; it ought to be a legend, but it happens to be a fact. A poet and a posters did fall in love and eloped secretly to a sunny clime; it is obviously a three volume novel, but it happened. Nelson did die in the act of winning the one battle that could change the world; it is a grossly improbable coincidence, but it is too late to alter it now. Napoleon did win the battle of Austerlitz; it is unnatural, but it is not my fault. When the general who had surrendered a republican town returned, saying easily, "I have done everything." Robespierre did ask, with an air of inquiry, "Are you dead?" When Robespierre coughed in his cold harangue Garnier did say, "The blood of Danton chokes you." Strafford did say of his own desertion of parliament, "If I do it may my life and death be set on a hill for all men to wonder at." Disraeli did say, "The time will come when you shall hear me."

The heroic is a fact, even when it is a fact of coincidence or of miracle, and a fact is a thing which can be admitted without being explained.—G. K. Chesterton in London News.

No Drums in the Middle Ages.

As we come to the middle ages, when the nations of modern Europe were struggling into existence, we find that at first the drum was not used at all. So, although melody had been known and practiced for many centuries, rhythm had been quite forgotten, for what there is left to us of the music of the middle ages consists of no bars, and we know that it was played slowly and monotonously chanted, without the least accent.

In the eleventh century, however, things began to improve, more particularly as the crusaders brought into Europe all sorts of percussion instruments from the east. Various kinds of drums, tambourines and cymbals were then seen in Europe for the first time since the days of savagery, and they have been used, with very little change, ever since.—St. Nicholas.

An Epistolary Hint.

In the letter from Boston was a special delivery stamp.

"What did she send that for?" the woman wondered. "The information she wants can be sent in an ordinary letter. It won't need to be sent special."

"That stamp," said the man, "is a delicate hint to be quick about answering. It is a berry up device used by many men. It is very effective. A two cent stamp does not always spur one on to any special effort, but a special delivery stamp means that the writer wants what he wants when he wants it, and the most dilatory correspondent alive is not going to let any grass grow between the scratches of his pen when answering."

Mouth Rays.

"There are X rays and X rays, and there are also rays from those mantle things that you put on gas burners to improve the light." The speaker, a photographer, pointed to a batch of fogged plates. "I know to my cost that there are 'mantle rays,'" said he. "For a month I stored new plates in a closet along with a mantle, and all of them got fogged. The mantle, you see, contained thorium, a radio-active substance that penetrates cardboard plate box as easily as it penetrates glass. I didn't know that till my doctor told me last week. My ignorance cost me over a hundred plates."

Stunted.

Editor—Is this your first effort?

Budding Poet—Yes, sir. Is it worth anything to you?

Editor (with emotion)—It's worth a guinea if you will promise not to write anything more for publication until after this has been printed. I want your entire output, you understand.

Budding Poet—I promise that, all right. When will it be printed?

Editor—Never while I'm alive.—London Telegraph.

THE NURSE.

Self-Sacrifice Is an Obligation That She Cannot Escape.

A great many persons—in fact, it may be said, most persons—labor under the impression that after a few years of service nurses become hardened and have but little feeling for the sufferers under their care. That this is not so, says a writer, is borne out by the unselfish spirit in which nurses labor, unsparing of themselves, seeking solely to save the sick one. If there is one thing a professional nurse dislikes it is to lose a case. When a patient under their care dies they almost feel themselves responsible and it is sometimes days and weeks before they recover from the death. Sometimes they take the death harder than the relatives.

This suggests the assertion of some persons that the nurse becomes callous and loses human sympathy because of the scientific side of her calling. Quite the contrary is the rule. Constant association between the nurse and her patient is so intimate, so entirely personal, that the nurse becomes interested in the little side-lights she obtains of the life that has been intrusted to her by the physician. Often the mind and the very soul of the patient is opened to her study. The very gratitude that the sick express cannot fail to touch the heart of the nurse, and it will be remembered that she is human, and a woman at that.

The ethics of her profession, which make duty the beacon light and humanity its principle, bring with them self-sacrifice as an obligation that she cannot escape. There may be nurses who shirk their duty and do not realise the greatness of their calling, but observation recounts these makeshifts as few in a profession that has shone gloriously on the battlefield with its stern demands upon the delicate yet almost superhuman strength of woman. A true nurse in times of peace has all of the character and devotion of a Florence Nightingale. She is a Joan of Arc, without reproach. If the battle with death is lost, how often her kindly fingers smooth the last spasm of the dying moments and at last lay the palm upon the marvelous lids as the spirit takes its flight.

A Real Staff of Life.

It is more than a coincidence that the tree which furnishes a greater amount of available material to man than any other in the vast kingdom of vegetables is the first to spring up on the bare rocks of the newly-arisen coral reefs. The cocoanut, so formed that it may have floated across the Pacific, is thus universally distributed throughout tropical islands.

It thrives best near the sea, seldom penetrating far into the interior. Its hard shell is a coat of mail for the embryo plants, says The New Age, enabling it to stand hard usage for a protracted period and locking up securely the precious life in miniature.

The fibrous husk which envelops it, and is seldom seen in the market on account of the greatly-increased bulk, beats the jar which would be inevitable should the hard nut fall unprotected from the tall tree to the ground 60 or 80 feet below.

Such a blow would scarcely fail to break the shell, occasioning the loss of the nourishing milk so necessary to the germ. The outer husk not only breaks the jar of a fall but buoys it up on the water, while the tough outer cuticle is waterproof.

Thus is the tree which offers to man almost in the raw state all his necessities freely scattered where the warm seas and their borders offer a footing; and from it the humble native secures sugar, milk, butter, wine, vinegar, oil, candles, soap, cups, ladles, cordage, matting, thatch for roof and material for raiment — combining food, clothing, and shelter in a single gift, continually making waste places habitable.

Breakfast a Characteristic Meal.

It is not only in Scotland that breakfast is the characteristic national meal. Travel where you may, the first meal of the day is the one that strikes the foreign note, luncheon and dinner having gradually absorbed cosmopolitan qualities that are not even confined to hotels. But you never feel so much of an Englishman as when Switzerland gives you rolls and butter and honey, and nothing more, with your coffee; or when France makes this into one exquisite crumbling "croissant," with an inch or two from a yard long loaf, or when Denmark adds cream instead of milk to the coffee and a dangerous piece of pastry to the black bread and round white roll.

Yet our English breakfast became an institution only in the 19th century. Before that only royalty breakfasted off meat, bread and cheese and ale. The commoner took merely a morning draught of buttered ale.

Julia's Orange Grove.

The world-renowned orange gardens of Jaffa—the Joppa of the Bible—present in the fruiting season an enchanting sight. Surrounded by an impenetrable hedge of thorny cactus, which during their blossoming time must be a gorgeous display of intense and vivid scarlet and green, as far as the eye can reach, the great trees, as large as oaks, extend in long, shady avenues, each one of these lofty, wide-spreading trees loaded with a wild profusion of rich ovoid fruit, almost as large as small footballs, reminding one of the fabled forest whose trees bore a harvest of solid gold, while the few flowers still left perfume the air with their fragrant aroma.

How Long a Tree Lives.

Inquiry as to the general age of trees being put to an authority of the forestry service at Washington, it was said that the pine tree attained 700 years as a maximum length of life. Four hundred and twenty-five years was the allotted span of the silver fir. The larch lived 275 years, the red beech 265, the aspen 210, the birch 200, the ash 170, the alder 145 and the elm 120. The heart of the oak begins to rot at about the age of 300 years. Of the holly it is said that there is a specimen 410 years old near Aschaffenburg, Germany.

Goes to Edmonton

Harry Burridge, the popular local boy, leaves on Saturday afternoon at 4.40 C.P.R. for Edmonton and will turn out with the aspirants for the position of catcher on the Edmonton nine.

Burridge will have to beat out McGuire and Nye of St. Mary's for the place behind the bat and should make good without trouble, judging his form on the magnificent work he did in Youngstown, Ohio, last year where he was regarded as one of the finest receivers and the equal of any catcher that ever figured in the league.

The contract calls for a larger salary than the one he received in Youngstown last year.

In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Another Room Open

Owing to the crowded condition of the senior classes in the Ashburnham, King Edward, and Queen Alexandra schools, it has been found necessary to open a new class room in the old Collegiate. In the Ashburnham alone, there were over sixty pupils and if the scholars are to be properly taught, there should not be more than thirty-five under one teacher. Similar conditions prevailed at other schools and yesterday morning and number of pupils from each was sent to the new class at the old Collegiate. Inspector Hewat found the above change a necessity in order to relieve the situation.

Possum Games

The Y.M.C.A. Track and Field Club will make a strong bid to bring the Possum championship games to Peterborough this summer. They were held in Hamilton last summer, and it is felt that Peterborough has a good chance of getting them this year. The trophy for the games was donated by Mr. John Possum of Paris, Ont., and the competition is for representatives of Canadian Y.M.C.A.'s. The trophy is at present held by the West End Y.M.C.A., of Toronto.

It would be a big thing for Peterborough, to secure the games, and a strong effort will be made to secure them.

Zam-Buk Cured Her Baby

Mothers will find the following statement of more than passing interest, showing, as it does, how Zam-Buk ends the skin-diseases of children, even when ordinary remedies have completely failed. Mrs. C. W. Bowerbank, of 168 Denison Ave., Toronto, says:—

"Not long ago my baby's face broke out in an eruption. The spots would crack and be very irritating and sore. At other times they itched fearfully, and caused the child to scratch and rub, thus making the sores very inflamed and painful. I tried all sorts of ointments and salves, but they somehow did not seem able to remove the trouble. Zam-Buk proved very different, and a few applications gave the child relief. The sores are now healed completely.

"Since that time my little daughter has had occasion to use Zam-Buk for skin trouble. She broke out in blotches on her hands and arms, and in her case also Zam-Buk effected a cure.

"We now keep Zam-Buk handy as a household balm, and do not intend to be without it.

"Not only for skin diseases, but for cuts, burns and bruises, it is a fine remedy. The other day I burned my hand badly. An application of Zam-Buk seemed to take the fire out of it at once, and it soon healed. In the course of my experience I have tried pretty nearly all the salves and ointments obtainable, but there is nothing to come near Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm, being composed of pure herbal essences. It is a sure cure for pimples and eruptions, eczema, ringworm, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, poisoned sores, chronic wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and Stores everywhere sell at 50c. a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against cheap and harmful imitations sometimes represented to be "just as good."

that every member will have an opportunity to assist.

R. LEES.

Mr. Richard Lees was the main speaker of the evening. In opening he congratulated the ladies upon the spread they provided. He was glad to see so many young men of the congregation present as it is upon them that the burden will fall to carry the movement in the future. The dominating note of the conference was that a church not a missionary church was not a church at all. This movement is the greatest chapter in the history of the world's church. The conference in Toronto was the greatest gathering since the Day of Pentecost. The missionary movement is one of the first features of the churches' work. Missions are now occupying the minds of business men in Canada, and it is being handled by business men in a business-like way.

The purpose of the missionary movement is to give every man, woman and child in the world the opportunity to hear the Gospel within the present generation. It is estimated that one missionary can take the Gospel to 25,000 people, and it will require 27,000 missionaries. There has been assigned to Canada 40,000,000 people and it will require this country to raise annually $3,200,000. Canada is also receiving many thousands of foreigners who are not christians and there is a big home mission field. In the United States the home missions were not looked after and today there are over 400 towns and villages in that country where the Gospel is not known.

The Presbyterian Church is the pioneer home missionary church in Canada and a great work has been done here.

This is the first generation since the beginning that it was possible to evangelize the whole world in one generation. There is a great awakening in the eastern countries and every year thousands of people are coming to the western world to learn western civilization.

The city of Peterborough was pledged at a meeting in the George street Methodist church to give $6 per church member. This is a little better than the estimated amount of $5 per member.

There are in St. Andrew's over 500 members of the congregation so that over $3,000 per year may be raised. It was suggested that a canvas be made by committee and these members should be asked to use the duplex envelope, both sides of it. They do not ask for a pledge of any stated amount merely that the envelope be used every Sunday.

[illegible] the following committee [illegible] appointed with power to [illegible] their numbers to make a canvass [illegible] church members;—W. Laughton, Glover, Wm. Campbell, [illegible], Richardson.

Rev. [illegible] Porter pronounced the benediction.

Will Abolish Ugly Trousers.

It has long been admitted by artists that trousers are excessively ugly. Perhaps a New Yorker who heads a movement against the wearing of this distinctively male garment. Many attempts have been made to [illegible] other garments to take their place, but the conservatism of the male sex has opposed all changes as far as the city wear is concerned. Trousers stand condemned on many points. From a health point of view they are bad, because they harbor dirt and in wet weather are [illegible] trailing skirts. From an artistic point of view trousers have appeared with elephants' legs, and as a result we have sacrificed the shapely beauty of the lower limb which was such an attraction to the [illegible] sex in the Elizabethan days. We do not wear trousers when we ride, shoot, fish, or take exercise in the field. From a fighting standpoint, therefore, trousers are to be abandoned. This was proven in the case of soldiers in the Boer War. Men who were kilts or knickerbockers and puttees were able to march long distances with a minimum of fatigue. They could not have accomplished what they did had their lower limbs been encased in trousers. Trousers were introduced by the French after the revolution, with a view to sweeping away all privileges and demonstrating the equality of man. It would have been far better if they had made knee breeches universal as a distinguishing garment."

Russia in Review.

Lord Selborne recently held a review of 20,000 Russian horsemen at Maseru, Basutoland, South Africa. The scene was striking in the extreme. Addressing a pitso subsequently Lord Selborne said that Russia and ultimately could not remain outside the Union. The Russians would not feel the change of administration, the principal object of which would be to secure the country for the Russian, making the National Convention drink cocoa. His excellency said that [illegible] all, and take [illegible] precautions against the drink cocoa. His excellency said that he was confident that the Union Government would realize its responsibilities towards whites and blacks, and would rule the natives wisely and sympathetically. He believed that there was room between whites and blacks were things of the past. Letsie, the paramount chief, will confer with the chiefs and people on the subject of entering the Union.

An Impossible Combination.

They were talking of the strange sights to be seen in a great city, and one man paid a tribute to New York. "I don't believe one of you could think of any combination of circumstances that hasn't at some time occurred there," he said.

"I reckon I have of one that's never occurred there," said Hiram Fowle.

"What's that?" asked the other.

"I guess," said Hiram slowly, "that you've never seen nor ever will see a brass band going in one direction an' the hoft of the folks going the other."

Lease of Water Powers

Province of Quebec.

Notice is hereby given that the lease of the two groups of water-powers below mentioned, will be offered at public auction in the sales' room of the department of Lands and Forests, in this city, on Tuesday, the 11th May next, at 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon.

The lease will be for seventy-five years on the terms below stipulated and on such other conditions as will be made known to the public on the day of the auction.

1. The "Kai-Kai-Ke" group (River des Quinze).

Description; —The water-powers created by the Kai-Kai-Ke rapid and the other rapids and falls situated above it as far as Lake des Quinze, in the county of Pontiac, at about 12 miles from the Indian Village of North Temiscamingue to which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains, at Temiscamingue second; also four hundred acres of land in the vicinity of the said rapid and of the Kai-Kai-Ke portage, from the head of the said rapid to a line drawn across the river des Quinze, at nine hundred feet above the entry of the channel called "Bryson Creek," together with all the lands that may be flooded in consequence of the construction of the dams intended to submerge the rapids above that of Kai-Kai-Ke and to make des Quinze exclusively, without such dams causing any portion whatever of the waters of River des Quinze to overflow into some other stream.

Total head, 98 feet; available power at low water, 32,000 horse-power, without warranty of exact measurement.

The lease shall be obliged to expend a sum of $250,000 on the development of the said water-powers within the three years following the passing of the lease, in default whereof the lease shall be cancelled and the payments made confiscated.

2. "Inland Rapids," group (River des Quinze).

Description; — The water-powers formed by the rapids known under the name of "Big Pipe Stone," "Little Pipe Stone" and "Islands Rapids," in the same county, at about eight miles from North Temiscamingue, to which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains of Temiscamingue second, including: 1. The land and the water-powers of the River des Quinze, properly so called from a line drawn across that river at nine hundred feet above the entry or head of "Bryson Creek," to the prolongation across the said river of the division line of ranges 7 and 8 of the township of Guigues; 2. The land and the water powers of "Bryson Creek," channel or arm of the said river; 3. The large island between the river des Quinze, properly so called and the said "Bryson Creek," as well as all the islands and fore shores and all the inlets and rocks in the said river and said "Bryson Creek," between the two lines above described; 4. A strip of land of 10 chains (660 feet) in width or depth (measured in a due north and south direction) along northern bank of the river des Quinze and of "Bryson Creek" and extending between the two lines above described; 5. Lastly, a strip of land also of 10 chains in width or depth, along the southern bank of the river des Quinze, between the two said lines drawn transversely to the river.

All those lands, bed of the river des Quinze, bed of Bryson Creek, islands, etc., covering a superficies of about 2000 acres.

The difference of level in the river des Quinze between the two lines above described is 98 feet in round numbers representing at low water, an absolute power of 32,000 horse-power, the whole without warranty of exact measurement.

The lessee shall be obliged to expend $300,000 on the development and working of these hydraulic powers within a delay of three years from the date of the passing of the lease under pain of resiliation of the lease and the confiscation of any payment made in the said delay.

The government binds itself to not sell for ten years from this any lands on the banks of the river des Quinze on a width or depth of at least fifteen chains (990 feet) beyond the lands above designated, from the foot of the rapids called "Inland Rapids" to Lake des Quinze exclusively, so that the lessee may, at all points of the bank have free access to the river and that he may choose within that area the lands necessary for the full working of the said water-powers, which lands, whose superficies—including that of the lands mentioned in the above descriptions—shall not exceed 2000 acres for the "Inland Rapids" group, and 2000 acres for the "Kai-Kai-Ke" group, shall also form part of the property leased.

The upset price shall be fixed on the day of the auction and each person desirous of becoming a bidder, must deposit at the Department of Lands and Forests before the sale, an accepted cheque for $12,500 which will be returned to him after the sale, unless he be the person to whom the property will be adjudged; to this person the said sum of $12,500 will be refunded when he shall have given proof or complete compliance with the conditions prescribed as to the development of the said water powers, which compliance must be effected within the six months following the date of the lease.

Minister.

REFUSES TO PAY ANY DAMAGES

So Legal Committee Decided Last Night—Many Accidents and Floods Due to Changes in the Weather—People Look to City for Recompense—City is Not Liable—The Kennedy Claim is Not Settled.

The second budget of claims for damages against the city was dealt with by the Legal Committee last night. So far this year the council has been besieged with people looking for recompense for accidents on the streets, cellars flooded, etc., etc. The vast majority of the claims were caused by the sudden changes in the weather in causing ice to form on the sidewalks and crossings and also causing drains to overflow and streets to become blocked with ice and the banks overflow. Such conditions the city cannot avoid and the solicitor reported against all the claims. His advice was followed in each case except that of Mr. Kennedy. His case seems to have aroused considerable sympathy and the committee decided to leave it over until the full committee was present.

Those present were;— Chairman Ald. Turner, Aldermen McIntyre, Duffus and Metheral.

The first matter taken up was the claim from Mr. Alex. Kennedy who met with a serious accident a year or more ago at the corner of Hunter and Chambers streets. Mr. Kennedy was present and was heard. He said he was going west on Hunter street and slipped on the crossing at Chamber street about three yards from the Review office. He was in company with his daughter and he also had his cane with him. The crossing was icy and snowy. He fell and broke his thigh. He was off duty for over six months and during that time he had to pay out in actual cash some $97.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin was also present and he was asked to give the committee some information as to the condition of the street or sidewalk. Mr. Dobbin said it was a bright sunny day and water was running off the building. His man had cleaned off his walk to the crossing and the snow and ice on the crossing caused a graded drop of several inches. A man coming from the west slipped at the same place and bumped against the lady on his right who bumped against Mr. Kennedy giving him a start and caused him slip down. Mr. Dobbin did not, however, consider the place a dangerous one and did not think Mr. Kennedy would have fallen had been alone.

MR. MATHISON.

Mr. Mathison was called as a witness. He said he was only a few yards away and saw Mr. Kennedy fall. He thought the crossing was in a dangerous condition. Mr. Kennedy's feet and cane seemed to go from under him at the same time.

In giving the evidence up the chairman stated that he could not see that the city was in anyway liable. The case has excited a good deal of sympathy, but he could not see that the city should pay any damages.

Ald. Metheral stated he thought Mr. Kennedy was entitled to some consideration.

On motion of Ald. Duffus and Metheral, the matter was left over until the full committee could be present.

EVAN'S CLAIM.

Mr. David Evans said he fell on the sidewalk and hurt his head and was otherwise injured, and he wanted damages.

The city engineer and street commissioner examined the place. There was some ice on the north side of London street, but not enough to make it dangerous for pedestrians.

The city solicitor reported that in his opinion the city was not liable in this case.

On motion of Aldermen Metheral and McIntyre, no action was taken on the advice of the city solicitor.

DR. JAS. GALVIN.

The next claim taken up was that of Dr. Jas. Galvin, whose property was flooded along with his cellar, with surface water. Dr. Galvin's property at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets.

The street commissioner stated that as soon as he noticed that the catch basin was not taking the water he took immediate steps to have the basin open, but in the meantime the water had flown into the doctor's cellar. The doctor's property is a foot lower than the street.

The city solicitor reported that the city's liability rested upon the judge's interpretation of the law.

Ald. Metheral thought the doctor was entitled to damages as he had certainly suffered them.

Ald McIntyre suggested that the matter be referred back to the solicitor to advise the committee upon what action to take. The solicitor was called upon through the phone and he stated that he would be inclined to contest the claim which was $50.0

On motion it was decided to take no action on the claim.

ED. CONROY.

Ed. Conroy claimed damage for an accident to his automobile. His claim was for $6.

The engineer reported that it was the street railway company had caused the trench to be dug and the company should be held liable.

The solicitor said the city was not liable and on motion no action was taken.

MARY SULLIVAN.

Mary Sullivan claimed $30 for damages caused to her property at 96 Murray street, owing to an ice jam forming in the creek.

The jam was caused by a sudden thaw. The street commissioner released the ice as soon as possible. The G.T.R. constructed the Bethune street bridge and the city is not liable for the jam there.

The city solicitor advised that the city was not liable.

Upon motion no action was taken upon the advice of the solicitor.

ROBERTS' CLAIM.

Mr. W. J. Roberts notified the council that his infant son, Maxwell, was drowned on Monday, February 20, by falling into the creek on Murray street. He also notified the council that an action for damage would be entered.

The city engineer reported on the accident showing that the drowning was due to the children playing on the ice and on the creek bank, and that it was not due to any want of repair on the part of the city.

The city solicitor reported that on the evidence the city was not liable.

The committee all personally regretted the bad accident, but as the children were playing on the ice the city could not be held liable for any damages.

On motion it was decided to take no action.

Engineer Preparing Plans for New Dam

The Water Commissioners are going ahead as rapidly as possible in connection with the new dam. There is so much preliminary work, however, that operations will not be commenced on the dam till the end of July or the first of August. Mr. Kennedy, the engineer, was here a few days ago and is now preparing plans and specifications for the dam. This involves a large amount of work, and it will be several weeks before tenders will be called for.

Milk War Being Waged

Milk is selling in Peterborough at five and six cents per quart. Some new-comers in the field have cut the price to five cents, but the others have not followed suit.

"I am going to sell at six cents per quart during the summer," said a milkman yesterday. "There is no money in supplying it at five cents, and those who are doing so will not last."

There is somewhat of a minature war going on between the dealers at the present time, and the outcome will be watched with interest by the householders.

The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission

This commission the annual report of which for 1908, is just to hand, was created by Mr. Carnegie in 1904 for the purpose not only of rewarding brave men and women, but for providing for those dependent upon them in case of death or injury. The amount of the fund is five million dollars of first collateral, five per cent. bonds of the U.S. Steel Corporation. Heroes and heroines can not continue in receipt of any reward unless they conduct themselves properly. The field of operation embraced by the fund in United States, Canada and Newfoundland. Care is to be taken not to "deaden" public generosity.

MRS. KINRADE AND FLORENCE WERE ABSENT

Did Not Appear when Their Names were Called at the Inquest—Only Two Witnesses Gave Evidence—Inquest Adjourned Until This Evening When Sensational Developments are Looked For

Hamilton, April 22.—The inquest into the murder of Ethel Kinrade was resumed here tonight after an adjournment of one month but there was nothing new developed. The greatest surprise was the non-appearance of Mrs. T. L. Kinrade and Miss Florence Kinrade, when their names were called. Only two witnesses were heard, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Ernest Kinrade, and the inquest was adjourned until Friday night.

The inquest was opened at 7.45 o'clock. Mrs. Taylor was the first witness called. She was examined by County Crown Attorney Washington. Mrs. Taylor lives at 166 Markland avenue. She was at home on the afternoon of the shooting, and about four o'clock saw a man dressed in ragged clothes, bearing the appearance of a tramp, come into her yard and walk rapidly to the rear. He stayed there about twenty-five minutes, and then went out to the street. He rapped at the back door but witness was afraid to to to the door. There was nothing suspicious about the man.

MRS. E. KINRADE.

Mrs. Ernest Kinrade, wife of T. L. Kinrade's son, was called and was examined by Mr. Blackstock. She said she had always lived in one of Mr. Kinrade's houses since she was married some seven years ago, but that no rent was ever paid. Witness told about Florence and Ethel being at her house for tea the night before. They were very affectionate and the family had always been affectionate, she considered. Witness said she knew Florence had been on the singing tour in Ontario, and knew of her going to Richmond where witness was always under the impression she sang in a chorus. She did not know Florence was on the stage until Christmas. She had heard of Miss Elliott, but had never seen her and did not thank any member of the family knew her. Witness had often written to Florence but did not think she had saved any of the replies. If she has she will produce them. She had heard of Miss Florence Kinrade being engaged to Mr. Wright.

On the afternoon of the murder witness left home about two o'clock. She saw her husband just before that. She did not hear of the tragedy until about five o'clock when she was at her aunt's.

This concluded the evidence and the inquest was adjourned until Friday night.

Admiralty Court will be Held on Wednesday Before Judge Hodgins

A very interesting case is to be heard here on Wednesday next in the Admiralty Court. The case is interesting inasmuch that it is seldom a sitting of the Admiralty Court is held here and as the action is against the steamer instead of the company. The Admiralty Court is a division of the Exchequer Court and Judge Hodgins of Toronto, who is the judge of the Toronto division, will preside.

The case is that of P. P. Young vs. the steamer Otonabee, the property of the Otonabee Navigation Company. It will be remembered that last year the Otonabee collided with one of Mr. Young's scows, doing some damages.

The act governing actions against navigation companies provides that in cases of collision, action may be taken against the boat itself rather than the company, and if the plaintiff gets judgment he can seize the defendant boat until the judgment is settled. This enables an action to be tried without delay, whereas if the action had to be taken against the company it might mean a chase around the world for the offending boat, in case an ocean liner was involved. This course is usually taken against the ocean going boats or boats travelling the great lakes. It is not often, however, that such an action is taken against a local company. The result will be watched with interest.

The Grand March and Band Concert

There was a good crowd at the Auditorium Roller Rink last night to see the performance of the El Rey Sisters. These two young girls have become popular with the lovers of roller skating, and their act last night was greatly appreciated. This evening there will be the special band concert, and at nine o'clock the El Rey Sisters will lead the grand march, after which they will put on their regular program. This is a treat that none should miss.

Woman was Swept Over Niagara Falls

Buffalo, N.Y., April 22.—A woman was swept over Lana Falls at Niagara Falls, N.Y., today. She was Mrs. Katherin A. Whipple, aged 50, a widow, who lived at 975 West Utica street, this city. Her sister, Mrs. Mary Lennon, living here, thinks she committed suicide, as the woman has been despondent ever since her husband was killed in an accident two years ago.

12,000 People Witnessed Toronto Defeat Newark in the Opening Game

(Special to The Times.)

Newark, April 22.—The Eastern League opening here today was favored by fine, bright, sunny weather, though there was some talk of a postponement owing to the heavy conditions of the grounds, due to the heavy rain last night. However, after looking over the park at 11 o'clock, Manager Wolverton of Newark, decided that the grounds would be all right, and the opening proceeded with according to program.

In addition to the warm sun, a high wind sprung up about noon which helped to dry up the muddy field quickly.

Manager Kelley and the Toronto team left the Continental Hotel at noon for the grounds in a big automobile. After dressing, they returned down town in time to participate in the big parade which had been arranged.

President McCaffery, Lol Solman, and R. A. Smith were prominent figures in the parade. Messrs. Solman and Smith arrived from Toronto this morning.

The Toronto and Newark players fraternized last night, and today Larry Schultz and Jake Gettman are looking fine, and the critics here say they are playing fine ball, the former especially.

The game resulted in favor of Toronto by a score of 2—0.

Reynolds was Fined $5 for Trespass and was Charged with Perjury

The police court case resulting out of a fracas at the fire hall on Saturday evening, April 3rd, was heard yesterday before Magistrate Deamble. The public will remember that Frank Reynolds, an ex-member of the fire department, went to the hall on the night of the row, and behaved in a manner not becoming a gentleman. He was forcibly placed upon the pavement, but before he reached the outside of the hall he received several blows about the head and face.

Chief Howard did the job, and he also laid a charge of trespassing against Reynolds, and the latter laid a counter charge of assault against the chief.

The police court case occupied the magistrate's attention for about three hours, several witnesses were heard when it was shown that Reynolds had been warned by letter to keep away from the fire hall and that he refused to do so. The evidence also showed that Reynolds did not conduct himself as he should have. The magistrate fined him $5 and costs amounting to $7.60.

ASSAULT CASE.

Following the trespass case the result charge against the chief was taken up, but as the plaintiff had not behaved himself the magistrate said the chief had the right to use force in putting him out and dismissed the case.

PERJURY CHARGE.

A charge of perjury was preferred against Frank Reynolds at the police court yesterday morning at the conclusion of the cases in which Chief Howard and he figured. Reynolds swore that the fire chief used insulting and abusive language towards him while two firemen who were present at the time denied that any such language was mentioned.

When court resumed yesterday afternoon Mr. R. F. McWilliams, counsel for the defence, said that the charge was altogether unsalled for. There were numerous cases where the evidence of one man was contradicted by two or three others, and no charge of perjury was laid.

The magistrate said the charge was laid by Crown Attorney Wood and would have to go on. Mr. McWilliams, on behalf of his client, did not elect new plead.

The case will come up for the preliminary hearing on Monday morning.

MacGregor Properties

The announcement of the MacGregor Mines Syndicate is attracting much attention from investors who have been waiting for an opportunity to get in on the ground floor in the wonderful Gowganda silver field. It is not often that the investor of small means has the opportunity to get in on the actual purchase of properties as splendidly located as are the properties of the MacGregor Mines Syndicate, as well as an opportunity of receiving the profits that usually go to promoters. Altogether it would seem to be a proposition that should commend itself to thinking men.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this Liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents, large size 50 cents.

Mrs. Heslip Lectured Before Large Audience

Mrs. Heslip the Dominion organizer for the W.C.T.U., addressed a large gathering in St. Andrew's Guild hall last night. Mrs. Heslip is a native of Scotland, and in speaking she has a broad accent. She is a very forceful and most interesting speaker. Mrs. Heslip dealt particularly with the question as raised by Paul in his first epistle to the Corinthians, and the first chapter showing how one person's freedom might be a stumbling block to another. She dealt fully with the large contribution Canada made annually to the liquor traffic. The victims included many of the brightest men from all the walks of life, and every fifth or birth family in the country contributed at least one boy to the bar room. She quoted the words of Winnipeg's chief magistrate, who said that liquor was the cause directly or indirectly of a great many cases that came before him. She dealt with the great progress that has been made during the past century, describing and illustrating the change of sentiment in the individual as well as the corporate life. Alcohol stood condemned by medical science as well as the spiritual science. It is a narcotic instead of a stimulant. Any progressive country was uncompromisingly hostile to the traffic as it was a hindrance to progress and in speaking of the blind pig argument she said that one pig with its eyes open could do more than ten blind pigs.

Mrs. Heslip also gave a warm description of the origin of the W.C.T.U., and of the progress it had made.

A motion of appreciation was moved by Mr. A. B. Cunningham, and Mr. Downie and Miss Bingham rendered appropriate solos.

Mrs. Heslip leaves this evening for Lindsay.

The Montreal Board of Trade refused the invitation of the Detroit Board to the conference on better trade relations, saying the matter had no interest for them.

The Pope Opposes the Suffragette

New York, April 22.—Cable advices from Rome last night to the effect that the Pope, in addressing the Union of Italian Catholic Women, had pronounced himself vigorously opposed to the entry of women in politics, have already prompted considerable comment from Catholic churchmen and suffragists here.

That the Pope's views will have great weight among the Catholic women, and act as a check upon the spread of the suffrage movement among them, was the opinion of a local Catholic editor, Father Wynne, of the Messenger.

Mrs. Gilbert Jones, chairman of the Executive Committee of the League for the Civic Education of Women, a leading anti-suffragist, said; "I am not a Catholic, but have great reverence for the Pope, and would respect greatly whatever he says. It is a message from a great authority, and as such should have its weight. I think it will produce a marked effect on many Catholic women, and will render a pronounced check to the women's suffrage movement. Although not a command, it will have the same result on the many noble Catholics in the country."

Miss Mary G. Hay, a prominent advocate of woman's suffrage, said that in her opinion the declaration of the Pope would in no way affect legislation in this country.

Miss Edith Miller & Co. Gave Splendid Concert

It is seldom that Peterborough people have the privilege of hearing so talented a company of artists as Miss Edith Miller and her concert company who appeared at the Conservatory of Music Hall last night. Yet the audience was not what might have been expected and it was indeed discouraging to those who was responsible for bringing the musicians here. The program was of the highest order and Miss Miller made a deep impression upon the audience, while every member of the company was warmly received. The Conservatory of Music management is to be congratulated upon securing such clever talent, and those who do not avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing them are the greatest losers. The program was a splendid one.

NO INSULT TO FLAG.

London, April 17.—At Christchurch, New Zealand, yesterday the Navy League meeting was attended by 5,000 persons. A number of extremists and Socialists refused to allow the speakers to be heard, but the overwhelming majority of those present were in favor of the government action in offering a Dreadnought to the Mother Country.

A few extremists tore down the Union Jack, but have since stated that it was done in a moment of excitement. No insult to the flag was intended.

The French Mission at Ekbaz is besieged by fanatical Moslems.

The Armenian village of Deurtyul is surrounded and according to a messenger who crawled through the Arab lines at night, and made his way here for help, the situation there is hopeless. The buildings on the edge of the town already were in flames when he escaped.

The massacres are being carried out with the greatest violence. Neither women nor children are spared. The motto of the Moslems "no living of the accursed race shall be suffered to live."

The Armenians recognizing that the massacres have been organized and carried on by adherents of the old Turkish regime, are looking to the young Turks for future protection.

GRAVEYARD COUGHS AND COLDS

Cured Quickly by Catarrhozone.

A cough or cold this season of the year paves the way for pneumonia or consumption. The best remedy is "Catarrhozone". It eases a cough in five minutes, and colds cannot exist but a few hours where it is used. Mrs. H.L. Chesworth, residing at Glendive, Montana, was worried by a "graveyard" cough. In the following letter she tells how Catarrhozone cured her in one week:

"I had a bad cough for several months that fell that settled on my lungs. I was worried very much to think that nothing I used could shake it off, but reading in the Halifax 'Presbyterian Witness' of the wonderful cures Catarrhozone was effecting, I decided to try it. The irritability and soreness were taken out of my throat in a few days, and in less than one week it entirely cured my cough.

"It is with great gratitude and pleasure that I recommend Catarrhozone. I am sure it will benefit and cure all who use it."

(Signed) Mrs. H. L. Chesworth.

The reason Catarrhozone always cures is that it goes right to the sore spot, which it heals and makes well quickly. It is antiseptic and destroys disease germs in every part of the system. For Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis, nothing compares with Catarrhozone. It is very pleasant and simple to use, contains no injurious drugs, and is warranted perfectly safe to use. Catarrhozone inhaler is sufficient to use in a street car, theatre, church, any place, at any time. Complete outfit costs but $1.00 and is guaranteed to cure or your money back. Trial size 25c., sold by druggists, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A UNITED VOICE

There are some who say that the opposition to sending cash contributions to the British navy is due to French-Canadian influence. If so, we are confronted with the remarkable fact that French-Canadian opinion is in agreement with the opinion of some of the most ardent Imperialists. Lord Milner, in his address delivered before the Canadian Club of Toronto last autumn, said he had never been a great advocate of cash contributions to the Imperial army and navy. If, he said, the colonies were to contribute to the navy in money, or in men and ships, they would not take the necessary pride and interest in the matter. They would continue absorbed in their local affairs, and even if they felt their obligations to the Empire as a whole, they would rest content to have it discharged by such a contribution. "Its fatal weakness is that the participation of the self-governing states in Imperial affairs would begin and end with the contribution." The true line of progress, said Lord Milner, "is for the colonies to be brought face to face themselves, however gradually and however piecemeal, with the problem of the defence of the Empire, to undertake a bit of it, so to speak, for themselves, provided that whatever they do, be it much or little, is done for the Empire as a whole, not for themselves only, and is part of a general system.

The resolutions adopted by the House of Commons almost read as if they had been drafted by Lord Milner, so closely do they follow the lines of his Empire speech. But we suppose the truth is that they embody the conclusions to which anybody must come when he sits down and thinks the matter out. Here is what Mr. Foster said about fixed money contributions; "Suppose you contribute this year your sum, and next year your equal sum, and thereafter year after year, after ten or twelve or twenty or thirty years you will have paid out an immense amount of money. You will have been protected in the meantime, but in Canada itself there will be no seeds struck, there will be no residue left, there will be no preparations of the soil, or beginning of the growth of the product."

Surely it is a matter for congratulation, not for regret, that a policy can be approved which commends itself to the to the people of Quebec as well as to the rest of the Dominion. It would be a poor service to the Empire to sharpen and emphasize differences between race and Province in Canada. A united Canada is an essential part of a united Empire.

Apart from the Province of Quebec we have the Canadian West, which contains a large and growing element of people who are not British by descent. These people cannot be clubbed or coerced into sharing the enthusiasms of their fellow-citizens. The case must be presented to them upon grounds that appeal to every citizen of Canada, and it can be so presented. Every citizen of Canada wants to be in a self-respecting position—wants to feel that he is paying his way and discharging all the obligations of citizenship. Every citizen of Canada must recognize the great power that Great Britain throws on the side of freedom and free institutions. Without Great Britain Europe would be given over to despotism. The free countries would be overmatched by their despotic neighbors. The men who, living under despotism, are yet working and hoping for liberty would be thrust into the darkness of despair. The only hope of freedom would be on this continent.

PIERPONT AND THE LADY

A Frenchwoman met J. Pierpont Morgan in Rome and pronounced him a dull, stupid man. "I thought he was artistic," she says, "but he knows nothing about art. He only grunted when I told him about a beautiful picture in Rome which I know he had not seen. Then I tried politics, but he was equally dense. If that is what millions bring you to, I'm glad I'm poor."

But perhaps Mr. Morgan did not want to shine on that occasion. He should not have grunted, if it is true, when accosted by a French lady, but he has been approached so often in twenty years by persons who wanted to sell him famous pictures that he had never heard of that no doubt the grunt has become habitual. He is besought by so many persons who yearn to steer him up against princely expenditures that he is forced to defend himself with a grunt or a gun. Polite men may grow rich, but they can scarcely remain polite.

Morgan may not know much about art, but he has bought a lot of knowledge on the subject. He may be dense on the question of politics, but he is supposed to have bought some clever politicians in his day. He may be a dull man in Rome but he has been sharp enough in his dealings in New York and Washington. A man is not to be judged by the person who meets him casually. It may happen that he is tired and is not walking about, while his energies and capacities are softly dozing within him. He cannot be on edge all the time.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, belchings, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

MEDICAL COLLIERS.

How They Cure Blindness and Set Broken Limbs.

To Scotland belongs the peculiar distinction of having produced quite a number of men within the past few years who, without any medical training whatever, have effected cures which have baffled the skill of the cleverest physicians and surgeons of the day.

In our recent review of the reminiscences of Lady Priestley, whose husband, Sir William Overend Priestley, was one of the greatest doctors of modern times, mention was made of Haughy, a Highland peasant, who wrought such marvellous surgical cures that he became the most popular man in the whole countryside.

Haughy reminds one of William Rae, the Blantyre "Miracle Worker," who, five years ago, astounded the world with some wonderful feats of bloodless surgery, work in which Haughy excelled. As a boy Rae worked at the pit-head, but the mysteries of anatomy always had a great fascination for him. At fourteen years of age he exhibited a wonderful power over bones and joints, and practised amongst his acquaintances with extraordinary success. He ultimately rose to the position of colliery official, but the success and local fame which he gain through putting dislocated hips and other dislocations to rights brought him so many patients that he was forced to relinquish his ordinary occupation and devote himself entirely to surgery.

And such was his success that hundreds of patients clamored for treatment every day. His house became the Mecca of cripples, one of his most startling successes being the cure of a youth of nineteen who for two years lay a helpless invalid with a curved spine and humped back. He had been to many hospitals, each of which had failed to effect the cure which Rae brought about in half an hour.

Another wonderful Scottish bloodless surgeon is James Wallace, of Tayport, Fifeshire, known as the "Blacksmith Bone Doctor." Wallace has hundreds of cures standing to his credit, which are quite as remarkable as those performed by Rae. For the past forty years he has made use of his extraordinary knowledge of the bones in the human body by affording relief to the maimed, and although he is now a man of over seventy years of age he still continues to exercise his skill, his fingers having lost none of their cunning.

Consumption Must Go.

Dr. Latham, a noted London physician, gives the "white plague" a life of 30 or 40 years longer, at the end of which time, he says, tuberculosis will have disappeared as completely in civilized countries as have many fatal chapters.

How medical science has suppressed many deadly diseases is related in connection with this striking prediction of the end of consumption. Smallpox is the most striking example. Sixty years ago smallpox accounted for a large percentage of the deaths in England. Nowadays the deaths from smallpox are among the lowest in the mortality returns.

Cholera epidemics have for long been unknown in England, and no one need contract the disease if he observes certain simple precautions. Another terrible disease which medical science has rendered preventable is hydrophobia. If the preventive inoculations with the Pasteur serum are begun within a fortnight after the dog's bite, the disease practically never ensues.

Of diseases conquered by sanitary methods directed against the specific germs themselves, malaria and yellow fever are the most important. "Roman fever," formerly the curse of the marshy Campagna region of Italy, has also been stamped out by similar methods. A great scientific campaign is now being carried on in Central Africa against the mysterious "sleeping sickness," and promises to be ultimately successful.

The Powerful Eaglehawk.

Perhaps the deadliest foe of the Australian sheep farmer is the eaglehawk, and many and wonderful are the contrivances invented for his destruction or capture. A correspondent at Singleton says it is no uncommon thing for a farmer with a run of quite average extent to lose a hundred sheep in a season though the depredations of these carnivorous birds. "Their strength," he writes, "is so abnormal that it is practically impossible for the sheep on which one pounces to resist the attack, and their appetite for live mutton appears to be insatiable. They are occasionally caught by means of a trap attached to the carcase of a sheep, and sometimes poisoned; but their numbers are nevertheless continually increasing."—London Standard.

An Exciting Snapshot.

Lord Minto returned to Calcutta a few days ago on the conclusion of his short tour in Assam.

The trip was marred by an accident to Col. Victor Brooke, the viceroy's military secretary. A rhinoceros charged the elephant ridden by Col. Brooke, dashing that officer against his howdah so violently that his right arm was fractured in two places.

The viceroy alone was shooting the rhinoceros, and Col. Brooke was attempting to take a photograph of the shot and also to turn the charging animal.

Coal Seam in a City Street.

A seam of coal of good quality, two feet thick, has been discovered under Erdington, one of the principal streets of Leeds, Eng. It extends from the direction of the Grand Central Hotel. Already about two tons have been excavated, and it is declared quite fit for household purposes.

The discovery was made in a cellar during some drainage excavations.

Fifty Years a Pauper.

At a meeting of the East Preston, Sussex, England, board of guardians it was reported that an aged inmate, who recently died in the workhouse, first became chargeable to the union as a pauper lunatic in January, 1859, and that his maintenance during the past fifty years had cost the ratepayers over $4,850.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

A BOOM IN SEVERS.

Athletic Brothers Are to Play Football Match in England.

If, as seems likely, we are about to see a "boom" in athletic contests between sets of seven brothers, due to the sensation that is practically certain to be created by the forthcoming football match between the seven brothers Williams, of Haverfordwest, and the seven brothers Randall, of Llanelly, it will merely be a revival of an old custom dear to our forefathers.

Seven has always been regarded as a lucky number, and in the old days, when people were more superstitious than they are now, near relatives who could work together in sets of seven always tried to do so, believing that they thereby secured some mysterious advantage.

There were, for example, the seven boxers of Beeston, all brothers, and all chimney-sweeps by trade, whom the redoubtable Jem Mace met and defeated one after another, as set forth in full in his memoirs.

Then there were the seven Lees, gypsies, who used to go about the country with a boxing-cloth giving exhibitions. According to their own story, there was only three years difference between the ages of the youngest and the eldest of the seven, the explanation being that the batch of brothers included three sets of twins.

Their success was such that they soon had plenty of imitators, including the famous Lancashire Wrestling Septette, who for years took on all-comers. These were undoubtedly the sons of one mother, for they used to exhibit their birth certificates outside their booth.

At one of their matches they were opposed by a septette of Irish wrestlers, each of whom was said to be the seventh son of a seventh son, a combination which is supposed to be enormously lucky, and is certainly extremely rare. However, in this case skill triumphed over luck, for the Irishmen were easily beaten by the lads from Lancashire.

Dublin's Slums.

The strong remarks of the Recorder of Dublin in regard to the terrible slums which darken the Irish capital have again drawn attention to what is undoubtedly a shocking state of affairs. Sir Charles Cameron, medical officer of health for the city, said he considered that the main cause of the extreme poverty was the lack of employment owing to the absence of large industries. "Thirty-seven out of every hundred families live in one room," he said, 'and I think their case is worse than that of the very poor in any centre in England. The proportion of the people of Dublin who are very badly off in regard to good clothes and fire is very large indeed. Here is a typical case which has been brought to my notice. It is that of a poor young woman five or six and twenty in an advanced state of consumption. She has four children, including a baby in arms who is also consumptive, and her husband only earns eleven shilling a week as a messenger. All they live on is bread and tea. There are considerably over 1,000 regular beggars in Dublin. Most of the very poor live in tenement houses. Much of the property is old and decayed. It often gets so dilapidated as to be unfit for habitation. We have closed about 3,000 such houses in the last twenty-five years. Some of the rooms are let as low as 1s. a week, but the rents vary from 1s. to 2s. It is strange how few bachelors you find among the very poor. They marry no matter how poor they are and thus the ranks of the poverty-stricken are swelled."

A Youthful Robber.

Brought before the Preston (Eng.). magistrates recently as not being under proper guardianship, a diminutive boy named Francis Glass, eleven years of age, was remanded for a week, after a remarkable account had been given of his alleged proficiency in thiefs of a particular order. The chief constable informed the court that Glass was the leader of a gang of boy thieves who went about robbing letter and pillar-boxes in different parts of the town. On the previous Sunday alone the prisoner obtained in this manner cheques, postal orders, etc., to the value of £400, and he had given the postal authorities a great amount of trouble. On another occasion he obtained over £50. Detective Woodacre stated that the boy had a remarkably small hand and a thin arm, which he could thrust through apertures in the boxes and so abstract the contents. The prisoner hid the plunder in a cellar underneath his school and in crevices in different parts of the town. Although so young, he was absolutely beyond control, and frequented the company of thieves.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain tells an excellent story against himself. When he left his Alma Mater he traveled on the Continent for some months, and then returned to Birmingham with the intention of devoting himself seriously to politics. He had been at home only a few days when he met his old nurse, who inquired what vocation he thought of pursuing. "Oh," he said, in reply, "I'm going in for politics!" "For politics!" was the exclamation of the old lady. "Oh, Mr. Austen, I should have thought two in the family, your father and Mr. Richard, enough to have had in politics! Why don't you go in for something useful?"

Saved Their Taxes.

A curious fact has come to light in connection with the late famines in India. Even in the districts which were most affected it is now possible to collect the suspended land revenues and takavi, and district officers have noticed that many of the rupees paid in on these accounts have obviously been buried. It seems quite evident that the famine, severe as it was, did not exhaust the resources of the people and that at least a portion of the takavi advances were promptly hoarded against the day when the lender should demand their payment.

ALFRED COONEY.

HERO AND BURGLAR.

Gallant Career of English Laborer Smirched by Crimes.

A tragic example showing how man can fall from heroism to crime was given recently at the Old Bailey Police Court, London, in the history of George William Owens, a Walthamstow laborer, aged 31, who pleaded guilty to two burglaries and to stealing in all jewelry worth $1,200. He was sentenced to eighteen months' hard labor.

The police evidence showed that Owens had been sent to the Cornwall, a reformatory ship, as a boy for a petty theft. From the date of leaving the ship to the end of last year he had striven to live honestly, but had been unfortunate in losing his work. During the year 1908 he had become an expert burglar and shopbreaker, and there was reason to believe that he had made a considerable sum by his crimes.

The prisoner's counsel, Mr. Metcalf, told a touching story of his earlier and nobler career. In the Cornwall he distinguished himself by his good conduct and rose to the rank of a band sergeant. He saved another boy from drowning at the risk of his life, and a dinner was given in his honor by the officers of the ship, at which Gen. Buller was present.

In the disaster at the launch of the Albion at Blackwall in 1898, when a sudden backwash swept 200 people into the water, he once more displayed splendid courage. He plunged gallantly in to the rescue of the drowning and saved three persons from death—one a girl who afterwards became his wife. For his behaviour on this occasion he was awarded the Royal Humane Society's medal. Thus from first to last he saved four lives only to end in the dock. He did not take to crime until he had tried cornet playing in the streets, after all hope of obtaining employment had been lost.

"There never was a bad man that had ability for good service," said a great thinker. Judging by the good service which Owens had rendered at the risk of his life there will be hope for him yet when his sentence is served. Such a man cannot be incurably bad.

PREMIER'S DOUBLE.

New Zealander Is Mistaken For the Prime Minister of Victoria.

A New Zealand gentleman, who happens to bear a close resemblance to Sir Thomas Bent, the Premier of Victoria, had some amusing experiences while in Melbourne recently. This gentleman is Edmund Wickes, of Greymouth. The story he tells was related to a Christchurch reporter on his return to New Zealand.

On landing in Melbourne, Mr. Wickes was astounded and amused to see the policemen salute him. He boarded the Walnut, of which steamer his son is engineer, and his son was greeted with the remark: "Hullo, you're in good company; you've got Sir Thomas with you."

For five weeks Mr. Wickes underwent similar experiences. At that time Sir Thomas Bent was ill, and Mr. Wickes was being continually stopped by Melbourne citizens, who shook hands with him and congratulated him on his recovery. At his hotel there were numerous people who wanted to be introduced to "Sir Thomas," and even a close personal friend of Sir Thomas Bent was deceived by the resemblance.

One night Mr. Wickes decided to stay at his son's hotel. Rising at his usual time (6 a.m.) he found that breakfast would not be ready for some time, and he decided to get the meal outside. Entering a restaurant, he sat down at a table, but was invited by a waitress to go to the private room. Nothing loth, he complied with the request. Hearing some feminine giggling outside the door, he invited the waitresses in. To his astonishment, one of them remarked: "We know you, Sir Thomas; you have been out all night. Oh, fie!"

A Fish Which Is a Mimic.

Two species of fish belonging to Cuvier's family of perches, named the lesser weever, otterpike, or stingfish, are not uncommon on the English coast. Both have a detachable portion of the dorsal fin, consisting of six or seven rays, which, The Lancet points out, when trodden upon or handled, can cause a painful wound, which takes a long time to heal. Dr. A. T. Masterman points out that the intense black color of the membrance of this portion of the fin must act as a danger signal, especially as it is in marked contrast with the rest of the skin and of the sand, in which the animal half buries and conceals itself, ready to dart out on the small crustaceans which form its prey.

Now, the right pectoral or upper fin of the sole has, especially in the young sole, a large, deep, black patch, the possession of which, the doctor suggests, constitutes a well-marked example of mimicry. The smaller fry of soles, like the weevers, inhabit sandy bays and shallows, and also partially bury themselves in the sand. Dr. Masterman has found that, unlike the turbot and plaice, which when disturbed make active efforts to swim or escape, the sole lies quiescent even to the point of simulating death, but at the same time erects sharply and spreads its upper pectoral fin, which thus forms a motionless black flag held upwards in a menacing attitude.

"Pig-Killer-in-Chief."

Dr. Montague Stone-Wigg, who is retiring from the Bishopric of New Guinea on account of ill-health, has had an adventurous life and many queer experiences. Once, not so very long ago, he acted as pig-killer-in-chief at a great carnival of savages. The bishop had objected to the native method of slaughtering swine for their great banquets, for it involved at least ten minutes' agony to the wretched animals, and he offered to show them a better way. There were 150 to be slaughtered for 2,000 savages. The bishop and one of his clergy set to work to shoot the animals, and in a very short time they had killed fifty.

In spite of all your careful habits it is safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pale or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely bilious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years," says W. B. Sangster of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite, suffered from indigestion and gas, had some pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt despondent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They twisted me exactly. In one week I felt like new. I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Polution of the Waters to Stop

It is up to the owners of hotels and boarding houses at Stony Lake to see that their places are equipped with septic tanks before the coming tourist season opens. The Water Commissioners have decided to put a stop to the pollution of the waters of Stony Lake from these sources and will insist that septic tanks be installed at once. It is stated that the hotels and boarding houses are the chief offenders in this respect and that little trouble is caused by the average cottager. Mr. Graham, proprietor of Viamede, has set the example by installing the proper sanitary apparatus and the other resorts are expected to follow suit.

The Water Commissioners have secured the services of Mr. George Cochrane, who knows the lake from one end to the other like an open book to see that their demands in this regard are carried out. Prosecutions will follow unless the owners comply with the wishes of the the commissioners.

Will Beautify the Normal School Grounds

Mr. F. R. Heakes, Provincial Government architect and Mr. H. L. Hutt, B.S.A., professor of landscape gardening at the Guelph Agricultural College, were in the city yesterday in connection with the arranging for improvements to the Normal school grounds. Mr. Hutt stated that the work of beautifying the grounds of the school will be begun this summer. The Ontario Government, after spending a large sum of money on the erection of the school intend to give it an appropriate exterior setting.

The grading for the lawns and driveways will be begun this summer, but the planting will not be done until next year. A great amount of earth will have to be drawn to the school grounds in order to get sufficient for the requirements of levelling it with what was done last fall. Trees will be planted, walks and driveways are to be laid out, a tennis court will be prepared, and the whole will be in keeping with the building and should greatly enhance its appearance. Mr. Hutt suggested that, a decided improvement could be made if the dwelling on the south of the building were purchased and removed, thus enlarging the lawns and giving the school a more extensive setting and allowing for better improvements.

Mr. Hutt and Mr. Heakes were the guests of Mr. Duncan Walker, while in the city.

Rev. Father McGuire of Woodstock was in the city yesterday on his way from Lindsay, where he was attending the funeral of the late Father Collins.

GOW GANDA — Silver, Silver, Silver — World's Richest Camp. — GOW GANDA

MAC GREGOR SYNDICATE

This district promises better than Cobalt did—Cobalt has been heralded as the world's Greatest Silver Camp. Although in its infancy Cobalt has paid $11,600,000 in dividends. : : : :

GOW GANDA WILL SURPASS IT

Millions are made in Cobalt by small syndicates who purchased properties and did initial development. Hundreds invested in this way made tens of thousands. Such a chance is now offered at Gow Ganda.

THE MACGREGOR SYNDICATE

Now in Process of Formation. Here Are particulars :

SHARES $100.00 EACH

GOW GANDA

THE INVESTOR'S GREAT CHANCE

The MACGREGOR Syndicate is being formed for $20,000 with shares at $100 each, and will own 120 ACRES (3 claims: M. R 3507 M. R. 3523, M. R. 3524) at the south end of GOW GANDA Lake, right in the midst of valuable discoveries.

Also G. G. 341 at Elkhorn Lake. The vendor reports and guarantees a rich discovery of native silver averaging 500 ozs. to the ton for full length of vein. This means $250 per ton, and is high grade shipping ore.

We consider this claim by itself to be worth, on its guaranteed silver showing, four times the entire capitalization of the Syndicate.

The Syndicate with its large holdings of valuable property will undoubtedly yield large profits to its members. The Syndicate will close within a few days as there is a lively demand for its shares.

When the Syndicate is closed it is proposed to form a company to take over, purchase and operate the three properties. The proposed capitalization of the comkany will be $2,000,000—a fair capitalization, for 120 acres, located as these properties are—the Syndicate will turn over the properties of the Company for, say, 1,200,000 shares of stock at $1 per share, par value, leaving 800,000 shares in the Treasury of the Company to be sold at 50 cents a share for the installation of the machinery and thoroughly working the properties. This plan would give each holder of shares in the Syndicate 6,000 shares in the company for each share held. It is proposed to place the stock of the Company on the market at 50c a share, and on this basis members of the Syndicate will be entitled to have their stock sold share for share with treasury stock. This would give members of the syndicate $3,000 in cash for each share held in the syndicate, less a brokerage of, say 5 per cent. for selling.

SURFACE SILVER VEINS OF FABULOUS RICHNESS CHARACTERIZES GOW GANDA.

Forty-acre properties that six months ago could have been had for the staking have sold at prices ranging up to $350,000.

It is reasonable to expect that the MACGREGOR properties will be among the richest producers, and the chance of securing an interest should be taken advantage of.

SAFETY—Our confidence in the safety of the investment is expressed in the fact that we have taken shares in the Syndicate. We think it is a first-class investment, and we offer it to careful, conservative men as such, in our belief. We call it an unique opportunity for men of moderate means; that others appreciate it to be so is shown by the keen demand for shares. Send your remittance at once if you want to get in.

All moneys are deposited in the Bank to the credit of the "MacGregor Mines Syndicate" and cannot be withdrawn—only by authority of the Syndicate. Syndicate Shares are absolutely non-assessable No personal liability.

Letters to The Editor

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Sir,—I shall be glad if you will kindly insert the following letter from the Hon. Frank Oliver, in reply to the representations submitted to the government in January, requesting that the provisions of the Volunteer Bounty Act, 1908, may be extended so as to include all S. A. Veterans residing in Canada;

Ottawa, April 16, 1909.

Dear Sir,—In reply I beg to say that the subject of your communication of January 2nd, has been considered. After discussion with Sir Frederick Borden and other members of the government I am compelled to reach the conclusion that the government does not at present see its way clear to grant the prayer of the petition.

Yours very truly,
FRANK OLIVER.

In view of this decision the Imperial S.A. Veterans' Association will hold a general conference in Toronto on May 12th and 13th, when when representatives from all over the Dominion will be present, and when arrangements will be made to bring further pressure on the government to extend the Act in the next session.

Yours gratefully,
EBELFORD GRIMWOOD.
General Secretary.

Royal Theatre Does Not Change Hands

In the issue of The Times of Wednesday, appeared an article headed "The Royal Theater changes hands." Since that item appeared Mr. Pappas has informed us that there is no truth in it. Under the circumstances The Times regrets its publication and retracts the statements. The information was received over the telephone and was published in good faith. It was one of those unfortunate affairs which is experienced by every newspaper. The Times does not wish to publish any item that is not true, although occasionally information is given to the paper which does not correspond with facts.

On the Last Lap

Mr. J. W. Stewart, of Foley, Welsh & Stewart, the big railway builders, was in Edmonton the other day. Stewart is famous for what he keeps from newspaper men, but one tireless correspondent gathered from his silence that the close of the present year will see the Grand Trunk Pacific completed, and construction trains running over the line as far west as the McLeod River. The grading of the transcontinental is practically all completed to the Pembina River, and here is only the stretch between the Pembina and the McLeod to be completed. The steel head is within less than one hundred miles of Edmonton, and before June will have reached the city and be on its way to the west.

The foundations for the big steel bridges that will carry the transcontinental across the Pembina and McLeod rivers are already advanced, and steel for the structures will be rushed through the moment that trains are able to run through to the Pembina, which should be in July or August.

Preparations for the completion of the last stretch of grading on the Edmonton-McLeod section, from the Pembina to the McLeod, are being made by Foley, Welsh & Stewart, who have the contract. J. W. Stewart states that work will commence as soon as the frost is well out of the ground. There is only about two months' work to complete the grading through to the McLeod River.

Asked as to the contract for the West Creek section of the transcontinental, Mr. Stewart said he had heard nothing to put from the railway company, but was confident that work would be proceeded with on the mountain section within a few months.

Christopher Quinn Died at Lakefield, was 84 Years of Age

(Special to The Times)

Lakefield, April 23—The citizens of Lakefield and Peterborough will learn with regret the death of Mr. Christopher Quinn, who passed away at three o'clock this afternoon. The deceased was a native of Ireland, being born in 1825, and when seven years of age came to this country with his parents and settled in Smithtown, where he lived continuously until 15 years ago when he gave up farming and moved to the village. The late Mr. Quinn was one of the oldest Orangemen in the county, having joined Lakefield Lodge when a boy, and he made it his boast that in all those years he never missed taking part in an Orange walk.

The deceased is survived by four sons and five daughters. The boys are John of Douro, William of Ashburnham, George of Peterborough, and Archie of Lakefield. The daughters are Agnes and Laura at home, Mrs. Hugh Davidson of Winnipeg, Mrs. Robt. Duff of Lakefield, and Mrs. Kirlin of Calgary.

The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, and interment will take place at the Lakefield cemetery.

Judgment was Reserved in Case of Louis Laplante

Judgment was reserved in the case of the city vs. Louis Laplante.

His Worship County Magistrate Edmison conducted Division Court yesterday afternoon for Judge Weller. The case of most interest to the citizens was an action by the city treasurer to recover $25 from Mr. Louis Leplante for the privilege of connecting with the outfall sewer on Locke street. There is no frontage tax on Lock street, but the council placed a charge of $25 per connection upon those who wished to use the sewer. All the other people who connected with the sewer paid the fee except Mr. Leplante who refused to pay on the grounds that his connection was made before the charge was fixed and also that he had permission from the city.

Mr. Louis M. Hayes, K.C., appeared for the city treasurer and Mr. Orsin Leplante appeared for Mr. L. Leplante.

His worship heard the evidence and upon request from the defendant reserved his decision.

Bracebridge Shocked by Suicide of Chas. Boyer

Bracebridge, Ont., April 23.—The town was shocked last night upon learning that Charles E. Boyer, a son of the late James Boyer, and one of the best known young men of Bracebridge, shot himself dead at about ten-thirty.

Boyer had been out calling at the home of a friend named Cribbs, where it is understood he made frequent visits. It was upon leaving the Cribbs' home that he committed the desperate act. It is asserted that for some time Boyer has been keeping company with a young lady at the Cribbs home. It is supposed he was disappointed.

Deceased was about twenty-seven years of age, and has been clerking in the law office of Mr. O. M. Arnold for some time. An inquest is being held today, and will be conducted by Coroner McGibbon.

The sad occurrence has caused profound sorrow here, as Boyer was a genial, good-natured fellow, who had many friends, and was perhaps the last person in the town who would be expected to end his life by his own hands.

Cheese and Butter Makers Had Successful Annual Meeting

Splendid Address by Mr. G. G. Publow on Conditions of Dairying in Peterborough—Splendid Outlook for the Season —Officers for the Year Elected

The afternoon session of the Peterborough Cheese and Butter Makers' Association was held in the City Council chamber, and was well attended. The feature of the afternoon was the address of Mr. G. G. Publow of the Kingston Dairy School.

Besides Mr. Publow's address, Mr. Riddel, a former president, spoke for a few minutes when he pointed out that the Peterborough board had always adopted the best methods in selling, curing and shipping cheese. He would like to see some method adopted whereby it would be known on the old country markets that the Peterborough section was trying to place its goods on the market in a condition asked for by the old country merchants.

MR. PUBLOW.

Mr. Publow's address was on conditions in the Peterborough section. In opening he complimented the local makers upon the reports on the quality of their cheese of last season's make. Any fault found was from some of the cheese being a little dry and mealy, showing the cheese to have been made from overripe milk. Some were a little high in color. The tendency is for colored cheese to be colored a little lighter than last year. While good cheese was made last year, the speaker thought that better cheese would be made during the present year. After the successful meetings held by Mr. Barr and the inspectors, and just at the time when the farmers were showing more interest and willingness to co-operate with the makers, a deal of good was accomplished. The milk is being delivered in a cool, sweet condition more than ever before.

While cheese for the last two seasons, said the speaker, have passed inspection as finest, there have been hundreds of cheese gone forward which, under different conditions, such as a glutted market, would have been rejected.

The speaker out to the makers the necessity to always have their cheese of such quality that the buyer could not find fault with them even on a falling market. The buyer will inspect more closely when the market is congested. He suggested to the inspectors and instructors that they criticise the cheese in the factory from a standard of perfection. This need not interfere with the inspection of the buyer as he usually inspects from a commercial standpoint and is governed by the condition of the market. In conclusion, Mr. Publow urged the makers to put forth their best efforts during 1909 and send forward the best quality of cheese Canada ever produced.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The election of officers resulted in last year's staff being given another term of office. They are as follows;

President—Mr. A. A. Oakley, Norwood.

Vice.-Pres.—E. Demorest, Lakefield.

Sec.-Treas.—A. L. Andress, Indian River.

Asst. Sec.-Treas.—H. Lackie, Coe Hill.

The afternoon attendance was very good and great interest was taken in the address.

MORNING SESSION.

The annual convention of the Cheese and Butter Makers of Peterborough district was commenced yesterday morning in the Council Chambers with a fairly large representation of the men who are in charge of the actual dairy work in this county. The president, Mr. D. A. Oakley of Norwood, was in the chair, and conducted the several sessions. Mr. A. L. Andress of Indian River, secretary of the Cheese and Butter Makers' Association, was also present.

Among the prominent dairymen present were; Messrs. G. G. Publow, chief instructor and superintendent of the Kingston Dairy School; Ald. G. A. Gillespie, R. W. Ward and D. J. Cameron, instructors for the district, and Mr. B. B. Cowan, of the Farm and Dairy. The program for the day included dinner at the National Hotel.

THE BUSINESS DONE.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mr. Andress and adopted.

Mr. Ward, dairy instructor, said that the object of the meeting was to consider what was to be done this summer to improve on last season's work. Last year's record must be examined and the strong and weak points examined into. "This applies to patron and maker, and I, as instructor, will co-operate to bring about the best results." Mr. Ward emphasized the necessity of using a pure culture starter. Do not use a poor starter, but a pasteurized starter of pure culture. The improvement of the milk supply is being arrived at, but much more can still be done. Makers should be very attentive to the curing room and have a uniform temperature. The cheese should be well finished, boxing neatly done and the boxes neatly branded in order that the buyer's first impression may be a favorable one.

Mr. Cameron also gave an address as instructor. Mr. Cowan was heard in a general address, during which he advocated a provincial convention of cheesemakers, pointing out the benefits that could be derived in this manner.

Chimney Fire at Noon

The fire brigade were given a run at noon yesterday. An alarm was sent in from box 23 and the trouble was found to be at Miller's shoe store on George street. A chimney had caught fire and when the firemen arrived, they were considerably handicapped by the dense smoke. The blaze started about half way up the chimney, and the room in which the firemen had to work was filled with smoke. However, with the use of chemicals the fire was put out and very little damage resulted.

Boys' Department Had a Closing Banquet

The boys' banquet at the Y.M.C.A. was a big success last night. It was tendered by the ladies interested in the boys' department, and marked the closing of the spring season. There were about 100 boys gathered around the festive board, and they thoroughly enjoyed the spread. The winter and spring activities were formally closed by the supper, but there will be lots doing during the summer. There will be outings and exercises of various kinds in which the boys will take part, and the work will be carried on quite as actively as it was during the winter months.

The past season has been a most successful one, due in a great measure to the energy displayed by the secretary, Mr. Evans, and much good is looked for as a result.

After the boys had satisfied the inner boy the following toast list was run off.

Dr. Middleton occupied the chair and proposed the toast to the King.

The toast to the boys' department was proposed by Ray Scott, who outlined the plan of organization and self government which was characteristic of the department, and he dwelt at length upon the success of the department.

Secretary Evans responded in a neat speech declaring that the boys of today were the men of tomorrow and he spoke of the benefit of the training received in the boys' department in developing them for future labors.

Mr. Frank Bulpany gave a recitation.

The address of the evening was give by Rev. W. C. Riddiford on "The Missing Link." He said the missing link in the lives of men and boys were the lack of reverence for the country, for parents, for the other fellow, for things sacred and for God. He showed how men who used liquor lacked reverence for the body; boys who use cigarettes lacked reverence for the body also; one who gambled lacked reverence for property and was dishonest; profane language was a lack of reverence for God. He appealed to the boys to see to it that there was no missing link in their lives.

Mr. D. O. Waring gave a reading and Douglas Caryle sang a solo.

THE WINNERS.

Mr. Evans announced the winners of the indoor athletic contest held during the winter.

Collegiate Boys—Geo. Monaghan and R. Howden.

Junior School Boys—D. Lees and B. Hill.

Business Boys—Arnold McWilliams and N. Lang.

Mr. R. M. Roy took a flashlight photo of the group as they were about to sit down to supper.

The toast to the ladies was proposed by M. Pearson and responded to by Geo. Hogan.

A vote of thanks to the ladies was proposed by Bruce Hunter and D. Lees.

A vote of thanks to the friends who assisted in the program was proposed by H. Hill and Geo. Monaghan.

New York, April 23.—The declaration that Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., the artillery officer of the United States army, who is on trial for his life at Flushing, is now as insane as he was when he shot down the magazine editor, was made yesterday by his brother, Major John the defence, John F. McIntyre.

There had been newspaper reports during the day that Dr. L. Samuel Munson, alienist for the defence during the trial of Thornton Hains had declared that the captain was now sane although he probably was suffering from impulsive insanity when he killed Annie. When Dr. Munson read the alleged interview shown to him by attorneys for the defence, he declared that he had been misquoted.

"I said," declared the doctor, "that Captain Hains had had lucid intervals since the shooting of Annie. The discussion took place on a street car, and we talked of the Thaw case, the Terranova case and others. Probably I did not make myself plain."

John F. McIntyre last night put himself absolutely on record as believing that the captain is now insane and has been insane since he returned from the Philippines.

"I am in no position to go before Judge Garretson or any other judge and ask that Captain Hains be freed," said Mr. McIntyre. "If a jury trusts him out as sane, my hands are clear, but from what I know of his condition I would not go before the court and ask his freedom."

There was a feeling about the old town hall in Flushing yesterday that the Hains case would be tried out to its ultimate finish. A verdict from the jury. Prosecuting Attorney Frederick De Witt has devoted two days to watching the prisoner, letting Special Prosecutor Gregg and his assistant, John Hetherington, examine the jurors. Mr. De Witt believes that Captain Hains is now sane and will try him on that premise.

Two new jurors were accepted yesterday leaving five vacant seats Hains and by the chief counsel for in the box. Here is the official record of the total number of talesmen examined;

Excused by the court, 200.
Challenged by the State, 14.
Challenged by the defence, 13.

A Sensational Turn in the Kinrade Murder Case Causes Great Excitement

Bench Warrant was Issued for the Appearance of Florence Kinrade Last Night—No Witnesses were Called—Two Leading Counsel Had a Warm Argument—Adjourned Until Monday Night

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, April 23.—Florence and Mrs. Kinrade did not appear at the inquest tonight, and the proceedings were adjourned until Monday night.

A bench warrant has been issued by Coroner Anderson for Florence Kinrade as a material witness in the enquiry into the death of her sister Ethel. The warrant was given to Detective Miller who leaves for Toronto in the morning.

This followed an exciting scene which occurred tonight after waiting three-quarters of an hour.

Mr. George T. Blackstock put Detective Miller on the stand to swear that he had personally served the subpoena on Florence. Mr. Blackstock then stated that she was not present. He requested therefore the issue of a warrant to compel her attendance to give evidence on Monday night.

Detective Miller previously telephoned to Toronto, and assured himself that the Kinrades were still in their apartments.

Mr. Geo. Lynch-Staunton, K.C., who is acting for the family, jumped to his feet.

"I wish to say that Florence Kinrade is acting under advice of her counsel. She was physically unfit to attend," and Mr. Staunton moreover desired to contest the action suggested. "You have exhausted your authority," he said to Coroner Anderson. "I will take it upon myself to advise you not to issue the warrant, and ask you to adjourn for a reasonable length of time and Monday night is not a reasonable length of time."

Mr. Blackstock rose to dissent, and spoke with more vigor than he has since the proceedings were begun. From the opening of the proceedings, he said, the family's counsel placed them as witnesses at the disposal of the Crown, which was a perfectly proper proceeding, and what was to be expected under the circumstances. This was the first intimation the Crown had received that the persons subpoenaed had been advised to remain absent. On the contrary the Crown had applied to the representative of the family the previous evening to know if the witnesses would be here and had been informed that he did not know whether they would or not. Now it would appear that on their counsel's advise they were acting entirely contrary to the expectations of the Crown. He must dissent from the application for a further post-

BENCH WARRANT.

As no bail can be granted this bench warrant may not be served until Monday, as they do not wish to arrest Miss Kinrade. No witnesses were called.

This action caused great excitement in the court room, and the whole city is greatly stirred up over the sensational turn of the proceedings, and is the sole topic of conversation in all quarters.

It's Up to the West to Win This $10,000

Omaha, Neb., April 23.—The National Corn Exposition officers in Omaha have been notified by Colonel E. J. Bell, of Laramie, Wyo., that he had made a wager with Western Canadian farmers that his Wyoming farm would produce more oats per acre than any land in Western Canada.

The wager is for $10,000 cash and the National Corn Exposition officials will judge the crops. Col. Bell has for years made a specialty of oats. At the head of the Canadians who are backing Alberta, is Professor W. H. Fairchild, of Lethbridge, Alberta.

Col. Bell this week planted the fields on which he pins his faith, while the Albertan fields will not be planted for two weeks.

The contest, according to Col. Bell's offer, is open to the entire world, and is not limited to Canada alone.

Nineteen Persons were Drowned on the Norwegian Steamer Edith

Christiania, April 23. — Nineteen persons were drowned off Christiania last night by the sinking of the Norwegian steamer Edith, after collision with the British steamer Oxford.

Those who went down with the Edith were the captain and his wife, one passenger, and 16 members of her crew.

The Edith was a Norwegian steamer of 867 tons, and was last reported at Christiansand. The Oxford is of 802 tons and is owned in Hull.

A Travel Talk Through Italy

The last of the series of travel talks under the auspices of the Educational Committee of the Y.W.C.A., of which Miss Weir is the convener, was held last night and proved to be a most successful one. The subject was, "The Reminiscences of a trip through Italy," by Mr. Adams of the Collegiate Institute staff. The lecture was given in the greenroom and a very good crowd was present. Mr. Adams handled his subject remarkably well. He gave much valuable information to his word pictures were so vivid that all present were greatly interested. The paper was both educative and entertaining. The chair was occupied by Mr. G. M. Roger. Miss Morse gave a piano solo and Miss Binn a vocal solo. A very pleasant and profitable evening was spent.

Bronchitis Cured

For Fifteen years Mr. John Pearson of Malvern Square, suffered from Bronchitis and Throat Irritation. Doctors Failed to Restore but Catarrhozone Cured Quickly.

The remarkable recovery of Mr. Pearson, who for years was principal of Malvern Square High School, is convincing evidence of the exceptional curative powers possessed by Catarrhozone.

"For fifteen years," writes Mr. Pearson, "I constantly suffered from Bronchitis and Throat Irritation. Until quite recently I was able to keep up my teaching, but my bronchial trouble became so annoying that I was forced to resign.

"For months I doctored with different physicians and was not benefited. My trouble grew more severe and extended to the lungs, and I feared I would end in decline.

"Providentially I was advised to use Catarrhozone, and I believe it really saved my life. Its immediate effect was to relieve the throat trouble sufficiently to give me perfect ease in speaking. Within one short week all symptoms of Bronchitis had disappeared. I can fervently recommend Catarrhozone. I know it has no equal as a cure and speedy cure for throat trouble and bronchitis."

Every air cell and air passage, all parts of the breathing organs are reached and treated by the antiseptic vapor of Catarrhozone. It soothes and heals the inflamed mucous surfaces, stops the cough, clears the nose and throat, and drives every symptom of bronchitis right out of the system.

To purify the blood of all poisons, and to build up the system, Fernozone Tablets, which are included in every Catarrhozone outfit, are very highly recommended. This local and constitutional treatment in Bronchitis, Catarrh and Consumption cannot be equalled.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by physicians and ministers and thousands it has cured. Two months' treatment costs $1. Small size, 25c. Sold by all Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE PROMOTION OF PEACE

Strong advocates of peace usually take two positions; against great armaments and against the fostering of international ill-will. On the former ground they find it difficult to make headway. They are met by the argument, "Look what the other fellows are doing. Are we to be the only defenceless people in an armed world?"

We have no doubt that this argument is used in Germany as effectively as it is in England. It is an argument that it is very difficult to meet until two things happen; until over the greater part of the world the people rule, and until the people recognize the idea that they are brethern and not enemies, no matter to what government they may owe their allegiance.

Upon the second point, opposition to the fostering of international ill-will, the peace men have the whip-hand of their opponents. Common sense tells us that international antipathies are foolish; that whatever two nations may do as organizations, it is utterly ridiculous to regard the individual Frenchman or German or Russian as the sworn foe of the individual Englishman; the individual American as the sworn foe of the individual Canadian, or vice versa. The old soldier in Goldsmith's story hated the French because they were all slaves and wore wooden shoes. Science, by improving communication, has done much to abolish that kind of ignorance.

In this country, and in the United States the flow of immigration has made us familiar with all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the newcomers do not fit in well, but we attribute that to the fact that they have been living under despotic institutions, and have not learned to govern themselves. In Canada and in the United States German immigrants are classed among the very best of the new material, industrious, thrifty and law-abiding. No prejudice-maker could persuade us that the individual German is a monster. If, unhappily, there should be war with Germany we should all recognize that the war was with an institution, and should deplore the terrible sacrifice of men for the institution.

All over the world the human heart is the same, and the needs of the individual man, woman, and child are the same; a fair day's wage for a fair day's work, a comfortable home, freedom and progress, and development for soul and body. All over the world the masses of mankind want these things, and must perceive the hideous folly of a system under which millions of decent heads of homes in one country are hurled against millions of decent heads of homes in another country, instead of making common cause against the common enemies of mankind.

Upon this point the advocates of peace stand upon the strongest ground. There may be difference of opinion as to armament and preparation for war; there can be no difference of opinion as to the folly and wickedness of stirring up strife, of causing the men of one nation to regard the men of another with hatred and contempt.

One nation is anxious to know what another nation is doing in the way of raising armies and building Dreadnaughts. But too often one nation does not know enough of the home life of another, of its schools, and its efforts to advance civilization. In this respect Canada and the United States are happily situated. The exchange of trade between the two countries is less important than the exchange of ideas. Public-spirited men and women of both countries are interested in such questions as the improvement of agriculture, the prevention of tuberculosis and other diseases, the fight with poverty and slums and intemperance, the making of playgrounds for children. Instead of imitating on this continent the criminal insanity of Europe, we may cherish the hope that some day all the nations of the world will follow the example of North America.

If the rumor is true that the new Central Prison is to be built near Hamilton, the reasons for choosing this location are not apparent. The railway charges for sending to Toronto the criminals caught by the Hamilton police cannot have been large enough to warrant the removal of the prison to that place.

Coughs that are tight, or distressing tickling coughs, get quick and certain help from Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. On this account Druggists everywhere are favoring Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. PASSING OF LONDON.

Rosebery Says It Keeps Changing Like a Huge Camp.

Lord Rosebery, in delivering the presidential address to the members of the London Topographical Society at Burlington gardens, was in a pessimistic mood regarding the transitoriness of London.

"We survive our London," he said. "We realize in modern life that all around us is change. The house that we knew in childhood seems to be in the minority, and when in a long walk one comes to some untouched nook, it is with the same surprise that one finds a patch of snow under a hedgerow after a thaw.

"If some power the gift could give us to see once more the London of our childhood, the contrast would, I believe, be greater than we imagine. We live in a city almost as fleeting as an encampment. We do not strike out tents, but rather lose our ruins just as our judiciously constructed house is coming to pieces.

"Let our society watch this process viligantly, as, I believe, the London County Council also watches it with more authority and ampler means, and garner up carefully what is worth preserving of a great city built not for time or posterity, but for the business exigencies of a leasehold tenure."

Lord Rosebery's address referred principally to Whitehall Palace, the site and remains of which he said he had recently explored in the company of Lord Welby.

"I thought Lord Welby and myself were somewhat attentively watched," he added, "until it was judged from our appearance that we were not political women in disguise.

"Though glorious under Henry VIII., Whitehall remains chiefly connected with the name of Stuart. We call that name unlucky, not with scientific accuracy, for it has plenty of luck, though it did not know how to use it, or threw it wantonly away up to the very end.

"Its princes persistently misgoverned Great Britain when it was not difficult to govern, and ended by throwing away an empire for a mass. We should admire that tenacity of consonance as compared with the more jaunty example set by their relative and ancestor, Henry IV., did we not know that when it was too late Charles Edward abandoned the mass with easy alacrity. Be that as it may, we know that not merely the glory, but the actual habitation of Whitehall ceased with these luckless Stuarts."

A Bashful Princess.

Princess Alexandra, the elder of the Duke of Fife's two daughters, and granddaughter of King Edward, was to have been presented at one of the courts which are to be held during May. Just before she left for Egypt with her father and mother, however, she begged hard to be let off until the season of 1910, when her younger sister, Princess Maud, will be able to brave the ordeal with her. Princess Alexandra's timidity is even worse than that of her mother the Princess Royal, who is known in intimate family circles as "Her Royal Shyness." Being a royal personage, she would not be presented like an ordinary debutante, but would have to take her place on the royal dais to be criticised by everyone in the ballroom. Her mother probably fully sympathising with her daughter, has let her off until next year, when the two sisters will be able to hold hands on the dais. Princesses Alexandra and Maud, who were born in 1891 and 1893, respectively, have lived a very retired life, formerly at Brighton, which residence the Duke of Fife has now given up, and latterly in the Highlands.

Queen to Wear Great Gem.

The Queen will wear the great Cullinan diamond in future on state occasions when the crown is not in use.

It will be set in the imperial crown in such a manner that it can be detached for separate use.

The crown and diamond were taken to Buckingham Palace a few days ago, and the matter was discussed between the King, the Lord Chamberlain, Col. Sir Douglas Dawson, the master of ceremonies, and representatives of Messrs. Garrard, the court jewelers.

The feasibility of the plan having been demonstrated, the court jewelers have been commanded to carry out the work. Thus the Cullinan, while retaining the status of a crown jewel, will be available for wear by the Queen on some occasions upon which the crown itself is not in actual use.

It is understood that the King's main object is to show to the fullest possible extent his appreciation of the Transvaal's gift, feeling sure that the donors would be more gratified by this use of the gem than if it were to be fixed permanently in the crown and kept as a rule from the public eye.

"All Mad."

After leaving Eton Lord Meath had some glorious times in the little principality of Schaumburg-Lippe, where he went to learn German. In company with some other gay young English sprites, he organized a paper-chase. So little was this game understood by the natives that when the "field" asked some peasants whether they had seen the hare, they replied, "Ah, yes, the thief has the booty in a bag; you will catch him over the hill." Next day a policeman came from the Prince of Schaumburg-Lippe, his highness having heard that the boys had been robbed of 200 thalers. Prolonged explanation only drew from the policeman the remark, "Good heavens! The English are all mad."

Tortoiseshell Atrocities.

An appeal has been sent by native gentlemen in Bombay to the Queen asking Her Majesty to discourage the use of tortoiseshell ornaments on the ground of the cruel methods in vogue for procuring the shell.

It is obtained from turtles which are caught alive and shelled by baking them before a slow fire. If the reptile survives it is let loose, in the sea again to grow a fresh shell, and is afterwards seen pla and "shelled."

BEDOUIN HOSPITALITY.

Keen Sense of Honor Among the Nomads of the Arabian Desert.

The laws of politeness among the Bedouins forbid the mention of the name "woman." There are three things unmentionable—pig, dog and woman. If a man must speak of his wife he calls her "the thing," and begs your pardon for mentioning her at all in your presence. Among them the birth of a girl is no event of importance or rejoicing, and rather one of dire disappointment and often the cause of cruel treatment to the poor mother; whereas, that of a son is the means of raising her in the esteem of her husband and of all the tribe.

When a man is asked how many children he has he only gives the number of boys, never breathing the fact that he has any girls. Having only daughter is spoken of as "having no children."

The Bedouin, having no respect for his wife, does not hesitate to divorce her for any caprice of his own. In a moment of anger he may shout, "Go from me!" and from that hour the woman is driven from her home in disgrace.

But, though woman is man's slave and of no great cost to him when once his wife, yet she is an expensive luxury to obtain in the first place, for Bedouins buy their wives, and prospective husbands must either buy the maiden from her father or guardian at a large price, or substitute to the seller some marriageable fair relation of his own. This price varies according to station and beauty. It may be equal to one hundred dollars or four or five hundred.

The one fine trait in both men and women is their hospitality. But, notwithstanding their impulsive spirit and their genuine generosity, there lurks under it an undefined expectation of ample return for all their gifts, which makes acceptance of their kindness exceedingly expensive. They are wonderfully susceptible to the influence of gifts, and their friendship is easily bought in this way. But Bedouins are true to their word and true to their principles of hospitality. They would never think of harming a stranger who was at their mercy if they had once taken him under their shelter and protection. If their confidence is really trusted they never betray it. To the traveler this spirit of hospitality is a great boon.

Australia Holds Back.

The Australian Commonwealth Government has now given the decision with reference to the all-red mail route proposals submitted to it by Mr. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster-General of Canada. The Commonwealth Government, while sympathising with and recognizing the importance of the scheme for an all-red route, has decided that the present condition of its finances precludes Australia from concurring in the proposals made. The all-red route scheme is for a service of fast steamers between Great Britain and Canada, a fast train service across Canada to Vancouver, and a steamship service thence to New Zealand and Australia. The estimated subsidy required was £1,000,000. Canada was prepared to pay an annual subsidy of £385,000, provided that New Zealand paid £100,000, Australia £75,000, and Great Britain the balance of £500,000.

"Remember the Baker!"

In the courts of Venice when a prisoner is about to be condemned to death a tall and ghostly looking individual, dressed in a long black gown, walks majestically to the centre of the courtroom, bows solemnly to the judge and in a cavernous voice pronounces the words, "Remember the baker!" Then he bows again and stalks away. Three hundred years ago a baker was executed in Venice for a crime of which he was not guilty. When his innocence was established the judges who condemned him gave a sum of money to the city the interest on which was to be devoted to the setting up and perpetual burning of a lamp, known as the "lamp of expiation," in the palace of the doges.

Kitty Feels Guilty.

It was Kitty's first dinner party. As her dinner escort was presented to her she noticed that he was a member of the new family who had recently moved across the street from her. During the meal there chanced to be a discussion of various kinds of beautiful profiles. Wishing to say something complimentary to the shy debutante, Kitty's partner remarked: "If you will allow me to say so, your own profile is very charming. I should think you would be tempted to spend a great deal of time standing before your mirror with a hand glass admiring the pretty curves."

To which Kitty, blushing scarlet, asked, "Are you joking, or have you really seen me do that?"

The Fishing Banks.

Newfoundland would be nothing without that great submarine plateau known as the banks," on which all the fishing is done. At a small station within the edges of the great bank that the cod loves so well the sea is quite smooth. It is usual for vessels fishing on the bank to inquire from those that have arrived from the open sea as to what sort of weather it is "abroad."

The Scot and His Guns.

If the Scot who has stayed at home cannot play the game of curling as well as his sons who have settled in Canada, what he lacks in skill is made up by love of the sport. Golfing is of the Scot. It is ingrained in his nature, deeper than his religion or his financial interests. It has been known to make a Scotsman break the Sabbath and a dollar bill

ALFRED COONEY.

THE KETTLEDRUM.

It Is an Instrument That Is Pretty Difficult to Handle.

The kettledrum has been so far improved that it has a pitch; in fact, it contains the large range of four notes. It is, as its name shows, a copper kettle, or bowl, covered over with skin, which can be tightened or loosened by screws placed around the edge. Drums of this shape were used by the Romans, and even earlier by the Greeks and Etruscans. But they were not known in western Europe before the crusades.

Although it may appear so, the kettledrum is not at all an easy instrument to manage, for in order to get each of the four notes the player has to turn all the screws and adjust the parchment anew. For this reason kettledrums are often used in pairs, one tuned to the keynote, the other to the fourth below. In this way the drummer has always the two chief notes in the scale to work upon, and if the composer has not exacted much from him he will have quite an easy time. But when a change of key is approaching it is quite exciting to watch the drummer screwing and unscrewing the the drum and lightly tapping to hear if the pitch is true, and if we recollect that he often has to tune his drum while the whole orchestra is lifting up its voice we realise that he must be no mean musician; that he must possess an exquisitely sensitive and well trained ear and a steady hand and nerve as well.—Jessie K. MacDonald in St. Nicholas.

MODERN ROYALTY.

Hopelessly Handicapped by the Progress of Mankind.

What is a modern king for if not to set a pattern of the brave, courteous, urbane gentleman and make a comely figurehead for state occasions? If he fails there of what earthly use is he? He cannot govern. He dare not attempt to rule. He is so outclassed in professional training by his own generals that he would never be tolerated as an active commander in chief in time of war. He is hopelessly below the requirements of the age if he dreams of leadership in art or learning, literature or science. If he cannot make a brave showing of the virtues and graces of more primitive times when he gets a chance he fails utterly.

The truth is that modern royalty is handicapped hopelessly by the progress of mankind. The age is far too complex to enable a king to play the part he is cast for in the great drama of the world's work and struggles. He would be more than human if he could live up to the demands of his birth and the traditions of his vocation. Kings were formerly tragedies when they were evil and great benefactors when they were both good and wise. Now they are perilously near the border line of comedy, which slides easily down into farce.

Sneezing.

Sneezing has an extensive folklore in many countries. Sometimes the act is considered omineus of good and sometimes of evil. Among the Jews it has always been regarded at an appropriate moment, such as the conclusion of a bargain, as propitious, and a belief still lingers in many parts of the country that the regular habit of sneezing, particularly after meals, is conducive to longevity and a precaution against fevers. The old English custom of saying "God bless you!" when a person sneezed, so as to avoid evil consequences, has its counterpart in many far distant parts of the globe. The early settlers in Brazil found the custom existed with "God preserve you!" while in Fiji it was customary to retort, "May you live!" In superstitious Suffolk there is a sneezing table—once a wish, twice a kiss, thrice a letter and four times a disappointment.—London Sphere.

The Water Clock.

The earliest application of the clepsydra principle to produce motion was by Taisang Hung, A. D. 120, who made an "orrery" representing the apparent motion of the heavenly bodies around the earth, which was kept going by dropping water. In the sixth century of the Christian era an instrument was in use in China which indicated the course of time by the weight of water as it gradually came from the beak of a bird and was received in a vessel on a balance, every pound representing a one-hundredth part of the day of twenty-four hours. About this time mercury began to be employed in clepsydras instead of water.

Victim of Circumstances.

"That Englishman is a funny chap," remarked the hat salesman in the big hotel; "he hasn't been out of his room today."

"He; he is a victim of circumstances," scoffed the coffee salesman.

"Victim of circumstances?"

"Yes; he put his shoes outside his door last night, according to the English custom, and somebody threw them at a cat down the areaway."

Rebuke.

A chill, dark, autumnal morning. A breakfast table with an overcrowded tribe of chanceron children. A worried mother and an irritable father muttering something about "no decent elbow room." A small child uplifts solemn eyes from his plate and says, "Hadn't one of us better die?"—London Academy.

Knew His Dad.

Teacher—Several of your examples in arithmetic are wrong, Johnny. Why didn't you ask your father to help you? Johnny—'Cause I wasn't looking for trouble, that's why.—Exchange.

"There's a Reason"

THE WHOLE YEAR ROUND.

Women Everywhere Use Pe-ru-na.

Suffered With Stomach.

Mrs. John Underwood, 520 W. Walnut St., Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"Having had catarrh and stomach trouble and having suffered very much, I, after being doctored a long while, as a last resort took Peruna. The result was wonderful. I would highly recommend it as a good remedy. I still use Peruna and would not be without it. I always have it in the house."

Catarrh and Stomach Trouble.

Mrs. T. Prock, R. R. No. 1, Hickory Point, Tenn., writes:

"I am happy to tell you that I am cured of catarrh. I have followed your good and kind advice faithfully. I bless the day when I wrote you of my condition, and I will always praise Peruna. I think it is one of the grandest medicines on earth.

"Having been afflicted with catarrh and stomach trouble for seven years and after having tried four different doctors they only relieved me for a little while. I gave up all hope of being cured. I only weighed 120 pounds, and was so weak I could hardly get around the room.

"I was induced to try Peruna, and to my great surprise I am now entirely well. My weight is now 158 pounds, my health never was better in my life.

"I shall always praise Dr. Hartman and his remedies."

Thousands of families have learned the use of Peruna and its value in the treatment of catarrhal ailments.

Tired, Worn-Out Mothers.

Mrs. Lydia H. Jesselyn, 501 Westminster St., Providence, R. I., is Treasurer of the Editors League of Rhode Island, chartered in Providence. She writes:

"My experience with Peruna has been most gratifying. Last winter I contracted a severe cold, and for several days I coughed until my voice failed me. When other remedies did me no good, I decided to try Peruna, and within four days the cold was broken up, and the cough abated.

"Within another week an increase in my usual strength and vitality told me that Peruna was doing all that it promised, and more. I also consider it very superior for tired, worn-out mothers, and have advised several to try it, and have seen most gratifying results from its use.

"I give it highest praise."

Bowel Trouble.

Mrs. Maggie Durbin, 1322 North St., Little Rock, Ark., writes:

"I was troubled for five years with a chronic disease. I tried everything I heard of, but nothing did me any good. Some doctors said my trouble was catarrh of the bowels, and some said consumption of the bowels.

"One doctor said he could cure me. I took his medicine two months. But it did me no good.

"A friend of mine advised me to try Peruna and I did so. After I had taken two bottles I found it was helping me, so I continued its use, and it has cured me sound and well.

"I can recommend Peruna to any one, and if any one wants to know what Peruna did for me if they will write to me I will answer promptly."

Peruna is a household remedy of great merit, and is useful in many climatic ailments, such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis and catarrhal diseases generally.

Biliousness, Indigestion.

Mrs. Lena R. Moudy, 556 Caywood St., Portland, Oregon, Sec'y Royal Tribe of Joseph, writes:

"For the past six years biliousness and pains in my back and limbs made life miserable to me. My skin was sallow and dry, and indigestion was added to my troubles. I was wakeful at night and would get a weak, faint feeling during the day so that I was not fitted to attend to my regular duties. This caused me serious annoyance and trouble, and I naturally tried many remedies, hoping to get relief.

"Peruna came as a friend indeed. It toned up the system, relieved the blood of the poisons and induced a healthy action of the stomach, a fine appetite and restful sleep.

"Within three months I was a changed person, and for nearly a year now I have enjoyed splendid health."

A Grateful Patient.

Mrs. Eliza J. Casee, R. F. D. 8, Bedford, Ind., writes: "I have been cured by using Peruna and Manalin. I thank you for your advice."

Restorer of Lost Strength.

Miss Bessie Farrell, 1011 Third Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., is President of the Young People's Christian Temperance Association. She writes:

"Peruna is certainly a valuable nerve and blood remedy, calculated to build up the broken-down health of worn-out women. I have found by personal experience that it acts as a wonderful restorer of lost strength, assisting the stomach to assimilate and digest the food, and building up worn-out tissues. In my work I have had occasion to recommend it frequently, especially to sick women.

"I know of nothing which is better to build up the strength of a young mother, in fact all the ailments peculiar to women, so I am pleased to give it my hearty endorsement."

Pe-ru-na a Woman's Friend.

Mrs. Ella Embree, Clark, Mo., writes: "I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I can truthfully say that Peruna is a woman's friend. I have no more terrible pains and am stronger than I have been. Your medicine has worked like a charm."

Bilious Headache.

Mrs. Emily Kellogg, 5040 S. Lawrence St., South Tacoma, Wash., member of Ladies of the Maccabees, writes:

"Three months ago I had an attack of biliousness which threatened to undermine my health and strength. Luckily for me, I tried Peruna at the suggestion of my friends before it was too late.

"I found in a few days time that I did not have the usual sick headache, neither did food nauseate me any longer. In two weeks' time Peruna had completely rid my system of the poison and bile, and I was in a much better condition. My skin assumed its normal color, I had a splendid appetite, and I was in every way improved in health. I used Peruna for a month longer, and it wrought a wondrous change in my entire system. I consider it a most wonderful medicine."

Nervous Dyspepsia.

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, 61 Merchant St., Watsonville, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with cramps in the stomach for six years. I tried many kinds of medicine, also was treated by three doctors. They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months. I improved under the treatment, but as soon as I stopped taking the medicine, I got bad again. I took the medicine for two years, then I got sick again and gave up all hopes of getting cured.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Peruna, so I thought I would give it a trial. I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken nineteen bottles and am entirely cured. Have gained in strength and flesh and feel like a different person.

"I believe Peruna is all that is claimed for it."

Catarrh of Head.

Mrs. Joseph Vittur, 3709 Erie St., Austin Sta., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Your medicine, Peruna, was of great benefit to me. I suffered with catarrh of the nose and head for many years. Three bottles of Peruna cured me, after I had considered it impossible to ever be cured again.

"I now always keep Peruna in the house, and recommend it to every one suffering from catarrh. As soon as one of my children commence to cough I give them Peruna, and their cough is soon gone.

"This medicine is surely a great boon to suffering humanity."

Pe-ru-na the Family Doctor.

Mrs. M. E. Seymour, R. F. D. 2, Bowman, Ga., writes:

"I am ready to speak a few words in favor of Peruna and Manalin. I have tried them for nearly every ill of life for myself and family, and find them to be all the doctor claims them to be. Peruna cured me of internal trouble when my doctor could not.

"My advice to all suffering women is, consult Dr. Hartman. What he has done for me he will do for you."

Headaches, Weakness.

Mlle. Albina Chauvin, No. 89 Rue Agnes, St. Henri, Montreal, Canada, writes that she considers Peruna better than any other remedy, as it cured her when nothing else could. She suffered for years with heart trouble, headaches and weakness. She tried Peruna. One bottle produced a change. She took six bottles and is entirely cured.

Wrote a New Song

Mr. Walter Clurton, formerly of Peterborough, has composed a new song entitled "The Stream of Life," which promises to be a big hit. Mr. Clurton is playing with Miss Bonstelle's company at the Baker theatre, Rochester, and the following clipping from a Rochester paper will be read with interest here: "Mr. Walter Clurton, a member of the company who is seen this week in which he plays effectively, has composed the music for a song. 'The small character part of a butler. Stream of Life,' which was beautifully played between the second and third acts yesterday by the orchestra under the direction of Mr. August Rohde. It is an exquisite little song and the young composer is to be congratulated on his success in composition."

Beware of ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except in prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

St. Catharines Boys will Come Victoria Day

St. Catharines, April 23.—The most successful drill of the season was that which was held by the 19th St. Catharines Regiment on Tuesday evening. The turnout was excellent, 247 men taking part in the evening's parade.

During the evening the good news was imparted to the men that the regiment had been invited to spend May 24th as guests of the 57th Peterborough Regiment, and also that St. Catharines' crack regiment had received an invitation to take part in the celebration of July 1st in Buffalo.

An hour having been spent in company drill, the regiment was once more formed up and was addressed by the colonel. He reiterated his announcement made earlier in the evening that the regiment had been invited to spend May 24th in Peterborough and Dominion Day in Buffalo. He was not able from his position on parade to see how many had signified their intention of accepting. Each company would of course have to pay part of the expense entailed from the company funds. A financial sacrifice, not individually, but from the company, would be required, and he, therefore, suggested as wished to accept the invitation, to so signify. The response was general, every man in the regiment signifying his intention of going. "That means we accept the invitation," said the colonel. The same expression of opinion was manifested in regard to the Buffalo trip.

Words of praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

Its self-evident honesty of purpose, purity, brilliancy, body, and every other attribute that goes to make a perfect beer are ever in evidence.

Jealously the Cause? of the Murder of Ethel Kinrade

A Crisis Reached

Murderer May Have Been American Admirer —Miss Kinrade will Fight Arrest in Courts —Friend who Believes that Young Woman is Being Persecuted.

Hamilton, April 24.—"I am one of the very few people in Hamilton," said a well-known and responsible citizen here today to a press correspondent, "who do not believe that the person who shot Ethel Kinrade has been in the witness box yet."

"I do not believe that girl is getting a square deal," he proceeded. "If the Crown have anything against her they ought to arrest her and try her fairly. But there is no justice in trying her in the witness box.

"Mr. Blackstock was in the Burchell case. Do you think he would have stood for a minute for the methods now being employed when he is prosecuting instead of defending? Not he!

"You will find the Crown is barking up the wrong tree," he continued. "I believe a man came up to shoot all right. But he shot the wrong girl.

"Have you ever observed how much alike the sisters looked? Strangers often mistook them. You can hardly tell which is which in the pictures they have in the newspapers.

"Now if some crazy fellow came up from the States, hearing that Florence was going to be married, and with the idea through jealousy of shooting her, he might very easily after several months mistake the one sister for the other.

Florence Kinrade is a very attractive looking girl, and she travelled about a great deal in the United States so that it would be possible that some unknown admirer in a jealous craze might have been moved to commit the crime as suggested. There is apparently no evidence, however, in the possession of the family or of the Crown that would support the view or doubtless it would have been produced."

"I know nothing about it," declared another prominent citizen when interviewed today in excited tones. "The Kinrade case is an infatuation in Hamilton.

THINK OF NOTHING ELSE.

"People think and talk and read about nothing else. It is perfectly absurd the way people are going on.

"I declare I'll be in the lunatic asylum myself if I hear much more about it," he asserted in emphatic tones with his eyes flashing.

As a matter of fact the Kinrade case has got on the nerves of Hamiltonians. In some circles anyone who can contribute the latest intelligence about the matter is welcomed with open arms. Elsewhere glaring looks and inevitably of speech and behavior greet the rash person who ventures to broach the subject.

Boers Ready to Help Britain

London, April 24.—General D. Wet, one of the big figures in the Boer army in the South African war, addressing a meeting of the Royal Colonial Institute, said that; "For years South Africa has been like a man trying to walk on one leg, while possessing two." Now, however, the English leg and the Dutch leg, animated by a common purpose, were marching together with a good prospect of reaching their destination.

It was not too much to say that in Great Britain's next great conflict South Africa would play a distinguished part in defence of those liberties she enjoyed under the Empire. The people, it was true, would speak a dual language for many years to come—the Dutch had a certain sentiment of attachment to the ancestral house of Holland—but to whatever racial element the people belonged, they would, he felt sure, take a pride in being associated in the arduous work of the Empire.

Oddfellows Celebrate 90th Anniversary by Attending St. Andrew's

Peterborough and Otonabee lodges I.O.O.F. celebrated their 90th anniversary by attending divine service last night in a body. There were some 236 in the procession, including many members of the Rebecca, the largest turnout the society ever held. The Oddfellows met in the lodge rooms, George street, and marshalled by L.-Col. Miller, and accompanied by a number of visiting brethren, proceeded to St. Andrew's church, where they occupied the center pews. The church was crowded and the greatest interest was taken in the proceedings.

The choir rendered special music for the occasion, including the singing of "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" as an anthem and a solo by Mr. Fred Skitch, "Thy will be Done."

Rev. J. G. Potter, the pastor, preached a splendid sermon from John 13.34. "A new commandment give I unto you that ye love one another as I have loved you."

In opening the pastor referred to the pleasure it gave him and his people to welcome the visiting lodges and he expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him to preach to them on their 90th anniversary. He said he could not refrain from referring to the large amount of benevolent and relief work done by the order during the past year and he quoted from the last report the amount of benefit and relief that had been paid through the Ontario lodges and also made slight reference to extensive work of the order throughout the world.

In expounding the text the pastor said the commandment of Christ referred to was how as it departed a new meaning and spirit to the people. The principals enunciated by Christ were unknown to the Jewish people because of the narrow view of love they entertained. The exemplary character of Christ's love was held up as an ideal for every true Oddfellow.

After the service the brethren returned to their lodge rooms where Col. Miller addressed a few words of appreciation of the services rendered by the pastor and the church to the society.

A vote of thanks was moved and seconded, and carried and ordered to be forwarded to the church officials and the pastor.

Rev. Mr. Potter and Mr. A. McFarlane briefly responded.

A special vote of thanks to Col. Miller was passed in appreciation of the splendid manner in which he handled the procession.

Several of the visiting brethren also spoke.

Young Turks Open Hot Shell Fire

On the Imperial Palace and the Sultan Surrenders

Great Victory for Constitutionalists

Over 50,000 Men Killed, Wounded or Captured—The Foreign Residents are Not Believed to be in Danger—Fight Started at Noon—Troops Deserted

Constantinople, April 24. — The sultan yielded to the constitutionalists at four o'clock this afternoon, but whether his surrender was with or without conditions has not been announced.

Of the 80,000 men at the disposal of his majesty yesterday all have been either killed, wounded or captured, or have escaped.

The forces of the Young Turks entered Constantinople this morning at five o'clock, and after severe fighting in the streets of the city, in which it is estimated that 100 men were killed or wounded, the capital was captured by one o'clock this afternoon.

The constitutionalists are now patrolling the city, and order is being maintained. The foreign residents are not believed to be in danger.

The sultan is safe at Yildiz Kiosk. A number of shells dropped within the confines of the palace, whereupon the commander of the forces there hoisted the white flag, and at once opened negotiations to surrender. The terms of this surrender are now being discussed and the commander of the constitutional army has given until four o'clock this afternoon for a final answer.

Field guns, heavy artillery and machine guns were used by both sides, and at some of the local barracks, notably the Tasch Kischla, the Constantinople troops put up a resolute defence. No mercy was shown to the troops who led in the uprising of April 13.

Several of the foreigners are said to have been wounded. Among them is Frederok Moore, an American newspaper man from New Orleans, but his injury is not serious, and Ambassador Leichman has arranged for him to be taken to the hospital. Another American correspondent named Booth was slightly wounded in the head.

DEPOSITION PREDICTED.

Halid Bey, who has been the representative of the Young Turks in London, speaking to the representative of the Associated Press today, predicted the deposition of the sultan. He said "We are all extremely anxious that no injury shall befall his majesty, but it will be impossible after recent events to expect a continuance of respect, sympathy and loyalty to the present sovereign. Orthodox Moslems attach loyalty to the office of the califf rather than to the individual occupant of the office. It is the wish of the constitutional party that the necessary change in sovereigns be brought about by voluntary means, and I have reason to believe that before long a new sovereign will ascend the throne of Turkey. This change will ensure the restoration of tranquility."

FIGHT STARTED AT DAWN.

The expected clash between the favored troops of the Constantinople garrison and the army of investment which began its advance on the city yesterday, occurred this morning shortly after five o'clock, and was marked by heavy rifle firing and the rattle of artillery from the heights surrounding Yildiz Kiosk.

BATTALION RESISTED ARMY.

Gen. Schefket, commanding the constitutional army, began to occupy Constantinople at dawn. Word came from the city at midnight saying that the long expected entry had been made, but people nevertheless went to bed skeptical, only to be awakened in the Pera quarter by the sound of artillery and the ragged crash of rifle in the direction of Yildiz Kiosk. A battalion of the sultan's Household Guards occupied Tasch Kischla barracks, about 800 strong, and were resisting the advance of the investing army.

TROOPS DESERTED.

The troops within the city brought comparatively few guns into action. They dropped some shells in Semsari on the other side of the Bosphorus, and caused considerable disorder among the investing forces.

Five shells fell within 15 minutes near the head of the Grande Rue De Pera, causing consternation. A few minutes later 50 soldiers came running into the Grande Rue from a side alley and debouched in the rear of the attackers. They were fired on sharply, and several were wounded before they were able to explain that they were deserters from the other side.

The Grande Rue was massed with people and when it was learned that the 50 men had deserted there was a tremendous outburst of cheering and hand-clapping. The windows of the houses not occupied by Mohammedans were crowded with women who waved handkerchiefs, a small Turkish flag and silken scarfs. The commandment shortly after this incident cleared all the streets in this vicinity.

Complete tranquility was, however, restored in Constantinople by noon, when the last recalcitrants surrendered, and the firing ceased.

Several of the isolated guard-houses defended themselves bravely against the Salonikans. These fights in the center of the city resulted in a considerable loss of life.

Old Resident Passed Away Yesterday

One of Peterborough's old residents passed away yesterday afternoon in the person of John Craig, sr., who has lived for many years in Ashburnham, at 124 Hunter street east. The deceased was in his 84th year and had lived retired for several years. He was well known and highly respected and his removal will leave a vacant space that will be noticed for a long time. Besides a wife she is survived by two sons, John and Bert, and one daughter, Mrs. J. B. Gillespie, all living in the city. The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon and interment will take place in the Little Lake cemetery.

Progressive Construction Campaign on the G.T.P.

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, April 24.—No time will be lost in constructing the branch line projected by the Grand Trunk Pacific R.R., according to a statement made here by Edson J. Chamberlain, general manager of the of the company.

Between Winnipeg and the Pacific Coast there remains but 260 miles of the main line to be put under contract and a portion of this will be let before the end of the year. Mr. Chamberlain is confident that trains will be running between Edmonton and the Great Lake in time to assist in handling the crop of 1909, despite all press reports to the contrary and work will be rushed westward from Edmonton.

Active construction will be started within a few weeks on the branch line to run northwards from Melville, Sask., and the other from that town south to Regina and the international boundary, and Mr. Chamberlain states a portion of the steel on these branches will be laid this year. He also said the company has decided to build a branch line northwesterly from Melville to Prince Albert and surveys for this line are now being made. This line, it is expected, will eventually be extended from Prince Albert in a northwesterly direction, tapping the vast mineral resources of the far north and Peace River country. This will give five lines radiating out of Melville before the beginning of 1910.

Mr. Chamberlain stated that fully $10,000,000 will be spent on the actual construction by the company in Western Canada this year, and every effort will be made to get as much mileage in operation this year as possible owing to the influx of American settlers requiring railroads, and the active competition of the other railroad systems now building in Western Canada.

Sees Great Future in Canada for Women who will Take Up Farming

London, April 24.—"A great future lies before the woman farmer who takes courage in both hands and emigrates to Canada," said Mrs. George Cran a few days ago. She speaks with authority on the subject, having recently returned from a tour of Canada as the guest of the Canadian government.

"She must not mind a certain amount of loneliness, and she must give a number of years to her work before she can become what one may call really prosperous.

"She will then, however, have saved enough money either to return to England well-to-do, or, if she continues her work, to settle down in comfort for the rest of her life.

"There are excellent training colleges, but I should advise a girl to go straight on a farm and learn the work in the school of experience. By this means she will gain a fuller insight into the work and its conditions.

"I would strongly dissuade any woman from 'homestead' farming. It is not woman's work, and the land would be so far from any railway the trouble of transport would be endless. Even if there were three or four women working together the loneliness would be almost unendurable.

"The soil in Canada is very rich and fertile.

"Daily farms and market gardens are the most lucrative branches and some women combine them with ordinary farming, and do extremely well.

"A typical farm I visited belonged to a woman. She farmed over 600 acres herself, and is enthusiastic about her profession.

"The 'corn patch' covers sixteen acres, and the corn grown to a height of eight or nine feet, and often higher still.

"This 'farmeress' showed me her 400 acres of alsike—the best green fodder for cattle. She is justifiably proud of her work for she has turned a comparative wilderness into a model farm.

"I saw her crops of oats in shock, with the rich clover below. She showed me her 'melon patch,' her celery and asparagus, and then we came to the beehives, the chickens, and the stock. Her cows were beautiful Ayrshires and Jerseys, and her dairy might well be called a "model one."

"When I left her, I could not help imagining the great future that lies before healthy, hardworking English women who become farmers in Canada."

Mrs. Carroll was Struck by a Car

Struck by a street car as she was crossing George street Saturday morning, Mrs. Carroll, Sherbrooke street, sndmother of Mr. P. Carroll, wine clerk at the Oriental Hotel, had a very narrow escape from serious injury. In fact spectators of the accident were certain that she would be killed and there was much excitement until it was seen that she was not badly injured.

It appears that Mrs. Carroll was crossing George street at the south side of Simcoe street and had reached the middle of the crossing as the car came along north bound and moving fairly fast. At the other side of the road a horse became frightened at the approaching car, and reared up. Mrs. Carroll noticed this and started back, apparently confused by the sense of her danger, and the result was that she was standing in the center of the car tracks, when the car reached the corner. There was no time for the motorman to slow up and the fender struck Mrs. Carroll at the ankles, and threw her to one side, clear of the tracks. Spectators stated that they were certain that she would be thrown under the wheels and mangled, but most fortunately she fell clear and was not touched by the car, although badly shaken up and stunned by the fall. She was picked up and carried into Payne's Drug store, where Dr. A. W. MacPherson attended to her injuries. She was not seriously hurt.

Rev. Dr. Talling at St. Paul's Church

Rev. Dr. M. P. Talling occupied the pulpit in St. Paul's church yesterday at both morning and evening services, and was greeted by large congregations. He is filling the pulpit during the illness of Rev. Robt. Pogue, who has been suffering from rheumatism.

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and is so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual, no insult.

A Canadian Miner's Gift to the Poor

London, April 24.—The lord mayor (Sir George Wyatt Truscott) has just been the recipient of an interesting communication containing a draft $100 on the Bank of Montreal. The writer is a miner in British Columbia, and he writes anonymously from there as follows;

"Dear Lord Mayor,—Are there any christians in England now? If so, how is it that I read of 1400 and 1,500 hungrey, starving men and boys tramping the Thames Embankment all the winter nights, and kept moving on by the police without shelter, food, or rest? And I read that three of them died while waiting for bread tickets. This is terrible. My heart goes out to them all, and I send you $100; that may help a little.

"As a working man I get paid once a year, and I have to work all night for my bit of money. But I hear that those who give the charities away deep halves, or that it takes half to pay them. That ain't right. Oh! if there were any christians going about doing good like their Master did, and giving the charity away free—how much good they might do. Well, I hope mine gets down to bedrock, or to those poor fellows.

"I come from a one-room tenement myself, with three, and sometimes four in it, but we never have to sleep out in the cold. For myself I don't reckon to be rich in this world, but I do want to be rich in good works. Please write if you get this safe to "Watchman," at the above address, never mind my name.

"P.S.—I hear that the noblest men in England are not those with titles, but county councillors and aldermen who work many hours and very hard, and for nothing—only honor. And they deserve the very highest honor and praise. How much more should christians do so for Him who died for them."

First Horse Show was a Great Success

The first stallion show ever held by the Peterborough Agricultural Society was witnessed by a big crowd on the Market Square on Saturday afternoon. The breeding of horses is an important feature in farm life in this district and every year many valuable animals are purchased and shipped to the West, where there is a ready market for them. The standard of horses used in the city are high and the demand for good horses is increasing.

It was generally known that there were a number of first-class mares owned in the district and several of them have been seen passing through the city, but very few had any idea that there was the number of handsome animals in the vicinity as were shown on Saturday.

The officers of the Agricultural Society are to be congratulated upon their efforts in bringing together the stallions used for breeding purposes. President R. H. Leary and Secretary F. J. A. Hall were untiring in their efforts and to them is due much of the success that was achieved, and no doubt much benefit will be derived from the exhibition.

There were about twenty-five well bred stallions competing for the honors. The majority of the entries were of the Clydesdale class and there were indeed some handsome animals among them. The big thoroughbred owned by Mr. Stanhope of Keene, attracted much attention and was generally admired by the crowd. There were three hackney and coach horses entered and were much admired.

The attendance at the show was large, including a big bunch of farmers who were attending the market in the morning, but as is the general case when anything of an educational or beneficial nature is provided for the farmers that portion of the community is conspicuous by its absence. A great many farmers who were in the city hurried away home as soon as they sold their provisions. The directors of the Agricultural Society, however, are not disappointed. On the contrary they are delighted with the success of the first show, and another will be held next spring.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

SIR JAMES WATSON

This eminent English physician is one of the greatest authorities on diseases of the respiratory organs.

In a recent address, Sir James Watson stated that the commencement of all disorders in Catarrh, and that not one person in ten thousand passes the winter without an attack of some sort.

Sir James advocates local treatment very strongly, and says that it is all nonsense trying to treat Catarrhal diseases by stomach medicines, atomizers, douches and snuffs.

Local treatment is applied most scientifically by Catarrhozone, which is inhaled into the nose, throat and lungs, and drives the disease completely out of the system.

Catarrhozone is a rational common-sense treatment; it clears the air passages, makes breathing easy, and relieves at once. Physicians prescribe Catarrhozone with gratifying results, and pronounce it a specific for Catarrh in any part of the system.

Mr. Thos. Cox, one of the most prominent citizens of Minden, Ont., says; "I want to recommend Catarrhozone. It is a nice, clean cure for Catarrh. Cured me perfectly, and is well deserving of a trial from everyone at all affected by Catarrh or throat trouble."

Mr. G. F. Fadden, of Royan, Que., writes; "In my opinion Catarrhozone is the only cure for Catarrh. I had the disease in its worst form but only got relief from Catarrhozone. It cured me quickly and permanently, and I have no fear of the Catarrh ever returning.

The foregoing brief extracts, like thousands of others that the proprietors of Catarrhozone have received, prove that the proper remedy to use is Catarrhozone. It is quite different from the ordinary Catarrh preparation, and is warranted to prove entirely satisfactory. If it fails your money will be refunded, so if not benefited you won't be out of pocket.

All druggists sell Catarrhozone. Complete outfit, hard rubber inhaler, liquid for recharging, etc., costs $1.00; trial size, 25 cents. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

TWO EMPTY SEATS

At the dinner to the surviving members of the parliament of 1867, the first after confederation, there were several empty seats. That intended for Sir Charles Tupper was vacant owing to the absence of this veteran statesman in England. That set apart for Hon. Edward Blake was also unoccupied. The public man who had been invited to fill it was, unfortunately, not in good enough health to take part in a public function. Although the absence of these two leaders deprived the gathering of some share of its glory, it did not serve to banish them from the memory of those who participated. On the contrary, it brought them into relief, and directed attention once again to the fact that "there were giants in those days."

"Giants" Sir Charles and Mr. Blake certainly were. Sir Charles, or Dr. Tupper, by which name he was better known in the "seventies," was the most forceful speaker parliament has heard. Strong in voice, determined in purpose, powerful in argument, Sir Charles could force through projects which others dare not consider. It was once said of him that Sir John Macdonald was the designer of great ideas, while Sir Charles was the power by which these ideas were carried into execution. It is not fair to say that Sir Charles was not an originator. But it can be said with justice that his personality made acceptable, and popular, plans which but for him would have been looked upon with a good deal of suspicion from the point of view of feasibility. Certainly he fought for the Canadian Pacific with wonderful ability, and had it not been for him might on the platform the bargain would possibly have failed to receive the approval of the public. In the think of the fight Hon. Edward Blake led the Liberal forces. Ontario has reason to be proud of this great man. In the provincial field he won his spurs. As a Federal leader he added the renown he had earned in the minor sphere. A speaker of extraordinary power, he could sway the multitude as few others have been able to do. It was by straight reasoning rather than by declamation that he exercised his marvelous influence over the audiences he addressed. No public man has ever given to the subjects with which he has dealt more study than Mr. Blake gave to every issue with which he had to deal, and it is certain beyond peradventure that no public man ever approached a question with a more earnest desire to reach with reference to it the conclusion that would be conducive to the welfare of the country.

JUDGING A CIGAR.

The Only Real Way to Find Its Quality Is to Smoke It.

On no point is the average smoker so ill informed as that of judging a cigar. Nine times out of ten, upon being handed a cigar, he will hold it to his nose, unlighted, sniff at the wrapper with a critical air and deliver his verdict in a self satisfied manner. This characteristic manoeuver is always a source of amusement to any tobacco man who happens to observe it. There is only one way to ascertain the quality of a cigar, and that is to smoke it. No expert will pass judgment on a cigar until he has lighted it and smoked it well down toward the middle. The first and most important point upon which he bases his opinion is the "burn." Tobacco may have every other virtue, but if it does not hold the fire and burn evenly it is poor tobacco. Next in order of importance comes the aroma—the smoke must have a pleasing "smell;" next comes the flavor—the smoke must be smooth and not "scratchy" or bitter. Then there is the color—rich brown, indicating a ripe leaf, well cured—and last is workmanship—good if the wrapper is put on smoothly and the "bunch" is made so that the cigar "draws" freely and is neither too hard nor too spongy, and if the reverse.—Bohemian Magazine.

ROMANCE OF HISTORY.

These Things Read Like Legends, but Are Matters of Fact.

A peasant girl called half witted did promise to defeat the victors of Agincourt and did it; it ought to be a legend, but it happens to be a fact. A poet and a poetess did fall in love and eloped secretly to a sunny clime; it is obviously a three volume novel, but it happened. Nelson did die in the act of winning the one battle that could change the world; it is a grossly improbable coincidence, but it is too late to alter it now. Napoleon did win the battle of Austerlitz; it is unnatural, but it is not my fault. When the general who had surrendered a republican town returned, saying easily, "I have done everything," Robespierre did ask, with an air of inquiry, "Are you dead?" When Robespierre coughed in his cold harangue Garnier did say, "The blood of Danton chokes you." Strafford did say of his own desertion of parliament, "If I do it may my life and death be set on a hill for all men to wonder at." Disraeli did say, "The time will come when you shall hear me."

The heroic is a fact, even when it is a fact of coincidence or of miracle, and a fact is a thing which can be admitted without being explained.—G. K. Chesterton in London News.

A HARD TASKMASTER.

Agassiz Forced His Pupils to Find Out For Themselves.

When I sat me down before my tin pan Agassiz brought me a small fish, placing it before me with the rather stern requirement that I should study it, but should on no account talk to any one concerning it or read anything concerning fishes until I had his permission so to do. To my inquiry, "What shall I do?" he said in effect: "Find out what you can without damaging the specimen. When I think that you have done the work I will question you." In the course of an hour I thought I had compassed that fish. But Agassiz, though always within call, concerned himself no further with me that day nor the next nor for a week. At first this neglect was distressing. But I saw that it was a game, for he was, as I discerned rather than saw, covertly watching me. So I set my wits to work upon the thing and in the course of a hundred hours or so thought I had done much, a hundred times as much as seemed possible at the start. I felt full of the subject and probably expressed it in my bearing. As for words about it then, there were none from my master, except his cheery "Good morning." At length on the seventh day came the question, "Well?" and my disgorge of learning to him as he sat on the edge of my table, puffing his cigar. At the end of the hour's telling he swung off and away, saying, "That is not right."

I went at the task anew, discarded my first notes, and in another week of ten hours a day labor I had results which astonished myself and satisfied him. Still there was no trace of praise in words or manner. He signified that it would do by placing before me about a half a peck of bones, telling me to see what I could make of them, with no further directions to guide me. Two months or more went to this task, with no other help than an occasional looking over my grouping with the stereotyped remark, "That is not right." Finally the task was done, and I was again set upon alcoholic specimens. — "Autobiography of Professor Shaler" in Atlantic.

HE FED THE STAFF.

Fine Dinner For a Hungry Crowd on a Small Capital.

Years ago the late Senator E. W. Carmack was editor of the Nashville Democrat, a paper that had a precarious life and flickered out on Thanksgiving day.

When the staff came around on Thanksgiving afternoon Carmack met them with the announcement that the paper was dead and that they were all without jobs. This was sadder than it seems now, for the paper had not been paying salaries for some time.

"Boys," said Carmack, "it's all over. The sheet is dead. But we shall not want for a Thanksgiving day dinner. How much money have we?" A search of all pockets showed $4.70.

"Plenty," said Carmack. "Come with me."

They went to the best restaurant and sat down, and Carmack ordered a sumptuous dinner, with turkey and everything complete. After the dinner was over and the diners were smoking the best cigars the house had Carmack called the waiter in his grandest manner and said: "Boy, you have served us admirably. We are more than pleased. Here is a small sum to compensate you for your trouble and as a slight token of our gratification."

"Thank yo', boss," grinned the waiter; "thank yo'. But how about this yere check of $19.70 for that dinner you all just had?"

"Boy," exclaimed Carmack, "what is your status here? Are you a waiter or are you the financial manager of this concern?"

"Dood, boss, I's only a waiter."

"Well, then," said Carmack, "don't trouble yourself about the financial affairs of the place. Leave that to the manager." And he stalked out, followed by the feasted staff.

But he paid when fortune smiled again.

Pet Animal Cemetery.

Paris has a pet animal cemetery where thousands of dogs, cats, parrots and other animals are buried. Many of the inscriptions on the monuments are affecting in the extreme. "O Sappho!" is recorded above the grave of a toy terrier. "If my soul cannot join yours, dear and noble friend, I do not wish for salvation without thee! I shall wish, like thee, to slumber forever in the sleep that knows no awaking."

Over the resting place of a King Charles spaniel one reads: "I shall regret thee eternally, dear little one. How empty henceforth shall my life be without thee, dear little bowwow!"

An Expert.

She—How can you be so sure that you are in love with me and with no one else? Even I wonder at times whether there is a possibility of absolute certainty in such matters. He—You lack experience and the confidence it begets. I've been in love forty times and know every symptom.—Detroit Free Press.

Politeness.

"Politeness costs nothing," said the proverbialist.

"Which may explain," answered Miss Cayenne, "why some people of ostentatious wealth have so little use for it."

Lacks Tact.

Bates—That nephew of yours called me blackguard. Yates—Just like Ben; no tact about the boy. I've always told him that the truth was not to be spoken on all occasions.—Boston Transcript.

FORTUNES FOR AUTHORS.

Some of the Fancy Prices Received For Literary Work.

Dr. Sven Hedin is said to have asked for $50,000 as the price of his next book, a really quite modest demand compared with the prices accredited to such favorites in fiction as Miss Corelli and Mr. Hall Caine, says T. P.'s Weekly. The heirs of the late Edward Noyes Westcott received no less than $75,000 as the extraordinary reward for his writing of "David Harum." But history as well as fiction has proved not a little profitable.

A portion of Macaulay's "History," for example, was crowned with a check for $100,000. The great Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" was remunerated by $50,000, a sum which compensated more than one novel of Sir Walter Scott. But a correspondent of The Westminster reminds us that for his posthumous "Memoirs" Chateaubriand received not only $80,000 in cash, but an annuity of $2,400 for himself and his wife as well. The author of "Rene" lived on for twelve years, so that he received for the book rights of his posthumous work $76,000. In addition to this the serial rights brought in $15,000, making a grand total of $94,000 received in his lifetime. In inequality of rewards, however, is often quite as striking as the amounts. Tennyson's works were reaping royalties of $25,000 a year, while Browning received less than $1,000. Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. would print seven hundred and fifty copies of a new poem by Browning, and would sell only half of these during the first year. The shilling selection from the poems did much to bring a public to this great poet.

When Ruskin had gone through his father's large fortune Mr. Smith offered him the sum of $10,000 for his copyrights. The offer was refused, and Ruskin, through the medium of Mr. George Allen, became his own publisher, and was soon in receipt of more than $25,000 a year from the sale of new editions of his works. The poverty of literary men is too often a mechanical cry like the stereotyped line, "He died in poverty and left his family in distress," which William Jordan of The Literary Gazette was so fond of introducing into his numerous biographies.

"Trilby" and "Sherlock Holmes" are also among the landmarks of this age of authorship which is so literally golden.

The "'Omely" Bishop.

Since he became Dean of Manchester — in 1906 — Bishop Welldon has been winning that same measure of popularity amongst the kindly, hard-headed people of Cottonopolis as he did amongst the exuberant Harrow boys whom he governed for "thirteen of the happiest years of my life." To a certain extent his popularity is to be found in his unconventional ways. For instance, he thinks that there is nothing like a ride in a tramcar to get into touch with people, and illustrates the truth of this statement by the following anecdote. He happened to be traveling in one of the Manchester tramcars one day, and fell into conversation with a gentleman. The latter evidently enjoyed the exchange of conversation, for at the close of it, as he reached the door to disembark, this particular stranger turned round to the dean and in loud tones exclaimed, much to the enjoyment of the other occupants, "Sir, I think you're 'omely." "That's what I am," adds the dean, "I's 'omely."

Barony Extinct.

By the death, just announced, of the 30th Baron Howth without issue, the title becomes extinct. The late lord had obtained the ripe age of 88 years, and had never married. He was not at all fond of society, and lived a very secluded life, with the exception of a few years in the sixties, when he was State Steward to the Earls of Carlisle and Kimberley respectively during their vice-royalty of Ireland. Facing the hall-door of Howth Castle is a most peculiar-looking old tree, which would certainly have fallen to pieces many years ago but for the aid of many props and iron hoops, which gave it the appearance of being in a cage. The story goes that it has been prophesied that when this tree went the family would become extinct. There is no question about it that the tree is practically gone, and has been so for many years. For the last twenty years the late lord had been a great invalid, and spent all of his time either at Pau or Bournemouth.

To Settle Feud.

According to advices from Auckland (N.Z.), Colonel W. E. Gudgeon, resident Commissioner at Rarotonga, is proceeding to the disturbed Cook Islands on board the cruiser Cambrian, with full powers to deal with the difficulties that have arisen in Manahiki and Rakahanga, which are stated to be due to local jealousy. The natives of Rakahanga hauled down the British flag on July 1 last, and after ejecting the island council appointed their own Government, judges and police. The ringleaders of the movement was a dismissed teacher of the London Missionary Society.

Wanted No Saxon.

A strange incident occurred at Gorey, Wexford, Ireland, recently, on the arrival of the Lord Abbot of the Order of St. Benedict, in connection with the removal of Father Sweetman, the local superintendent, and the installation of Father Cunliffe, an Englishman, in his place. Hundreds of excited people met the train, and to the abbot's consternation declared that they would have no Englishman, and that there would be trouble if he was brought. Eventually the abbot consented to stay the removal for the present, and the crowd departed cheering.

WANTED THEM SAVED.

Lincoln Stuck to His Selection of a Hospital Chaplain.

The nomination of a Mr. Shrigley of Philadelphia, a Universalist, for the position of chaplain for the hospital was not met with favor on all sides, and a delegation of protestants went to Washington to see President Lincoln on the subject. The following interview was the result:

"We have called, Mr. President, to confer with you regarding the appointment of Mr. Shrigley of Philadelphia as hospital chaplain."

"Oh, yes," replied the president. "I have sent his name to the senate, and he will no doubt be confirmed at an early date."

One of the young men replied, "We have not come to ask for the appointment, but to solicit you to withdraw the nomination."

"Ah," said Lincoln, "that alters the case. But on what grounds do you wish the nomination withdrawn?"

The answer was, "Mr. Shrigley is not sound in his theological opinions."

The president inquired, "On what questions is the gentleman unsound?"

"He does not believe in endless punishment. Not only so, sir, but he believes that even the rebels themselves will be finally saved," was the reply.

"Is that so?" inquired the president.

The members of the committee responded, "Yes, sir."

"Well, gentlemen, if that is so and there is any way under heaven whereby the rebels can be saved, then, for God's sake and their sakes, let the man be appointed."

Mr. Shrigley was appointed and served until the end of the war.

THE GREAT BOMBARDMENT.

A Constant Rain of Missiles Upon the World's Atmosphere.

The regions of space beyond our planet are filled with flying fragments. Some meet the earth in its onward rush; others, having attained inconceivable velocity, overtake and crash into the whirling sphere with loud detonation and ominous glare, finding destruction in its molecular armor or perhaps ricocheting from it again into the unknown. Some come singly, vagrant fragments from the infinity of space; others fall in showers, like golden rain, all constituting a bombardment appalling in its magnitude.

It has been estimated that every twenty-four hours the earth or its atmosphere is struck by 400,000,000 missiles of iron or stone, ranging from an ounce up to tons in weight. Every month there rush upon the flying globe at least 12,000,000,000 iron and stone fragments, which, with lurid accompaniment, crash into the circumambient atmosphere.

Owing to the resistance offered by the air few of these solid shots strike the earth. They move out of space with a possible velocity of thirty or forty miles per second and, like moths, plunge into the revolving globe, lured to their destruction by its fatal attraction. The moment they enter our atmosphere they ignite, and the air is piled up and compressed ahead of them with inconceivable force, the resultant friction producing an immediate rise in temperature, and the shooting star, the meteor of popular parlance, is the result.

A Subtle Hint.

A representative in congress, who is the father of several bright girls, tells a story whereof one daughter is the main figure.

"For a long time," says the representative, "I had the bad habit of hanging about the lower floor when the girls had men callers. One evening I had settled in an easy chair in the reception room just off the drawing room when one of my girls, who was talking to a bright chap from our own state, called out:

"'Dad?'

"'What is it, daughter?'

"'It's 9 o'clock, the hour when Tom and I usually go into committee.'"

When an Ostrich Kicks.

"The only safe place in the neighborhood of a kicking ostrich is just behind it," said a zoo keeper. "An ostrich can kick a mule to death, but its kicks are delivered at an angle of 45 degrees. Within these 45 degrees, right ahead the 'pope's nose' of the bird, there is absolute safety. On the ostrich farms of California, when the birds are being driven, you will always see the ostrich boys holding on to the tails of bad kickers. The kickers tear along, and their scaly legs shoot out like piston rods, but the boys in the shelter of the pope's nose are safe."

Condemnation.

"What do you think of members of European aristocracy as sons-in-law?" asked the old time friend.

"Well," answered Mr. Cumrox, "the way their relatives beat them around indicates that they ought to make easy husbands."

The Idiotic Affair.

Irate Parent—Am I to understand there is some idiotic affair between you and that impecunious young ass, Lord Dilaris? Fair Daughter (very sweetly)—Only yes, papa!

It never seems to occur to persons who are getting married that they ought to take each other for good as well as for better or worse.

"There's a Reason"

A ROMANCE OF ROYALTY.

Granddaughters of Duke of Cambridge Lose Titles by Duke's Wedding.

The two pretty and clever granddaughters of the late Duke of Cambridge, Misses Iris and Daphne Fitzgeorge, created quite a small sensation in London recently, by their singing of several solos in the beautiful old church of St. Michael's, Cornhill. An over-flowing congregation of city men were delighted with Miss Iris's rendering of "O, had I Jubal's Lyre," Miss Daphne's "Angels ever bright and fair," and a duet from "Stabat Mater." The sisters are uncommonly handsome young ladies, and their vocalism would do credit to the professional platform. Miss Daphne also is a writer of considerable promise.

Their family history is one of the romances of British royalty. The late Duke of Cambridge married the burlesque actress Miss Fairbrother, but the alliance was morganatic under the act passed in 1772. By this act none of the British descendants of George II. could marry under 25 without the consent of the King. The Duke of Cambridge defied the act, and his descendants are thereby prevented from being princes and princesses. Miss Iris and Miss Daphne and their brother George are the children of the Duke's eldest son, Col. George Fitzgeorge, who died last year. Their uncles are Rear-Admiral Adolphus Frederick and Colonel Augustus Charles Frederick Fitzgeorge, the former born in 1848, the latter in 1847. The admiral is a typical British naval officer, bluff and hearty, with a fine fund of anecdotes, and a wonderful way of picturing in a few crisp words the scenes and people encountered during his 40 odd years of sea life. The colonel is an ardent sportsman, who has seen plenty of military life. The fact that the Fitzgeorges are morganatic children does not necessarily stand in the way of their being raised to the peerage.

PILE HOUSES IN AFRICA.

Natives Spend Nearly All Their Time on the Water.

At Lake Nokune, on the Guinea coast in Africa, there are a number of villages which resemble the prehistoric villages that stood on piles above the waters of the Swiss lakes. There are many scores of huts with gable ends and grass roofs lifted on piles to a height of about seven feet above the water. Rude verandahs surround the huts, with fences along their outer edge to keep the babies from rolling into the lake.

Beautifully draped men and women at all hours of the day are floating in dugouts on the quiet waters engaged in fishing, their chief means of livelihood. Poles instead of paddles are used to propel the canoes, for the water of the lake in nowhere more than over five or six feet in depth.

A wide natural channel extends southward from the lake to within 300 feet of the Atlantic. For some reason, years ago, the whites on the coast decided to connect the channel with the sea. The results were disastrous to the poor lake dwellers.

The tides brought floods of ocean water into the lake, which became so salt that the natives could not drink the water and many of their cattle perished. The fresh water fish were very much surprised by the changed conditions and retreated up the Sio river, while sea fish found a new home in the lake.

As no good was gained by this innovation the connection between the sea and the lake was closed again, and although the lake is still a little brackish the river fish have come back to their old haunts among the lake dwellings. A few sea fish are still living in the lake. The change from salinity to comparative freshness came about so gradually that they grew accustomed to the different conditions.

A Good Stamp Deal.

The recent death of Mr. E. J. Nankivell the well-known London journalist and philatelist — Mr. Nankivell was philatelic editor of "The Captain" for years—recalls the story of one of his most remarkable stamp deals. Just before the outbreak of the South African war a correspondent wrote to Mr. Nankivell asking if he could dispose of a large collection of South African stamps. Mr. Nankivell approached several dealers, but they said the stamps were practically valueless, and consequently not worth buying. Thinking that perhaps there might be a few worth keeping amongst the collection, Mr. Nankivell offered to buy them himself, and this offer the correspondent eagerly accepted. In due course Mr Nankivell received a huge quantity of South African stamps, and scarcely knew what to do with them. Then the South African war broke out, all the Boer stamps were called in, and those bought by Mr. Nankivell thus became valuable. So much so, in fact, that Mr. Nankivell realised something like £5,000 on the transaction.

The Chief Rabbi.

The one great regret of the Very Rev. Dr. Hermann Adler, the Chief Rabbi, whose seventieth birthday, which occurs on May 30th next, Jews all the world over are preparing to celebrate, is that he has been unable, like his friend General Booth, to travel far and visit all his friends. A remarkable man in many respects is the greatest Jewish minister in the world. It is fifty years ago that he preached his first sermon, and even in those days it was prophesied that he would succeed to the office of Chief Rabbi. His father was Chief Rabbi before him, and on his death, nineteen years ago, Dr. Adler was invested with the full powers of his office.

THE INVESTOR'S GREAT CHANCE

The MACGREGOR Syndicate is being formed for $20,000 with shares at $100 each, and will own 120 ACRES (3 claims: M. R. 3507 M. R. 3523, M. R. 3524) at the south end of GOW GANDA Lake, right in the midst of valuable discoveries.

Also G. G. 341 at Elkhorn Lake. The vendor reports and guarantees a rich discovery of native silver averaging 500 ozs. to the ton for full length of vein. This means $250 per ton, and is high grade shipping ore.

We consider this claim by itself to be worth, on its guaranteed silver showing, four times the entire capitalization of the Syndicate.

The Syndicate with its large holdings of valuable property will undoubtedly yield large profits to its members. The Syndicate will close within a few days as there is a lively demand for its shares.

When the Syndicate is closed it is proposed to form a company to take over, purchase and operate the three properties. The proposed capitalization of the company will be $2,000,000—a fair capitalization, for 120 acres, located as these properties are—the Syndicate will turn over the properties of the Company for, say, 1,200,000 shares of stock at $1 per share, par value, leaving 800,000 shares in Treasury of the Company to be sold at 50 cents a share for the installation of the machinery and thoroughly working the properties. This plan would give each holder of shares in the Syndicate 6,000 shares in the company for each share held. It is proposed to place the stock of the Company on the market at 50c a share, and on this basis members of the Syndicate will be entitled to have their stock sold share for share with treasury stock. This would give members of the syndicate $3,000 in cash for each share held in the syndicate, less a brokerage of, say 5 per cent. for selling.

SURFACE SILVER VEINS OF FABULOUS RICHNESS CHARACTERIZES GOW GANDA.

Forty-acre properties that six months ago could have been had for the staking have sold at prices ranging up to $350,000.

It is reasonable to expect that the MACGREGOR properties will be among the richest producers, and the chance of securing an interest should be taken advantage of.

SAFETY—Our confidence in the safety of the investment is expressed in the fact that we have taken shares in the Syndicate. We think it is a first-class investment, and we offer it to careful, conservative men as such, in our belief. We call it an unique opportunity for men of moderate means; that others appreciate it to be so is shown by the keen demand for shares. Send your remittance at once if you want to get in.

All moneys are deposited in the Bank to the credit of the "MacGregor Mines Syndicate" and cannot be withdrawn—only by authority of the Syndicate. Syndicate Shares are absolutely non-assessable No personal liability.

Hardy Lead & Zinc Co.

Wealthy Jonesboro Men Form Company to Develop Arkansas Lead and Zinc Properties

The Hardy Lead and Zinc Company, with headquarters at Jonesboro, Ark., have acquired 646 acres of land in Northeast Arkansas, and have already done sufficient work to warrant a further development of the property. An assay of ore from the property shows that there is undoubtedly both silver and zinc in great quantities. The president of the company, Mr. C. L. Kennard, director of the First National Bank of Jonesboro, has spent a good part of three years upon this land and believes it to be a good proposition, in so much that he accepted the presidency of the company.

A report of the mining engineer, Mr. Jess Hicks, is very flattering to the prospects of the company. Among other things he says: "In my opinion this company offers a safe and profitable opportunity for investment."

The officers and directors of the company are prominent Jonesboro business men, who have resided in that community for thirty years and more. Mr. C. L. Kennard, president, is a director of the First National Bank; Mr. H. W. Applegate, vice president, is a prominent attorney; Mr. J. W. Kennard, secretary, is a retired business man; Mr. J. E. Parr, treasurer, is the cashier of the First National Bank. The company is capitalized at $500,000, of which $240,000 is treasury stock, par value $25 a share.

The lead and zinc fields of Northern Arkansas are rapidly rivaling those of the Joplin district, in fact, Joplin miners are coming into the Arkansas field daily. The Hardy Lead & Zinc Company, having a rich property, desire to develop it at once, and for this purpose have placed in our hands 500 shares of its capital stock for sale to our customers at the ridiculously low price of $6.25 per share.

We invite you to investigate this proposition thoroughly, also the standing of the officers of the company, who are all well known gentlemen. Opportunities do not wait. The time to buy is when the company wants to sell and wants to sell badly. The time to buy is when all stocks are at the lowest ebb, and that time is now. It takes money to develop mining properties. You have the opportunity to get in now when the company can use you; if you wait until the property is developed and has a large income from its ores, the company won't need you then and won't sell you its stock for less than its full value, which will probably be in the neighborhood of $100 a share. The low price of $6.25 a share has been named in order to attract investors during a season, when capital is difficult to enlist in new mining enterprises. We recommend this as an investment worthy of your attention. If this looks like a square deal to you, send us your check covering the number of shares of stock desired at $6.25 a share, par value $25. We will sell you 10 shares of this stock on payment of $62.25 down and nine equal monthly payments.

For further information, engineer's report, copy of assays, etc., write or call at our office.

Cosgrave's Beer

Words of praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you.

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

Its self-evident honesty of purpose, purity, brilliancy, body, and every other attribute that goes to make a perfect beer are ever in evidence.

ANOTHER BIG FACTORY—THE PURITY WARE, LIMITED, OF PETERBOROUGH

Immense Concern, to Manufacture All Kinds of Enamel and Galvanized Iron Ware, to be Established Here—Building 200 Feet by 500 Feet—Will Employ from 100 to 500 Hands—Backed by One of the Wealthiest American Firms—By-law Given Two Readings and will be Submitted to the People on June 1st.

A large factory will be located in Peterborough in the near future. It is known as the Purity Ware Limited, of Peterborough. They will manufacture all kinds of enamel ware, galvanized iron ware and range galvanized boilers. They will erect a factory 200 feet by 500 feet, with the front part two stories high. The machinery will cost from $100,000 to $150,000. They will employ 100 hands to start and anywhere from that number to 500 hands. They are backed by one of the largest and wealthiest firms in the United States, who are manufacturing the same kind of wares.

The Purity Ware Limited and the City Council met last night and put the finishing touches on the agreement which really was the reading of the bylaw the first and second time, as all the details had been worked out before. The bylaw is now ready to be submitted to the people on June 1st next and is being advertised.

This is the biggest proposition which has been placed before the ratepayers for many years. It is one of the biggest industries which has been established in Ontario for a long time. This city is particularly fortunate in securing it. To the chairman and members of the Manufacturers' Committee is due a great deal of credit as they have handled the deal most successfully up to the present. It is now up for the people to decide whether they want it or not.

The new factory will be located upon the property known as the old race track situated on the east side of the locks bridge and alongside the railroad track. It is in the corporation and in a splendid situation for a factory. The company's architects have already been busy and have surveyed the property and have made the preliminary plans for the building. There were submitted to the council and were approved. An outline of the immense structure is given on this page.

The particulars of the bylaw in brief are given below and are worthy the most careful thought. The industry is a most important one. A market has already been established in Canada and a large portion of the export trade will be looked after by the Peterborough factory, while the local market is rapidly increasing. The goods to be manufactured are all kinds of kitchen and other utensils made from enamel, galvanized iron as well as all kinds of galvanized iron wares. The employes will be skilled and will demand good wages. The New York factory was visited by members of the council who were more enthusiastic than ever over securing the industry for Peterborough.

When the council met last night Messrs. McFarland, Noble and Edwards of Toronto, representatives of the Purity Ware, Limited, were present.

Ald. Gillespie moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the bylaw to aid to aid the Purity Ware Limited, be given its first and second readings.—Carried.

It was early in March that the Manufacturers' Committee first heard of the organization of the proposed new manufacturing company. Ald. Gillespie lost no time in getting into communication with the promoters. Messrs. McFarland, Edwards and Noble, all of Toronto. Arrangements were made for a meeting of the promoters with the Manufacturers' Committee. The gentlemen came here and were shown about the city. Several sites were visited and the visitors were very favorably impressed.

They were asked to make a proposition to the city. This was done and a special committee consisting of Aldermen Gillespie, Hicks and Turner and City Clerk Armstrong, went up to Toronto where a second session was held. At this meeting the name of the New York firm which is behind the new company was learned and arrangements were made for a trip to New York City to interview the management of that company. Ald. Gillespie and City Clerk Armstrong for the city, and Ald. Bradburn for the Board of Trade went to New York, where they saw the management of the company, and were shown through part of the immense factory located there. This company receives the very highest rating from the banks and financial agencies, their capital and reserves being many millions.

The local representatives secured an agreement from the New York Company to supply the necessary machinery, which is to be valued by an independent valuator at $100,000 to $150,000, the company to take stock in the new business for that amount. In return for this the city of Peterborough was to make certain concessions, and these are embodied in the bylaw. Neither the city nor the New York Company are bound to expend one dollar until the Canadian company has $100,000 subscribed and paid up working capital.

Since the New York trip the whole question has hinged on a satisfactory agreement being made between the city and the Canadian company. With this end in view several sessions have been held. The matter was submitted to the Committee of the Whole Council and endorsed by them and the Manufacturers' Committee was authorized to go ahead and complete the contract. The Manufacturers' Committee and the Canadian company have reached an agreement which is satisfactory to the parties concerned and it now only remains for the bylaw to be submitted to the people and for the people to carry it.

THE CONTRACT.

The bylaw which the council gave its first two readings last night provides in part as follows:

The Purity Ware Limited of Peterborough, is to erect a factory building 200 feet by 500 feet. Part of the building will be two stories, but the greater portion will be only one, but built so solidly that a second or third storey can be put on. The cost to be at least $50,000. In this building will be installed machinery to the value of $100,000. A paid up working capital of $100,000 to be raised. The company is to employ 100 hands the first year and 150 hands for the next nineteen years. On condition that the full number of hands are not employed, the company is to pay for the rate in proportion to the number that are employed.

The city is to hold a mortgage of $50,000 upon the building, site and fixed machinery for twenty years, and are to have one member upon the board of directors during that time.

The Adjourned Vestry Meeting of St. John's

The adjourned meeting of St. John's Vestry was held last night, the rector, Canon Davidson presiding.

Reports from the following societies were submitted; The Junior Chapter Brotherhood St. Andrew by Master Pigeon; the Woman's Auxiliary, by Miss Manck; treasurer's report of the same by Mrs. Peter Campbell; the Junior Branch Woman's Auxiliary, by Mrs. Palmer; the Girls' Auxiliary by Miss M. Votes of thanks were also tendered the different societies.

Extensive Improvements to St. Luke's Manse

There was a large attendance at the adjourned vestry meeting in Luke's church last night. The report of the previous meeting was submitted and adopted. The committee appointed to report on the church property did so and recommended extensive improvements to the rectory.

The committee on the vested choir question reported recommending the adoption of the idea. Before anything else is done however, a vote will be taken of the congregation by sending cards to each adult member who will mark them in favor or against the vested choir.

The Advisor Board was elected as follows;—Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, Mr. G. L. Bay and Mr. G. B. Browning, church wardens, and Messrs H. Nesbitt, J. J. Turner, jr., Arthur Kingdon, M. J. Jamieson, D. Spence, E. A. Peck and H. Adams.

West Peterborough Election Protest

Justice McMahon and Justice Magee have been appointed to try the West Peterborough protest. In order to prevent the running of the statute on application will be made by the counsel for the petitioner as required by statute, to extend the time from May 21 when the six months during which a protest must otherwise be tried, is up. The dates for examination and trial will not be set as yet, the respondent, Mr. Stratton, having fyled an affidavit, declining to waive his right to be free from interference while in attendance upon his parliamentary duties. The applications for dates, however, will be made immediately upon the close of the session, and it is to permit of this that the extension of time that may possibly be required, is being applied for. In other respects the proceedings go on meanwhile as in an ordinary action.

License Commissioners

A meeting of the License Commissioners was called last night to consider the granting of licenses to the seven hotels held over from last week. The commissioners met but decided upon no action. They will meet again this evening.

Annual Meeting of Fuel and Cartage Company

In spite of the financial stringency the past year has been the most successful in the history of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, Ltd. The annual meeting of that company was held last night in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, and a large number of the directors and shareholders were present. Managing Director Wm. Butler made his report which was exceedingly satisfactory to the company and he was given credit for his able management and good business policy. The company is in A.1. condition, and prospects are very bright for the future.

A resolution of condolence was passed by the shareholders and directed to be sent to the wife and family of the late Alfred Parker who was one of the company's directors.

The following officers and directors were elected;

President and Managing Director—Wm. Butler.

Vice-Pres.—T. Hooper.

Sec.-Treas.—E. K. Hopkins.

Directors—President, vice-president and Messrs. W. E. Talbot, Jas Clancy and R. C. Braund.

Some Warm Criticism

"To infringe on the liberty of the British subject, and try to arrest this poor girl and put her in prison over Sunday, like the coroner attempted to do on Friday night, had no precedent in the records of British procedure, and contrary to all British law," said Mr. Staunton to Judge Teetzel today.

"I have not met a counsel in Ontario who has not condemned the methods of the Crown counsel in the most pronounced terms.

"Counsel in this civilized country accuses a girl of 22 years of age of murdering her own sister. He gets her as feeble as possible, and then he thunders at her, to get her to say she murdered her sister.

"If the wings of justice are so badly broken as they have been in this case then justice in Canada has been dragged in the mud.

"Your lordship sitting on this bench would not permit such a thing. It was not the license of counsel. It was the torture of this girl."

"The family was subjected to questions which should make the questioner ashamed to show his face in a courtroom again. He cast aspersions upon every member of the family and tried to undermine their reputation.

The Sheet Steel Rolling Mills will Also be Established in Peterborough

Good news usually comes in a bunch. The present is no exception. At the council meeting last night Mr. Noble of the Purity Ware, Limited, stated that it was also proposed to erect a rolling mills in connection with the Purity Ware factory. These works to be located on the opposite side of the railway tracks.

After the council meeting Mr. Noble informed The Times that the proposed rolling mills proposition was actual facts. If the bylaw is carried by the people for the Purity Ware Company, a rolling mills for the manufacture of block tin and sheet steel would be constructed in connection with it. This portion of the business would be gone on with without any further appeal to the city, except for a fair assessment.

The building for the rolling mills would be at least double the size of the Purity Ware buildings. The produce of the mills would be something new in Canada. Although there is a large quantity of sheet steel and block tin used it is all imported.

Mr. Noble also informed The Times that his company fully intended to commence operations on both factories this year, and once they got started they will be rushed to completion, as they are anxious to get their machinery going and their goods on the market.

Crown Determined that Miss Kinrade Must be the Next to Testify

Hamilton, April 26.—In view of Justice Teetzel's action in granting the writ of certiorari, the Kinrade inquest was adjourned again without hearing any evidence. Crown-Attorney Washington is satisfied that the Divisional Court will dispose of the matter without delay on Wednesday, and the jury will probably arrange to meet again on Wednesday night.

The Crown is determined that Florence Kinrade shall be the next witness to go on the stand.

Corney Burns Won Bout from Kelly of Buffalo

There was a big crowd at the Auditorium Roller Rink last night to witness the two boxing bouts, the first that have been put on for a long time in this city. The main go was between Corney Burns, the local clever welterweight, and James Kelly of Buffalo, a very speedy boy who has put a lot of good ones to sleep. The bout was for ten rounds, and was referred by Harvey Staunton.

The first bout was between Jack Edwards of Toronto, and Geo. Little of this city. It was a six round go and was won by Edwards.

The Kelly-Burns match was a lively and clever exhibition of boxing. Kelly is a good speedy one with the mits and is also fast on his feet, but Burns started in from the first and had the best of the go until the latter part of the contest when the Bison began to come to himself. It was too late however. Corney had outpointed him in the early part and his only chance to win was a knock out, and Burns will take his chances on that any day. The tenth round was conspicuous for the number of clinches.

The old fashioned way of doing, a weak stomach, or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription— Dr Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerves. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days, and see! Improvement will promptly and surely follow. Sold by all dealers.

WEDDING BELLS

WAINWRIGHT—IRWIN.

Mr. Samuel Wainwright of Strathcona, Alta., a former resident of Peterborough, was united in marriage on Saturday evening to Miss Elizabeth Irwin, daughter of Mr. Andrew Irwin of Peterborough. The ceremony took place at 8.30 o'clock at St. Andrew's manse, and was performed by Rev. J. G. Potter. The bride and groom were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Wainwright left yesterday for Strathcona, where they will reside. Mr. Wainwright is the proprietor of a flourishing undertaking and livery business at Strathcona, and he and his bride will have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Children's Aid Benefit Concert

There was a good sized audience at the Conservatory of Music Hall last night. The attraction was the benefit concert for the Children's Aid Society. The program was put on entirely by local talent, and it was the unanimous opinion of the audience that it was the best concert that has been given here this year. Those responsible for the entertainment are to be congratulated upon their enterprise as are also those who took part for their great kindness.

Learning Things

We are All in the Apprentice Class

When a simple change of diet brings back health and happiness the story is briefly told. A lady of Springfield, Ill., says:

"After being afflicted for years with nervousness and heart trouble, I received a shock four years ago that left me in such a condition that my life was despaired of.

"I could get no relief from doctors nor from the numberless heart and nerve remedies I tried, because I didn't know that coffee was daily putting me back more than the doctors could put me ahead.

"Finally at the request of a friend I left off coffee and began the use of Postum and against my convictions I gradually improved in health until for the past 6 or 8 months I have been entirely free from nervousness and those terrible sinking, weakening spells of heart trouble.

"My troubles all came from the use of coffee which I had drunk from childhood and yet they disappeared when I quit coffee and took up the use of Postum."

Many people marvel at the effects of leaving off coffee and drinking Postum, but there is nothing marvelous about it—only common sense. Coffee is a destroyer—Postum is a rebuilder. That's the reason.

Creeps Like a Serpent

Catarrh is an Insidious Disease, Inherently Malignant at First, but Horrible by Relentless if not Checked.

No disease makes such inroads into vital conditions as Catarrh. It spreads from the place of beginning to the lungs, bronchial tubes, stomach, intestines, and before long all the organs of the body are affected.

A splendid remedy, attended with remarkable success in curing Catarrh, has lately come prominently to the front. Its name is Catarrhozone, and no case is recorded where it failed to quickly relieve and cure.

The strong points about Catarrhozone are that it is both a local and constitutional treatment. It not only affords quick relief to the local symptoms, but also purifies the blood of all internal poisons, builds up and strengthens the system.

Catarrhozone inhaler supplies in abundance of medicated air which is breathed in at the mouth, and after passing through every air cell and all passages of the breathing organs, is slowly exhaled through the nostrils.

This penetrating, volatile antiseptic at once kill the germs that cause Catarrh and prevents the disease spreading when once established. It is so healing and soothing that the inflamed membranes and sore spots are restored to normal and healthy condition in a few days.

Catarrhozone cleanses the nose and throat and keeps them entirely free of mucous discharge. It prevents dropping in the throat, cures headache and makes breathing easy and the breath pure and sweet.

To build up and invigorate the system, a blood purifier and tonic called Catarrhozone should be taken after each meal. In conjunction with Catarrhozone it is a valuable aid in establishing such a healthy condition of the body that Catarrh cannot exist.

Other medicines have been known to give relief, but to permanently eradicate every trace of Catarrh you must use Catarrhozone. It is a common-sense, convenient, clean method of cure that is endorsed by the profession and all intelligent pharmacists.

You are sure to be benefitted quickly and positively cured by Catarrhozone. The complete outfit costs only $1.00. Trial size, 25c. Sold by Druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

AN ALLIANCE FOR PEACE

Andrew Carnegie, addressing the Peace Society of New York, said that a time was coming when the world would be policed just as a well-governed country is policed today. He referred to the history of California in the early days of gold mining. The mines attracted adventurers from all parts of the world. Courts of Justice were unknown. Maxims now used by nations were then used by individuals. Each man resolved to be "too powerful to be attacked," and armed himself in order to bring about general peace and safety. The result was not peace and safety, but deadly feuds, and "a condition approaching anarchy. The best elements of society arose and reversed this policy. The Vigilance Committee was formed as a rude court, and it, in turn, was superseded by regular courts of law. "Only when the arming of men was not permitted did the reign of peace begin."

Reasoning from this analogy, Mr. Carnegie says that there must sooner or later emerge from the present unparalleled increase of armaments a league of peace embracing the most advanced nations. Improvements in communication have now converted the whole world into a community so closely bound together as one of the old-time nations. The commerce of this community exceeds twenty-eight billions of dollars. All civilized nations are deeply interested in the world's peace, and the time has passed when any one or two nations can be permitted to break it. Disputes must be arbitrated. "Civilized nations have now acquired a common right to be consulted when the peace of the world is at stake, and the crime of man killing man, the crime of crimes, is threatened." The peaceful nations, he adds, "have a right to know the guilty nation or nations, whether one or both—heavy, indeed, will be its or their responsibility."

There is a certain defect in Mr. Carnegie's analogy. It does not destroy the force of his argument, but it must be fixed. In the California of old days, and in other lawless communities, the trouble was caused by certain well-recognized "bad men" who rather gloried in that reputation, or by men whose thievish habits were generally recognized as a menace to honest citizens. In the present situation each nation declares that it is honest, peaceable and law-abiding, and is only arming itself against the predatory designs of some rival, which likewise proclaims that it is honest and law-abiding, and is arming only for self-defence. Great Britain and Germany are not semi-barbarous nations, but stand in the very vanguard of civilization. It is as if the peace of California had been in danger, not from gamblers and thieves, but from two leading citizens, prominent in business and educational projects.

Nevertheless the thing which Andrew Carnegie proposes can be done and will be done, and the way to bring it about is by an alliance between thug British Empire and the United States. Neither is perfect, nor free from the spell of militarism. Nevertheless, in these two communities more than in any other, there is a growth of the feeling that war is not a glorious or even a legitimate business, but a nuisance; a necessary evil under present conditions, but still an evil. Conscription is resisted, military service is avoided except under excitement of alarm. In North America the conditions which keep Europe in continual turmoil have been abolished. If Europe were in the same position as North America, the aims of the peace advocates would be virtually accomplished.

The resources of Great Britain and her colonies and of the United States are more than equal to those of any other possible combination of powers. The resources of the United States and of Canada far exceed those of all Europe, and these countries will some day contain population far exceeding that of all Europe. Their interests are common interests. Captain Mahan, in a very interesting article in Collier's Magazine, conveys to the reader the impression that the safety of the United States on this continent spends largely upon the maintenance of British sea-power. The interests of the Empire and of the Republic are common, almost identical interests. By united action they could in time bring about such a condition as Andrew Carnegie desires. They could make it impossible for the peace of the world to be disturbed by European quarrels, ambitions, and feudal and military traditions. In Asia there is arising another great power, whose influence will almost surely be thrown on the side of peace—the Empire of China. It is the continent of Europe that bars the way to peace, and the progress of the world is slowly, but surely diminishing the relative strength of Europe, and its power as a mischief maker.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn back powerful heart to flesh again. That is impossible, but I can now surely kill the pains and purge of their destructive elements.

I joined—with a Chemist in the City of to Germany—with a Chemist in the City of [illegible]—and found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without a particle of doubt, I unconditionally trusted many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it will surely purge all curable germs of this heretofore severe destroyer of happiness. These mud-like granules of concentrated Blood Purifying Elements, formed in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous waste matters pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real excuse for suffering anyone to suffer longer with real, honest, curable Rheumatism. Try it, and be convinced and happy. We ask, and in confidence recommend our best.

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Belle, The Jessie, Yeager Canyon, Leonad, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Riobesbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lone Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.82.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Stallion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, is sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thinest being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Clingsmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same lodge, and are now 65 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense sheets already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady, earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 25c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

WILD MEN OF AUSTRALIA.

Northern Part of Island Contains Many Degenerate Whites.

The wild white men of the vast "Never Never Land," of Northern Australia, to whom Rev. T. Major is conducting a mission, are known to our colonial cousins as "white blackfellows," an expression that, while involving a certain contradiction in terms, nevertheless fits them to a nicety.

Some of these voluntary outcasts from their kind are present-day fugitives from justice. Others are the descendants of runaway convicts who "took to the bush" in the bad old days of transportation. They live amongst the aborigines, aping their manners and customs, and subsisting on the same always scanty and frequently loathesome food. According to Mr. Major, they are exceedingly shy and difficult to approach, fleeing at the first sign of a "tame" white man.

The mere idea of individuals of our race and color sinking to this low level is revolting. Yet the Australian white blackfellow has his counterpart in other quarters of the globe, notably in the Guiana hinterland, where whole colonies of white savages are known to be interspersed amongst the bush negroes, than whom no more degraded race exists anywhere on earth. Like the wild whites of the Never Never Land, too, these unhappy people are descended from runaway convicts, mostly French.

Then, again, there are the small isolated communities of white Indians, so-called, which recent research has revealed living at various points near the head-waters of the Amazon. Ethnologists have been completely puzzled as to their origin. They possess the Caucasian features, and in the dialects they speak can be traced many more or less archaic Spanish words and phrases.

This has led to the theory being broached that they are the descendants of some of the followers of Orellana, the discoverer of the Amazon, some hundreds of whom are known to have deserted their leader and wandered aside into the pathless forests during the first stage of his arduous and ever-memorable journey.

First Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. Reginald McKenna, who is very much in the limelight just now on account of the navy discussion, has a genius for figures, and more than once has swamped his critics with an avalanche of hard facts and figures when they were speaking in generalities. He is one of the younger members of the Cabinet, being now in his forty-fifth year. Before he entered Parliament he practised as a barrister. He is one of the athletes of the Commons, rowing bow in the Cambridge University eight of 1887, and winning the Grand and Stewards' Cups at Henley. It was in this race, by the way, that the celebrated Oxford oarsman, Mr. D. H. McLean, broke his oar when the Dark Blues were gaining ground as the result of a spurt.

It may be remembered that Mr. McKenna was married last year, a fact which recalls rather an amusing incident. Mr. McKenna was arguing in the House of Commons one night in favor of the Government's Old-Age Pension scheme of 5s. for people living alone and 2s. 6d. for old couples living together. "It is relatively cheaper," he said, "for two persons living together than for one." The House began to chuckle, for it was only a fortnight since that Mr. McKenna was married. "Well, you ought to know by this time," commented the burly Labor man, Mr. Will Thorne, in stentorian tones. The House roared. Mr. McKenna blushed.

Got Hubby's Job.

A Hull couple's wedding has just been postponed owing to the bride, who is a typist, having obtained her intended husband's employment. This singular sequel was the result of an arrangement between the parties, made at the bride's request, that she might help in swelling the household income for a few months. She was already in employment, but an advertisement offering a bigger salary for a typist tempted her to write for the situation. She was successful in obtaining the appointment. A few days later her fiance told her that the wedding must be postponed because he had lost his employment. It then transpired that she had obtained his work at a reduced salary. The bride was sorely perplexed, but in the circumstances, she could but accept the inevitable, and the preparations for the wedding were countermanded. The bride had cherished the anticipation that she would have been able to accompany her husband as he would have been but for this contretemps, to and from work.

Didn't Believe the Duke.

Stories of amusing situations caused by the Duke of Norfolk's negligence in dress are still going the rounds. A short time ago he observed that some members of a party of excursionists had damaged some of the foliage on his estate, so, going up to the strangers, he began to remonstrate with them. "Ain't the duke got any keepers," exclaimed one of the men, sullenly, "that a little chap like you should interfere?" The duke smilingly replied that he happened to be the duke himself. But the tripper wouldn't believe it. "Go on!" he said, laughing heartily. "Why, the duke goes to dine at Marlborough House, and they'd never have a little man like you even in the servants' hall."

"It's Never Too Late to Learn."

It is not very often that a man starts learning a foreign language when he has reached the seventies. Lord Brassey, however, who has been giving his views on the naval problem, is a firm believer in the saying, "It's never too late to learn." Two or three weeks ago he celebrated his 73rd birthday, and it was only last year that he started to learn German in order to read Prince Hohenlohe's "Memoirs." He adopted the system that when he did not know a word he put a number over it and in the margin, and looked it up in the dictionary. When he began the book he had to look up twenty-five words of a page, and slowly got down to five.

GOLD FIELD ROMANCES

HOW EMPIRE'S ELDORADOS HAVE BEEN DISCOVERED.

A Convict In New South Wales Was the First to Discover a Nugget But It Profitted Him Little — Single Australian Nugget Weighed Over 100 Pounds—Klondike Prospectors Had It All to Themselves.

The discovery of gold in Australia was remarkable. A convict, while at work in New South Wales, one day came across a small nugget of gold. When he was questioned, however, he could not point out the spot where he had found it, with the result that he was dragged before a magistrate, and charged with melting down a gold watch, for which alleged crime he was awarded one hundred and fifty lashes!

After this time small quantities of gold were found, but in every case the discoverer was regarded with suspicion, being considered to be a robber, and so it was not until the discovery of gold in California that mining first began in the colony. When the rush began, whole streets in Sydney were deserted and business came to a standstill owing to the fact that all the servants and assistants vanished through the Blue Mountains.

Soon other gold discoveries were made in Australia, with the result that the towns were drained of their males. In the case of California, men were willing to pay large sums of gold dust for the opportunity of glancing at a woman through the cracks of a shanty; in Geelong, however, the women crowded to the doors whenever a male passed through the town, as men were so rare as to become curiosities. That town in four months lost nearly three-quarters of its inhabitants.

The Australian fields differed from all other gold fields owing to the size of the nuggets of pure gold which were found. An aborigine began playing with a glittering substance which turned out to be a mass of gold weighing 106 1-2 pounds, and having a value of over $20,000.

Actually gold could be picked up from the surface, one party of five men obtaining $35,000 of gold in eight hours. Considerably larger nuggets than these were found. For instance, the Welcome Stranger nugget weighed 2,395 ounces, and another nugget was sold for $52,500.

According to legend one of the principal West Australian fields was discovered owing to a boy picking up a stone to throw at a crow. It was found that this stone contained gold, and the fact was reported to the warden. The official immediately telegraphed to the governor of the colony that a boy had picked up a stone to throw at a crow—in the excitement of the moment, however, he omitted to state that the stone contained gold. The astonished governor therefore wired back, "Yes, and what happened to the crow" Now the goldfields in Western Australia occupy an area eight times that of England.

Possibly the most remarkable fields in the history of gold mining are those occurring in frozen North America. In the case of every other goldfield the original discoverers fared about the worst owing to the fact that the news became at once public and attracted vast hordes of adventurers.

The men who first discovered gold in the Yukon had no competitors for months owing to the isolated position of the fields, and the enormous difficulties of reaching them. In fact, the news of the discovery did not leak out until the original discoverers had taken all the gold they wanted, and had come back to civilization wealthy men. At the time of the discovery the district was practically an unknown territory containing only a handful of inhabitants.

Take the case of the discovery on the Bonanza Creek of the Klondike river. The discoverer and the 300 inhabitants of Forty-Mile had the richest known gold deposits in the world to themselves for many months, and accordingly made astounding fortunes. A barman in the town was too idle to go to the top of the creek as he turned aside into a smaller creek close at hand. Astounding as the fact is, he made $3,000,000 out of the gold he won.

The districts round about were simply a mass of gold deposits, containing good-sized nuggets. Throughout the whole of the winter the miners dug up the "pay dirt," and then when the spring came set out to wash it, and not one of the claims proved valueless.

One remarkable fact regarding the Canadian goldfields, however, was the lack of violence and lawlessness; in fact, the people trusted each other to such an extent that when a purchaser entered a store he threw his gold dust upon the counter, and turned his back while it was being weighed, as it would have been an insult to the storekeeper to doubt his honesty by watching the weighing process.

Gold was not discovered in the famous Witwatersrand district of South Africa until 1885, Johannesburg springing into existence the next year. The history of these goldfields is singularly prosaic compared with the others, owing to the fact that the precious metal occurs in reefs, and therefore it was out of the question for individual men to pick up fortunes.

The Rand gold mines have to be worked by means of corporations possessing a large capital, mining being carried on in much the same way that coal is mined in this country. The gold is found in strata which form a kind of sandwich, and some of the reefs dip to great depths. It is believed that each mile length in the central section of the Rand bears gold of the enormous value of $300,000,000.

Lease of Water Powers

Province of Quebec.

Notice is hereby given that the lease of the two groups of water-powers below mentioned, will be offered at public auction in the sales' room of the department of Lands and Forests, in this city, on Tuesday, the 11th May next, at 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon.

The lease will be for seventy-five years on the terms below stipulated and on such other conditions as will be made known to the public on the day of the auction.

1. The "Kai-Kai-Ke" group (River des Quinze).

Description; —The water-powers created by the Kai-Kai-Ke rapid and the other rapids and falls situated above it as far as Lake des Quinze, in the county of Pontiac, at about 12 miles from the Indian Village of North Temiscamingue to which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains, at Temiscamingue ascend; also four hundred acres of land in the vicinity of the said rapid and of the Kai-Kai-Ke portage, from the head of the said rapid to a line drawn across the river des Quinze, at nine hundred feet above the entry of the channel called "Bryson Creek," together with all the lands that may be flooded in consequence of the construction of the dams intended to submerge the rapids above that of Kai-Kai-Ke and to Lake des Quinze exclusively, without such dams causing any portion whatever of the waters of River des Quinze to overflow into some other stream.

Total head, 98 feet; absolute power at low water, 32,000 horse-power, without warranty of exact measurement.

The lessee shall be obliged to expend a sum of $250,000 on the development of the said water-powers within the three years following the passing of the lease, in default whereof the lease shall be cancelled and the payments made confiscated.

2. "Inland Rapids," group (River des Quinze).

Description; — The water-powers formed by the rapids known under the name of "Big Pipe Stone," "Little Pipe Stone" and "Islands Rapids," in the same county, at about eight miles from North Temiscamingue, on which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains of Temiscamingue ascend, including; 1. The bed and the water-powers of the River des Quinze, properly so called from a line drawn across that river at nine hundred feet above the entry or head of "Bryson Creek," to the prolongation across the said river of the division line of ranges 7 and 8 of the township of Guigues; 2. The bed and the water powers of "Bryson Creek," channel or arm of the said river; 3. The large island between the river des Quinze, properly so called and the said "Bryson Creek," as well as all the islands and fore shores and all the inlets and nooks in the said river and said "Bryson Creek," between the two lines above described; 4. A strip of land of 10 chains (660 feet) in width or depth (measured in a due north and south direction) along northern bank of the river des Quinze and of "Bryson Creek" and extending between the two lines above described; 5. Lastly, a strip of land also of 10 chains in width or depth, along the southern bank of the river des Quinze, between the two said lines drawn transversely to the river.

All these lands, bed of the river des Quinze, bed of Bryson Creek, islands, etc., covering a superficies of about 2000 acres.

The difference of level in the river des Quinze between the two lines above described is 95 feet in round numbers representing at low water, an absolute power of 32,000 horse-power, the whole without warranty of exact measurement.

The lessee shall be obliged to expend $300,000 on the development and working of these hydraulic powers within a delay of three years from the date of the passing of the lease under pain of resiliation of the lease and the confiscation of any payment made in the said delay.

The government binds itself to not sell for ten years from this any lands on the banks of the river des Quinze on a width or depth of at least fifteen chains (990 feet) beyond the ends above designated, from the foot of the rapids called "Island Rapids" to Lake des Quinze exclusively, so that the lessee may, at all points of the bank have free access to the river and that he may choose within that area the lands necessary for the full working of the said water-powers, which lands, whose superficies—including that of the lands mentioned in the above descriptions—shall not exceed 2500 acres for the "Island Rapids" group, and 2000 acres for the "Kai-Kai-Ke" group, shall also form part of the property leased.

The upset price shall be fixed on the day of the auction and each person desirous of becoming a bidder, must deposit at the Department of Lands and Forests before the sale, an accepted cheque for $10,000 which will be returned to him after the sale, unless he be the person to whom the property will be adjudged; to this person the said sum of $10,000 will be refunded when he shall have given proof of complete compliance with the conditions prescribed as to the development of the said water-powers, which compliance must be messed within the six months following the date of the lease.

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

Weary, Worn Out, Tired

If You Feel Poorly this Spring this Article is worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health. If the nerves are weak, if the stomach liver, bowels or kidneys, fail to work properly, healthy surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health—the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Barton of Lewistown. "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depression, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned of the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvellous. I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

The Bell Telephone Company has a gang of men at work stringing a new line from Peterborough to Lakefield. When completed this will be three lines in service between Lakefield and this city. Looking for Suckers

Suckers are reported to be running but no large hauls have been secured as yet. Both at the locks and at the dams north of Auburn Railway bridge small numbers of the fish varying in sizes have been seen and the users of the gaff and net will now proceed to get busy. The arrival of the suckers in every year eagerly awaited and it will not be long before those who relish the food that may be secured by means of this fish will be able to satisfy themselves to their heart's content.

The New Factory

The company to have the option to pay off the entire loan at any time during the 20 years.

THE CITY'S SHARE.

On condition that the Purity Ware Limited perform their part of the contract the city is to give a free site of ten acres of land; give exemption from taxes, except school and local improvement taxes, for ten years; to loan $50,000 for 20 years; at 4 per cent. per annum to be paid back in ten equal payments after the first ten years. The city to pay over one half of the loan, or $25,000, when the factory is completed, and the second $25,000 when the machinery is installed and ready to run.

Providing the bylaw carries and in anyway the company does not proceed with the work of construction, they have deposited $250 to pay for the cost of submitting the bylaw.

A GOOD PROPOSITION.

The above is briefly the provisions of the contract between the Canadian Co., the American Co., and the City of Peterborough. Is there any one who could say that the Manufacturers' Committee has not made a capital bargain? A great deal of credit is due these gentlemen, for they have a business proposition which must appeal to every property holder in the city. It is a big concern and is bound to grow still greater until in the not distant future it will rival in importance the Canadian General Electric Company, which has done so much for Peterborough.

Baby Fell on to the Stove

Mrs. T. S. Dougall, of 523 Flora avenue, Winnipeg, says:—"My baby girl was arranging some of her doll's washing on a clothes rack beside the stove, when she fell, and her hand, being thrown out to try and save herself, came in contact with the side of the stove. She sustained a serious burn, and her cries and screams were terrible.

"I sent out to the druggist for the best remedy he had to use on a burn. He said there was nothing to equal Zam-Buk, and sent back a supply. I applied this, and it soothed the pain so quickly that the child laughed through her tears. I bound up the hand in Zam-Buk, and each day applied Zam-Buk frequently and liberally, until the burn was quite cured. The little one was soon able to go on with her play, and we had no trouble with her during the time the burn was being healed. I feel very grateful for this cure, and would recommend all mother to keep Zam-Buk handy for emergencies like this."

This is good advice. Zam-Buk, being purely herbal in its composition, is particularly suited to the delicate skin of children. While a powerful healer, it is also highly antiseptic. Applied to a burn, a cut, a scald or a scratch—to any injury of the skin, in fact—it will kill all disease germs, and removes all danger of festering, blood-poisoning, or inflammation. At the same time, it stimulates the cells to great activity, and fresh healthy skin is soon produced to repair the damage. Fifty cents spent on a box of Zam-Buk has saved scores of people as many dollars, to say nothing of saving hours of pain!

New Curios for Historical Society

The Historical Society has recently received several interesting and valuable additions to its collection in the Victoria Museum, Inverlea Park. From Mr. George Boucher, an officer of the Hudson Bay Company, a shipment was received, consisting of Eskimo domestic utensils. The largest of these is a rectangular stone box which seems to have been chiselled out of solid stone and has been used for cooking food. This, as well as other articles in the shipment, may be seen in the Geological Room.

Miss Wallis, formerly of Peterborough, but now of Paris, France, sent a collection of mounted birds of brilliant plumage, a leather case of very ancient appearance, a beautifully worked apron and an embroidered scarf, the work of peasants of the south of France.

From Mrs. Denniston the society has received the bound fyles of the Toronto Globe of 1873, 1874, 1878, 1879 and 1880; also similarly preserved, the fyles of the Toronto Mail of 1874, 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880 and 1881, and of the Montreal Gazette for the years 1873, 1874 and 1880. These fyles show that before 1880 the pages of these newspapers were fully one-third larger than at present. On July 1st, 1880, the Globe adopted the smaller sized sheet, and on August 2nd, 1880, the Mail also changed its size.

Mrs. Denniston also presented to the society the London Illustrated News of 1856, 1856, 1857 and 1858 in book form. These issues cover the period of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny and furnish very interesting reading.

People are Pleased Over Prospect of the New Factory Coming

When The Times appeared yesterday morning with the announcement of the Purity Wire Limited factory to be located here, quite a flutter was created among the citizens generally. Although negotiations have been underway for several weeks and a number of citizens had an inkling of what was in the wind, the announcement came as a very pleasant surprise to the great majority who had not heard it before.

In conversing with a number of the most conservative of the public men The Times representative found them all considering the proposition very seriously. It was too big a thing for them to grasp all at once, and they did not care to express an opinion until they had looked more carefully into it. The general opinion is, however, that it would be a great boom for the city if the factory is established and proves a success.

The aldermen, and especially those who are most closely connected with the promoters of the company, are satisfied that the concern is a good one and that very soon after the by-law is carried the buildings contractors will get busy.

The ratepayers generally are requested, in the interests of themselves and of the city as a whole, to go into the proposal carefully and fully so that they may be able to vote intelligently on June 1st next. The aldermen are convinced that the more the people know about the company the larger will be the majority in its favor.

The Cold Snap Has Struck the City

A sudden change in the temperature struck the city last night about dark and was accompanied by a high wind. The thermometer continued to go down until it was so cold that ice was formed. This cold snap will continue all day today, but sometime tonight it will likely become milder. The following from Toronto will be of interest;

"There will be frost, and heavy frost at that, in Toronto tonight, according to the predictions of the Weather Man. There may be a few showers, but they will be scattered, then the weather will clear so tomorrow will be bright, but 'pretty chilly,' as the Observatory man says.

"The cold wave is going to be the most severe one this district has experienced in many Aprils. The cause of it is the north-west winds, which are sweeping towards Ontario today with considerable velocity.

"April has been the coldest month the West has seen in many years, and the finale came this morning, when the thermometer dropped to eight below zero at Prince Albert. That is the coldest spot in the West today, but there are several other places remarkably chilly. Battleford has 6 above, Minnedosa 10 above, Winnipeg 13 above, and Qu'Appelle 14 above. The temperature in Alberta ranges from 24 to 28 above.

"We won't get zero weather here, but it will be pretty cold nevertheless," said the Weather Man. 'The trouble started away up in the North among the ice fields, and the winds are sweeping over the West today, causing a drop in the temperature all along the line. We will get it tonight, and it will last all day tomorrow, or, perhaps, tomorrow night. After that I think we are due for some spring weather.'

"His final word was cover all your flower beds, take out your winter overcoat, and lay aside low shoes till Thursday, at least."

Crown Said to Have Plan to Get Florence Kinrade at the Inquest Thursday

Toronto, April 27.—The contest of wits between Crown and defence in the Kinrade case is becoming more and more intense and complicated. The finding of the Divisional Court tomorrow is the one topic of conjecture, together with the steps which may follow a possible rejection of Coroner Anderson's warrant.

It was pointed out this morning that tomorrow's hearing would compel Mr. Staunton to show his hand so far as the warrant at least is concerned. The lawyer will have to declare on what grounds the warrant is being attacked, whether because of an illegality in the issuance of it or as a direct motion to quash it.

Should the Divisional Court uphold the warrant—and on this opinion is less divided than would be imagined—Miss Kinrade's presence is, of course assured. But should the warrant be quashed, there is a probability that she will be there all the same. That the Crown is contemplating some step which it is unwilling to discuss but which will result in the girl's presence, may be inferred from statements made today. What that step is, is not known.

"Unless some other means can be discovered, I do not see any reason why Mr. Staunton cannot prevent Miss Kinrade from being called as a witness for some time to come," remarked one of Toronto's judges today.

"Even granting that he loses out before the Divisional Court, the question as to the validity of the warrant issued by Coroner Anderson is by no means finally decided. It is a matter where the liberty of a subject is at stake, and for that reason there is the right of appeal from the Divisional Court to the Privy Council if necessary. If Mr. Staunton loses before the Divisional Court he can appeal from the decision if he feels like it, and while the appeal is spending the warrant could not be served upon Miss Kinrade. One never can tell, though, what will happen. In this case they are making law, and there may be many ways out of the difficulty not attempted yet."

When Mr. Justice Teetzel issued a writ of certiorari yesterday, to be served on Coroner Anderson of Hamilton, to produce certain papers, the warrant for the arrest of Miss Florence Kinrade, the copy, and not the original, was sent to Hamilton, while the original was filed at Osgoode.

Osgoode officials made the discovery this morning. T. C. Robinette was telephoned for, and in a few minutes a special messenger was on his way to Hamilton, with the original writ or order in his possession.

It is not thought that any delay will result, though, possibly, the coroner, if he liked, might disregard a mere copy.

Brave Canadian Missionaries saw Terrible Slaughter of Armenians

RESUME THE MASSACRES.

Beiruth, April 27.—Delayed despatches just received here, say that the carnage in Adana was renewed Sunday night, and many were killed.

The first massacres in Adana, where an American missionary was killed, resulted in the slaughter of 10,000 persons. Advices indicate that the Moslem hordes have again attacked the city.

Constantinople, April 27.—The following account of the disorders in Adana has been received here by telegraph from the Rev. Herbert Adams Gibbons, a missionary;

"The entire vilayet of Adana has been visited during the past five days by a terrible massacre of Armenians, the worst ever known in the history of the district. The terror has been universal and the government is powerless to check the disorders. Adana, the capital of the province, has been the storm center.

"Conditions have been unsettled for some time and there has been animosity between Turks and Armenians owing to the political activity of the latter and their open purchasing of arms.

"Early last Wednesday morning, while I was in the market, I noticed that the Armenians were closing their shops and hurrying to their homes. An Armenian and Turk had been killed during the night, and the corpses were paraded through their respective quarters. The sight of the dead inflamed the inhabitants and crowds at once began to gather in the streets armed with sticks, axes and knives. A few young Armenians assembled in the center of the covered market and began firing revolver shots into the air. By eleven o'clock the crowds had begun looting the shops.

"The military commander of Adana was by my side in the market when the firing commenced. He had not the courage to endeavor to disperse the mobs; he returned to his residence, and did not venture out for two days.

"William Chambers, field secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association (a Canadian), and myself, proceeded to the Konak, and found a howling mob demanding arms with which to kill the Giaours. We then went to the Turkish offices to summon the British consul. On the steps of the building we saw three Armenians who had been massacred. Their bodies had been mutilated. While we were in the telegraph office, a mob burst into the room where we were, and killed two Armenians before our eyes. The unfortunates were supplicating the protection of the Vali when they were struck down.

"That afternoon the situation grew distinctly worse. The Armenians withdrew to their quarters of Adana, which is situated on a hill, and converted their houses that held advantageous positions into fortresses. Here the fighting went on for two days, during which the Armenians succeeded in beating off their Turkish assailants."

"When I was a Boy" was the Subject

There was a good sized audience at St. Luke's Sunday school last night to hear Mr. F. B. Dobbin's lecture on "When I was a Boy." The evening was under the auspices of Mr. J. J. Turner's Bible class, and a most enjoyable program was given. Mr. Dobbin's lecture was very entertaining and was greatly appreciated. Mr. Kilpack, the organist, rendered several excellent instrumental numbers and the evening was brought to a close by serving refreshments.

Sultan is Deposed from Throne of Turkey---Carried off a Prisoner

More Looting and Murder In Adana--10,000 Killed

Constantinople, April 27.—There was a fresh outbreak of fanaticism and murder last night at Adana, accompanied by looting and incendiarism. The situation there is critical.

TEN THOUSAND WERE KILLED.

Beiruth, April 27.—Delayed despatches just received here say that the carnage in Adana was renewed Sunday night, and many were killed.

The first massacres in Adana, where an American missionary was killed, resulted in the slaughter of 10,000 persons. Advices indicate that the Moslem hordes have again attacked the city.

Troops Entered Royal Palace and Captured His Majesty, Taking Him Into Asia Minor —His Brother Made Sultan Instead

Constantinople, April 27.—Sultan Abdul Hamid has been deposed. Mehemmed Reschad Effendi will be proclaimed his successor.

Constantinople, April 27.—A salute of 101 guns fired at half-past two o'clock this afternoon announced to the waiting populace of Constantinople the change in the Sultanate.

Constantinople, April 27.—The Sultan was dethroned by the National Assembly, whose decision on the proposal was unanimous.

Constantinople, April 27.—Mehemmed Reschad Effendi was proclaimed Sultan of Turkey at half-past two o'clock this afternoon in succession to his brother, Abdul Hamid.

London, April 27.—A despatch received here from Constantinople by a news agency says rumors are current in the Turkish capital that Abdul Hamid is dead.

Constantinople, April 27.—Abdul Hamid II. has been deposed as Sultan of the Turkish Empire. Mehemmed Reschad Effendi, his brother will be proclaimed his successor, probably by three o'clock this afternoon. The deposition will be thorough, the regular form prescribed by the tenets of the Mahommedan faith. It is understood that the Sheik-Ul-Islam, the head of the Church, will issue the decree of deposition.

The news of the deposition of Abdul Hamid and the selection of his brother to succeed him caused great excitement throughout Constantinople. Crowds at once began to gather in the principal squares and thoroughfares and around the Imperial Palace of Yildiz in anticipation of the proclamation of a new sultan.

TAKEN ACROSS THE BOSPHORUS

Constantinople, April 27.—It is reported here that the sultan has been removed from the Imperial palace of Yildiz Kiosk and conveyed across the Bosphorus to a point in Asiatic Turkey.

SULTAN A PRISONER

London, April 27.—A despatch received here by the Exchange Telegraph Company from Constantinople says that troops under the command of Young Turk officers entered the sultan's palace last night and took his majesty prisoner. Later, closely guarded, he was removed to the Cheraghar Palace, on the Bosphorus.

Constantinople, April 26.— Tewak Pasha, the grand vizier, this morning transmitted to the sultan the resignation of the entire cabinet, and ment.

Berlin, April 26.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger telegraphs that he learns that the Sultan of turkey will be allowed to remain upon the throne but on condition that he gives guarantees against relapse to absolutism. These conditions are as follows;

The walls of the Yildiz Palace to be razed, the barracks at Yildiz quartering about 20,000 men under the immediate orders of the sultan, also are to be razed; in the future there will be stationed at the palace a guard of 500 men only, to be changed daily and supplied from the different regiments of the garrison alternately in order to make it impossible for the sultan to bribe them.

A GIFT OF $250,000,000.

The sultan must pay the expenses of the expedition from Saloniki from his private fortune and, furthermore, the sultan, whose property is largely invested abroad must make a gift to the nation of $250,000,000 as the basis of the financial regeneration of the empire.

KILLED IN TREACHERY.

"Our satisfaction with our victory is overclouded by the loss we have sustained. About one hundred men have fallen, including eight officers. Major Mukhtar Bey was a victim of treachery. The officers of the Taxim barracks informed us that they would surrender. Mukhtar Bey, with a deputation of soldiers, thereupon went forward to receive the surrender, but as soon as he was within range the mutineers opened fore, killing him and fifteen men, all of whom were pierced by many bullets. This cowardly and treacherous act induced me to adopt an energetic course."

St. Peter's School Baseball Club

The boys of St. Peter's Separate school organized a baseball club yesterday afternoon and will start in to train for the season's games at once. They wish to notify all the juvenile clubs in the city that they are prepared to take them on for games as early as convenient. The colors of the club will be green and white. The officers elected for the year were as follows;—

Hon. Pres.—Rev. P. J. Kelly.
President—Clare Callaghan.
Sec.-Treas.—Harold Morrow.
Manager—W. O'Brien.
Captain—Herb. O'Hearn.
Executive Committee—Clare Callaghan, Nagel Phelan and Harold Morrow.

The New Boat is Nearly Ready

In a short time the Trent Valley Canal officials will have a fourth boat navigating the waters. A potato bug, or a steam scow has been built by Mr. Hickey near lock No. 6, and it is now about ready for launching. The new boat will draw only two and a half feet of water, and is especially designed for navigating the drowned lands and all shallow water. It is fitted with a new 25-horse power boiler and engine, and is complete in every respect. It is 40 feet long by 17 feet wide.

Galt's Tax Rate is Twenty-Three Mills

In the town of Galt where the population is 90 per cent. Scotch, the expenditures are heavy and to meet these and keep up the town the council recently struck the tax rate at 23 mills. It is safe to say that council will not have an overdraft at the end of the year. Peterborough's tax rate is 19 1-2 mills, although in the opinion of many a 23 mill rate would have been much better.

Three By-laws are to be Submitted

Tuesday the 1st of June, will be an important day for the electors of this city. There will be three big bylaws to be voted on. The first will be the one to aid the Purity Ware, Limited, of Peterborough, and the other two will be the Smith street bridge, and the street extension bylaws. These two bylaws were defeated at the last general elections but they are being prepared again, and will be submitted along with the factory bylaw.

Successful at Home

The Ladies' Aid Society of Knox church held a very successful at-home at the residence of Mrs. J. E. Henderson, 282 Dalhousie street last night. A most enjoyable evening was spent and a nice sum was realized to aid the society's bank account.

Simpson in $10,000 Race

Toronto, April 27.—"Fred Simpson will positively start in the big $10,000 Marathon in New York, May 8," said Tom Eck, the Ojibway Thunderbolt's manager, who arrived from New York today with Simpson for the Canadian Marathon here Saturday.

"Simpson has gone to Hiawatha to see his wife and family, and will be back tomorrow. If it hadn't been for his bad knee he would have beaten Svanberg easily in New York on April 16. The knee bothered him four miles before he quit. Do you know Appleby has been laid up ever since that race at Rosedale with Simpson. The cold got Simpson in the knee, but he has been in trouble ever since. Saturday. He'll win sure."

Three Licenses Granted Four Get Extensions

The License Commissioners met last night and finished up their business. Of the seven licenses held over three were granted, viz., Fred Clark's license at the Crown Hotel was transferred to Mr. Jackson; Lipsett of the Maple Leaf, and Long of the American. The other four, viz., the Queen's, Cavanagh House, Peterborough House and the Grand were granted a three months' extension of their present license.

Nineteen Entries for Canadian Marathon Derby in Toronto

Toronto, April 27.—With a record of nineteen and three more runners to hear from definitely, the entry list for the Canadian professional Marathon Derby, to be run Saturday afternoon at Hanlan's Point, practically closed last night. The chances are that twenty runners will face the starter. The entry list is as follows;

Fred Simpson, the Ojibway thunderbolt.
Red Hawk (Henry Jackson), the Mississauga Indian, from Penetang.
John D. D. Marsh, Winnipeg.
W. F. Cumming, I.C.A.C., Toronto.
Wm. McNeil, I.C.A.C., Toronto.
R. Booth, Deer Park.
E. J. Atten, Toronto, ex-Canadian distance champion.
A. C. Wood, Montreal.
Charles Graham, Montreal.
Edward Fabre, Montreal.
Caesar Guala, King Edward Hotel staff, Toronto.
Fred Meadows, Guelph.
David Bennett, Hamilton.
Charlie Petch, Toronto.
Tom Coley, Thorold.
Percy Sellen, I.C.A.C., Toronto.
Peter John, Six Nations Reserve.
Robert Redding, Toronto.
A. Windmill, Toronto.

A COSMOPOLITAN ENTRY.

The cosmopolitan nature of the field is evidenced by the fact that there are three Indians, two Scotchmen, five ex-Englishmen, an Italian, a French-Canadian, an Irishman, and six Canadians in the list. The amateurs who have made the leap for this race are;

W. F. Cumming of Toronto.
Wm. McNeil, Toronto.
R. Booth, Toronto.
Percy Sellen, Toronto.
Chas. Petch, Toronto.
Chas. Graham, Montreal.
Tom Coley, Thorold.
Peter John, Six Nations.
R. Redding, Toronto.
E. Fabre, Montreal.

THREE VETERANS

The veterans of the game are R. J. Atten, who is over 50, and William McNeil, and Daniel Bennett, both of whom are beyond the early thirties, but all are vigorous old athletes, and all have strong followings.

The entrance of Tom Coley of Thorold, pulled Fred Simpson and John D. Marsh down a peg in the betting, because Tom is a boy who can go the route, and when he is running for the change it is a safe wager that he will make the fur fly. The disturbing factors in the calculations of the birds, however, are Percy E. Sellen and W. F. Cumming of Toronto. Abbie Wood of Montreal, and Fred Meadows, the Rockwood boy. All four are flyers at middle distances if any one can last the route, he has got to be reckoned with seriously, for with the lead they can take in the first fifteen miles they will take a whole lot of beating on end. Red Hawk, too, has many supporters, and Charlie Petch cannot be lightly disregarded.

Of the others but little is known. Windmill, the last entry, is an Englishman who ran many races in the Old Country around Stourbridge. He is in grand shape. Guala, the Italian, did a remarkable 17-mile trial yesterday at the Island. Abbie Wood did 12 miles under 1.11.00 at Varsity yesterday, and made a good impression. Petch galloped 8 steady miles. Redding walked and ran 10 miles. Sellen walked 6 miles, and Cummings did 8 miles at the same trick, and all finished right except Redding, whose stomach bothered him.

Otonabee Navigation Co., Limited, Elected Officers

The adjourned annual meeting of the Otonabee Navigation Company, Limited, was held last night when the following officers were elected;

President—W. H. Robertson.
Vice-President—J. E. Henderson.
Marine Supt.—Capt. White.
Solicitor—R. F. McWilliams.

The company will commence the season with four steamers, to which will be added a fifth later on in the season. The time table is now being prepared and will be published shortly. It will be much the same as last year with the addition of a daily steamer from Burleigh Falls, to Chemong Park and Bobcaygeon and a stage line connecting with the steamer at Chemong Park for Peterborough.

The Daylight Saving Bill is Reported

Ottawa, April 26.—The special committee named to consider E. N. Lewis' daylight saving bill this morning reported the measure, with a couple of amendments.

One provides that the hands of clocks be advanced an hour from the first Sunday in April to the first Sunday in November, instead of April 30 to October 30, as provided by the bill.

Another amendment is to designate the time as "standard" time, instead of "local" time, as proposed by Mr. Lewis.

The committee, of which R. Y. McLean of Huron, was the chairman, received scores of resolutions passed by boards of trade and other public bodies in favor of the adoption of the principles of the bill. The objections received were few and far between.

While the committee is desirous of seeing the bill passed by parliament this session, it is doubtful if the government will consent to this. It will probably be pointed out that the British parliament, which has had a similar measure under consideration for a longer period, has not yet passed it. The advisability of the matter receiving more consideration will also be urged. Even if passed, the bill would not come into force for a year, there being a provision in it to that affect.

Mr. Lewis and Mr. F. A. Monk waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier this morning and asked him to make the bill a government order, and pass it at this session of parliament.

Intermediate City Baseball League

There is trouble in the Intermediate Baseball League over the constitution. A new constitution was drafted this year but the teams are not agreed upon it. A meeting was held last night at the Y.M.C.A. parlors. Four teams were represented, and Vice-President Titterton presided in the absence of Mr. Lang. The teams represented were the Strathconas, Lakeviews, West Ends and Y.M.C.A. There was a lot of discussion over the constitution, and as no satisfactory agreement could be reached the meeting was adjourned.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

Gow Ganda

The new mining district of Gow Ganda is destined to do its share towards contributing to the wealth of Canada. Although the first discoveries of silver were made late last fall quite a town has sprung up in Gow Ganda already, and great activity is shown at the leading properties.

On the 30th of last month the Hon. A. G. MacKay stated in the legislature that $30,000 a day would not pay for the money being spent in wagon freight between the railroads and Gow Ganda.

This will be a revelation to those who are not in close touch with the conditions.

It is said that the wealth of this region will surpass that of Cobalt, in many cases veins of almost solid silver being found on the surface.

HAIN'S CUTS POOR FIGURE

Capt. Peter Hainen, jealous of his wife, shot his wife's friend, Annis, and is now on trial charged with murder. The crime was undertaken in the most deliberate way, and Annis was given no chance whatever to either escape or defend himself. He was given no opportunity to explain, plead, or argue.

There are those who talk about an "unwritten law" that warrants a man, under certain circumstances, in shooting his fellow-man. Individuals may concur in this view, but the State cannot do so without risking the gradual loss of its authority. An unwritten law to be interpreted by a man for himself, without judge, counsel, or evidence as to facts—the same attending to the whole case and acting as executioner—is a law that civilization should reject. The right to condemn a human being to death should remain the exclusive right and responsibility of the State, and neither a man nor a mob should be allowed to slay those who have given offence.

But even those who think that under given circumstances a man should throw aside all the fetters of modern civilization and avenge his wrong with his own right hand must find Capt. Peter Hainen a poor hero. He committed his deed in a cowardly way, and under the horrified gaze of his victim's wife and other women. He was supposed to be obeying some code of honor in shooting the enemy who had tarnished his name, yet he had, months before, instituted divorce proceedings and advertised the alleged misconduct of his wife. His deed was not done, then, in that just first anger of a wronged man, who could breed no dishonor to his name. Having shot his man he does not rest his case there, as a believer in higher law should do, but he is next seen trying to save his own neck. He does not claim that Annis deserved to be shot, and that he was justified in slaying him. Instead, he allows himself to be represented as insane, and the slaying of Annis the act of a lunatic. From first to last there is nothing heroic in the whole miserable business. It seems to be a case of a weak man urged on by others, assassinating his enemy, and then trying to creep through any opening to escape the consequences his deed.

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and is so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual. 25c Insist

Consumption Stops On.

Dr. Latham, a noted London physician, gives the "white plague" a life of 25 or 40 years longer, at the end of which time, he says, tuberculosis will have disappeared as completely in civilized countries as have leprosy and cholera.

How medical science has suppressed many deadly diseases is related in connection with this striking prediction of the end of consumption. Smallpox is the most striking example. Sixty years ago smallpox accounted for a large percentage of the deaths in England. Nowadays the deaths from smallpox are among the lowest in the mortality returns.

Cholera epidemics have for long been unknown in England, and no one need contract the disease if he observes certain simple precautions. Another terrible disease which medical science has rendered preventable is hydrophobia. If the preventive inoculations with the Pasteur serum are begun within a fortnight after the dog's bite, the disease practically never ensues.

Of disease conquered by sanitary methods directed against the specific germs themselves, malaria and yellow fever are the most important. "Roman fever," formerly the curse of the marshy Campagna region of Italy, has also been stamped out by similar methods. A great scientific campaign is now being carried on in Central Africa against the mysterious "sleeping sickness," and promises to be ultimately successful.

The Powerful Eaglehawk.

Perhaps the deadliest foe of the Australian sheep farmer is the eaglehawk, and many and wonderful are the contrivances invented for his destruction or capture. A correspondent at Bingleton says it is no uncommon thing for a farmer with a run of quite average extent to lose a hundred sheep in a season through the depredations of these carnivorous birds. "Their strength," he writes, "is so abnormal that it is practically impossible for the sheep on which one pounces to resist the attack, and their appetite for live mutton appears to be insatiable. They are occasionally caught by means of a trap attached to the carcase of a sheep, and sometimes poisoned; but their numbers are nevertheless continually increasing."—London Standard.

An Exciting Snapshot.

Lord Minto returned to Calcutta a few days ago on the conclusion of his short tour in Assam.

The trip was marred by an accident to Col. Victor Brooke, the viceroy's military secretary. A rhinoceros charged the elephant ridden by Col. Brooke, dashing that officer against his howdah so violently that his right arm was fractured in two places.

The viceroy alone was shooting the rhinoceros, and Col. Brooke was attempting to take a photograph of the shot and also to turn the charging animal.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This because nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this peculiar power-producer—alone directed to those weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it relieves; it gives genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen those nerves—re-establish them as normal, with

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Belle, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Richardbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lava Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.52.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 85 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense stopes already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously. It is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 25c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

LAND OF GIANTS.

Some of the Popular Beliefs Regarding Cornwall.

About the Land's End the land is bare, harsh, and scarred; here and there are fields of stunted grass, stony and hedged with low hedges of bare stones, like the fields of Galway; and, for the rest, haggard downs of flowerless heather, sown with grey rocks, and gashed with lean patches through which the naked soil shows black. The cliffs are of granite, and go down sheer into the sea, naked, or thinly clad with lichen, grey, green, and occasionally orange; they are built up with great blocks and columns, or stacked together in tiers, fitted and clamped like cyclopean architecture; or climb rock by rock, leaning inwards, or lean outwards, rock poised upon rock, as if a touch would dislodge them, poised and perpetual. They are heaped into altars, massed into thrones, carved by the sea into fantastic shapes of men and animals; they are like castles and like knights in armor; they are split and stained like bulwarks of rusty iron, blackened with age and water; they are like the hulls of old battleships, not too old to be impregnable, and they have human names and the names of beasts. They nod and peer with human heads and wigs, open sharks' fangs out of the water, strut and poise with an uncouth mockery of motion, and are as if mysteriously and menacingly alive. This is the land of giants; there is the Giant's Chair at Tol-Pedn, and the Giant's pulpit at Boscawen, and the Giant's Foot at Tolcarne, and the Giant's Hand on Carn Brea. And there is a medieval humor in Cornish legends which still plays freakishly with the devil and with the saints. Here, more than anywhere in Cornwall, I can understand, says a writer in Harper's Magazine, the temper of Cornish legends, because here I can see the visible images of popular beliefs; the Satanic humor, the play of giants; the goblin gambols of the spirits of the earth and sea. The scenery here is not sublime, nor is it exquisite as in other parts of the county; but it has a gross earthly gaiety, as of nature untamed and uncouth; a rough playmate, without pity or unkindness, wild, boisterous, and laughing. There is an eerie laughter along these coasts which seem made not only for the wreckers who bloodied them, and for the witches whose rock chairs are shown you, where they sat brewing tempests, but for the tormented and ridiculous roarings of Trogeagle and the elemental monsters.

Rosalind and Orlando.

How old some of our favorite actresses and singers are getting! Miss Ellen Terry was sixty-one a week or two ago, Mme. Patti is actually sixty-six, while the other day Mrs. Kendal completed her sixtieth year. Mrs. Kendal, by the way, is still thought of by older patrons of the theatres as the sister of "Tom" Robertson. She was his very little sister. "It is amusing," she once said, "to hear people talk and write about my eldest brother Tom and me playing together as children. My mother married when she was eighteen, and my brother was born when she was nineteen. I was born when she was forty-eight, and was her twenty-second child. So my brother was a grown man with a moustache when I knew him. I was brought up with his two children, little Tom and Maude, my own nephew and niece." Mrs. Kendal was married forty years ago, and the story has often been told how, owing to a death in the company, she and her husband were obliged to act the parts of Rosalind and Orlando on their wedding day. And what a reception they had when they came to the passage, "Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?" Orlando: "I will, as fast as she can marry us."

"As Self-Respecting Men."

Rev. F. B. Meyer, who has left England on a six months' mission tour, has many stories to tell of his flock in Lambeth. He got the men together by giving them an attractive service on Sunday. "Look 'ere, guv'nor, is this a blanket and coal society?" he was asked on one occasion by a man who thought of joining the Thursday Sunday Afternoon Brotherhood. "For a moment," says the reverend gentleman. "I didn't catch the drift of the question, and then answered, No, brothers, I have no cash to spare to give you blankets and coals, but I will show you how to get them for yourselves.' 'All right, then, we will come along, but if it had been the other way round we would have got it too hot from our mates.' Ever since then," concludes Mr. Meyer, "I have dealt with my brothers as self-respecting men."

A Curiosity of Age.

One of the most curious instances of longevity is found in Miss Louisa Courtenay's "Notes of an Octogenarian." A witness in a will case in which Belleaden-Ker, the great English conveyancer, was engaged, was asked if he had any brothers or sisters. He replied that he had had one brother, who died 150 years ago. The court expressed incredulity, and documentary evidence was produced in support of the statement. This showed that the witness' father, who married first at the age of 19, had a son who died in infancy. The father married again at the age of 75, and had a son who lived to appear in the witness box at the age of 94, and make the above startling statement.

Missionary Goes to Prison.

H. M. cruiser Cambrian, conveying Colonel W. E. Gudgeon, Resident Commissioner at Rarotonga, has just visited the disturbed island in the Cook group, South Pacific. The leader of the movement, a dismissed teacher of the London Missionary Society, has been tried and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. Four others were sentenced to lesser terms for hauling down the British flag, unseating the judge, and restricting trade. The leader received a further sentence of two years penal servitude for embezzling the church funds.

ALEX. NELSON AND HOWE.

Late Toronto Hotelman Was a Friend of the Famous Nova Scotian.

The late Alexander Nelson, one of the proprietors of the Rossin House, who died so suddenly last month, was one of the few Canadians still surviving in this neck of the land who knew Joseph Howe intimately. To the average Ontario man the name of Joseph Howe is all but meaningless, but in the Maritime Provinces his name is one cherished as highly as that of Sir John Macdonald or Hon. George Brown in this section of the country. He was the man who opposed Confederation, as did John Sanfield Macdonald, the first Premier of Ontario, after nationhood became established. And he it was who was worsted by young Dr. Tupper, who practically hurled the Bluenoses into Confederation against their will. His old constituency was Hants, and the father of the three Nelsons, who nearly twenty years ago, took over the Rossin House, kept hotel at Shubenacadie, the principal settlement of the riding. It was Alexander Nelson's duty as a boy to drive Joseph Howe all over the large and partly unsettled riding on his visit to his constituents, of whom he was never neglectful.

The best of the late Mr. Nelson's reminiscences as to Howe's campaign methods relate to the visit of the present King, then Prince of Wales, to Canada in 1859. Shubenacadie was then the terminal of the newly-built railway running from Halifax into Hants county, and on the day of the arrival nearly a hundred of the constituents of the Prime Minister of Nova Scotia journeyed to Halifax to see the arrival of His Royal Highness. When they got there they found the streets so filled with troops and people from everywhere that there was little chance for anybody to see anything. Suddenly old Mr. Nelson, who was with the party, sighted Joseph Howe on his way to the wharf to officially greet the prince in the name of the colony of Nova Scotia. The Shubenacadie contingent told him that they wanted to get a good look at Albert Edward, and the Prime Minister took the whole tribe of his constituents along and placed them on a wharf alongside the landing-place, where they saw everything. And as he walked into the city, His Royal Highness had an auxiliary guard of Hants county voters.

Jesse Collings' Romantic Career.

Romantic to a degree has been the career of Mr. Jesse Collings, who met with an unfortunate accident recently. He was born in a cottage, and knew what it was to struggle on the pitiful wages of an agricultural laborer before he made his mark. The friendship existing between Mr. Chamberlain and himself is not the least remarkable phase of his political career. And mention of this friendship recalls rather an amusing story. They were candidates for Parliament at one time. Both had an effective anecdote which they used to tell alternately at their campaign meetings, the understanding being that whoever spoke first should have first call on the yarn. At one meeting Mr. Collings arrived rather late, and the chairman immediately called upon him to address the audience. As he went on with his oration he began to lead up to the famous anecdote, but before he had time to tell it he suddenly felt a gentle pull at his coattails. Turning round, he beheld Mr. Chamberlain regarding him with an anxious face. "I have already told them the — you know," he whispered, warningly. Mr. Collings, much disappointed, omitted it from his speech. A little later, when the orator had resumed his seat, Mr. Chamberlain rose and, to the surprise of Mr. Collings, immediately proceeded to tell the story.

Discarding Old British Warships.

Another clean sweep of obsolete warships has been decided upon by the British navy authorities. No fewer than ten are to be brought under the hammer during the next few months.

The vessels ordered to be sold, says a London press correspondent, are the first-class battleship Benbows of 10,600 tons, once famous for the huge 111-ton guns which she carried; the Howe, Collingwood and Rodney, of 10,300 tons; the second-class battleships Edinburgh, 9,420 tons, and Thunderer, 9,830 tons, and some old training ships of less importance.

The vessels mentioned date from 1882, 1884 and 1885, although the Thunderer was built as far back as 1872. They have long been familiar names in the British fleet and have done a good deal of service. They are hopelessly out of date now, their open gun decks being perhaps their weakest feature.

When this batch has been got rid of some of the ships in what is known as the Special Reserve will be sold, with the proviso that they must be broken up in the United Kingdom.

Protection From Rabbits.

Large orders for wire netting have been placed with a Norwich, England, firm, by Australia, the total running to 1,100 miles' length of this protection against the rabbit pest. The netting is made 48 inches wide, with 1 1-4 inch mesh at the bottom and 1 1-2 inch mesh at top, this weave of netting being a patent held by this firm. The order now in hand is for 300 miles of this netting for the Queensland Government, which follows on a similar order for the Victorian Government, and the firm has also despatched 500 miles of wire netting to New South Wales. In each case the Government is the initial purchaser, and then retails the netting to the settlers, who fix it round their holdings and thus keep out the rabbits, without which their crops would be devastated.

At Last.

Diogenes, lantern in hand, entered the village drug store. "Say, have you anything that will cure a cold?" he asked.

"No, sir, I have not," answered the pill compiler.

"Give me your hand!" exclaimed Diogenes, dropping his lantern. "I have at last found an honest man."

ALFRED COONEY.

BUNYAN TO BE HONORED.

Movement Is on Foot to Put Memorial Window in Abbey.

A meeting of subscribers to the fund which has been recently started, in order to place a memorial window in the northern nave of Westminster Abbey, was held the other afternoon in the Jerusalem Chamber of the Abbey. The Dean of Westminster presided, supported by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Dr. Clifford. The Primate, in a short address, said he could not conceive that such a movement as this had not been conceived before, and he doubted whether people realised the strangeness of the fact that there should be no memorial to John Bunyan in Westminster Abbey. It certainly seemed inexplicable. He congratulated the dean that it had been reserved for his rule and reign to see the memorial completed. It was obviously a thing that must be carried through triumphantly, and he thought that if there had so far been a lack of financial support this was to be ascribed to the fact that people did not know of the proposal. The cost of the memorial could be subscribed several times over in England and the colonies.

What modern Christendom owed to John Bunyan it was partly possible to estimate, and they did well to honor him in that old historic and classic abbey. He floated them above the things which sundered good men across the centuries of outward change and of men's intolerance towards each other. By such an act as theirs that day they might be said to join hands on behalf of a common cause, the setting forward of the Master's message and of work for the bettering of the world. He hoped that their common enterprise would serve to cement more and more closely the bands and bonds that were inseparable because divine. Dr. Clifford, the world-famed Baptist divine, concurred with the archbishop in hoping that that enterprise might develop and increase Christian unity. They were doing this not for the sake of Bunyan's works, or for the sake of John Bunyan, but for the nation and the world.

An Ocean Mystery.

What may be described as an ocean mystery constitutes one of the most interesting features of Lord Brassey's wonderful museum, which he has formed in his London mansion in Park lane. It is a small toy schooner, such as one sees children playing with on the ponds and lakes of the public parks at all great cities. It was picked up by Lord Brassey while cruising on his steam yacht Sunbeam in the Southern Indian Ocean, many hundreds of miles out of the beaten track of passenger steamers while there was no other ship in sight. The tiny craft, when first sighted by the lookout on board the Sunbeam, was lying becalmed. How it got there, and, above all, how it reached those latitudes unharmed, has always remained a profound mystery. For there was nothing to indicate its ownership, save that the cut of the jib and the rig showed that it came from some English toy maker. It occupies a prominent place among the Indian gods, the Chinese vases, the Japanese bronzes, the South Sea Island idols and the hundreds of other curiosities that fill the museum, and from it is suspended a card describing when and how it was so strangely found. Lord Brassey took the trouble to advertise in the newspapers in various parts of the world, in the hope of discovering, if, perhaps, it had been dropped overboard from some passenger steamer on its way to Australia or Singapore, and had then drifted in its wonderful way more than a thousand miles south, but was never able to obtain the slightest clue to its history.

Lady de Bathe's Bear.

Lady de Bathe, better known as Lillie Langtry, a few days since presented her trainer, a son of Sam Darling, the well-known trainer, and whom she calls her "little Darling," he being the youngest and smallest of his profession at or near Newmarket, with a new motor-car. The visitor to Regal Lodge, Kentford, Mrs. Langtry's pretty racing box, is startled by seeing a huge and apparently living bear waiting near the door to "welcome" him. On closed inspection it is seen to be stuffed. The animal was shot by Mr. Clement le Breton, K.C., Lady de Bathe's brother, and it is one of her jokes to thus startle her visitors. Lady de Bathe has just written a novel. It is to be published exclusively in The Grand Magazine and will be the literary sensation of the season. The first chapters appear in the April number.

An Amazing Achievement.

A triumph for British engineering is the great Nile dam which has just been opened by the Khedive. It has been erected by Sir John Aird, who, from small beginnings, has built up one of the largest and most successful contracting concerns in the world. For about six years Sir John has had 14,000 men working for him on the banks of the Nile, and the huge reservoir which he has built—holding 80,000,000,000 gallons of water, weighing nearly 400,000,000 tons—stands as one of the engineering marvels of the age. Sir John became a millionaire solely by hard work. His grandfather was a working man who was killed during the building of the Regent's Canal, while his father held a subordinate position in a London gas company.

Once a "Powder Monkey."

A veteran named William Harwood has just been celebrating his 108th birthday in the Ballarat Benevolent Asylum. He seems to be a genuine centenarian, for there is documentary evidence that he arrived in Australia 90 years ago. He was born in Dublin, and as a boy served as "powder-monkey" on the British warship Eurylus. In Australia he was a member of various Government exploring and surveying parties, which had occasional encounters with wild blacks. He was once speared in the hip, and still bears marks of the wound.

4 Large Proven Veins

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

Do you realize what this means, you doubting Thomases? If not, write us for full particulars and become convinced. Send for illustrated booklet "A Journey to the Mines."

HOW TO TELL

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore,—that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, color bleaches, spirits droop.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"When I was so stooped and back weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. C. Farrier, a well known merchant in Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharp twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles, and joints lack of appetite, and loss of sleep—touch the cause. Cure the kidneys. Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands. 25c at all dealers.

Food Facts

What an M.D. Learned

A prominent Georgia physician went through a food experience which he makes public;

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weigh very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains of the state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact, I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without fatigure, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public."

Trial 10 days on Grape-Nuts, when other regular food does not seem to sustain the body, will work marvels.

Bishop Hamilton Raised to Archbishopric

Toronto, April 28.—Bishop Hamilton of Ottawa, was this morning appointed Archbishop of Eastern Canada by the House of Bishops. The election of the Primate of All Canada will take place during this afternoon's session of the House, which opened at 2.30 o'clock.

Although nothing definite can be learned, it is understood that the position of Primate will be keenly contested.

Archbishop Matheson of Rupert's Land, is the senior bishop, and, therefore, it is held by some that he should be given the high office. Others claim that the office properly belongs to a man from the Eastern Province. They are, therefore, advocating the newly appointed Archbishop Hamilton as primate.

This morning's business was opened by the celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in St. James' church, Bishop Sweeny and Bishop Hamilton leading in the service. Then the bishops adjourned to the synod office, where the business of the election was carried out.

The session was private, but at the end the following statement was handed out;

"The Bishop of Ottawa is elected Metropolitan and becomes Archbishop of Ottawa.

"The Rev. W. M. Loucks, M.A., rector of St. Matthew's church, Ottawa, was elected secretary of the House of Bishops, in place of the Bishop of Toronto.

"The Archbishop of Ottawa was appointed chairman of the Board of examiners of Divinity Degrees."

The bishops present at this morning's session were; Bishop Hamilton, Bishop Sweeny, Bishop Thornloe, Bishop Reeves, Bishop DuMoulin, Bishop Dunn, Bishop Pinkham, Bishop Mills and Bishop Farthing.

A Young Boy Has Disappeared

Walter Elliott, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. Robt. Elliott, 276 Wolfe street, left his home Monday morning shortly after nine o'clock to go to school and has not been seen since. His parents are very much worried over his strange disappearance and any knowledge of his whereabouts would be gladly received by them.

Their son was a little late for school Monday morning and did not want to go but his parents insisted upon his going, and as they thought he started out for the South Central, the one that he attended. Last evening, when he did not return, his father instituted a search for him but he was nowhere to be found. Enquiry was made at every place where he was thought most likely to be but without result. The police were also informed. It is thought that the boy must have left town.

MAC GREGOR SYNDICATE

SHARES $100.00 EACH

GOW GANDA

GOW GANDA Silver, Silver, Silver World's Richest Camp. GOW GANDA

This district promises better than Cobalt did—Cobalt has been heralded as the world's Greatest Silver Camp. Although in its infancy Cobalt has paid $11,600,000 in dividends. : : : :

GOW GANDA WILL SURPASS IT

Millions are made in Cobalt by small syndicates who purchased properties and did initial development. Hundreds invested in this way made tens of thousands. Such a chance is now offered at Gow Ganda.

THE MACGREGOR SYNDICATE

Now in Process of Formation. Here Are particulars :

THE INVESTOR'S GREAT CHANCE

The MACGREGOR Syndicate is being formed for $20,000 with shares at $100 each, and will own 120 ACRES (3 claims: M. R 3507 M. R. 3523, M. R. 3524) at the south end of GOW GANDA Lake, right in the midst of valuable discoveries.

Also G. G. 341 at Elkhorn Lake. The vendor reports and guarantees a rich discovery of native silver averaging 500 ozs. to the ton for full length of vein. This means $250 per ton, and is high grade shipping ore.

We consider this claim by itself to be worth, on its guaranteed silver showing, four times the entire capitalization of the Syndicate.

The Syndicate with its large holdings of valuable property will undoubtedly yield large profits to its members. The Syndicate will close within a few days as there is a lively demand for its shares.

When the Syndicate is closed it is proposed to form a company to take over, purchase and operate the three properties. The proposed capitalization of the company will be $2,000,000—a fair capitalization, for 120 acres, located as these properties are—the Syndicate will turn over the properties of the Company for, say, 1,200,000 shares of stock at $1 per share, par value, leaving 800,000 shares in the Treasury of the Company to be sold at 50 cents a share for the installation of the machinery and thoroughly working the properties. This plan would give each holder of shares in the Syndicate 6,000 shares in the company for each share held. It is proposed to place the stock of the Company on the market at 50c a share, and on this basis members of the Syndicate will be entitled to have their stock sold share for share with treasury stock. This would give members of the syndicate $3,000 in cash for each share held in the syndicate, less a brokerage of, say 5 per cent. for selling.

SURFACE SILVER VEINS OF FABULOUS RICHNESS CHARACTERIZES GOW GANDA.

Forty acre properties that six months ago could have been had for the staking have sold at prices ranging up to $350,000.

It is reasonable to expect that the MACGREGOR properties will be among the richest producers, and the chance of securing an interest should be taken advantage of.

SAFETY—Our confidence in the safety of the investment is expressed in the fact that we have taken shares in the Syndicate. We think it is a first-class investment, and we offer it to careful, conservative men as such, in our belief. We call it an unique opportunity for men of moderate means; that others appreciate it to be so is shown by the keen demand for shares. Send your remittance at once if you want to get in.

All moneys are deposited in the Bank to the credit of the "MacGregor Mines Syndicate" and cannot be withdrawn—only by authority of the Syndicate. Syndicate Shares are absolutely non-assessable No personal liability.

Old Regiment Drill Shed Disappeared in a Single Night

Probably never before was Peterborough so nearly being wiped out of existence, at least the business portion, as it was yesterday morning. Everything seemed very favorable for a million dollar fire, and it was only Chief Howard and his brigade of fire fighters that prevented it. To the fire department is due the credit of saving George street.

With a very high wind blowing from the north-west fire broke out in the north-west corner of the old drill sheds on Central Park. The cause is not known, but the general opinion is that it was set on fire. The exact time is not known, but it was some where between 4.30 and 4.45 o'clock. The alarm was sent in by two parties at 4.45, and the brigade responded in great time. When they arrived, however, the drill shed was beyond control, and the burning cinders and shingles were flying over the buildings as far down as Brock street. Already several of the nearby structures had ignited, including the Y.M.C.A., Mr. F. Brownscombe's house and Mr. Yelland's blacksmith shop and sheds. It was in extinguishing these fires and in preventing any others getting a start that Chief Howard and his men did their good work, and saved the city many thousands of dollars.

ALARM AT 4.45.

At 4.45 o'clock yesterday morning the alarm of fire reached the fire station by phone. It was sent in from the police station by P. C. P. C. Mayberry. A cab driver saw the blaze and immediately informed Constable Meagher, who was at the police station at the time.

COULDN'T SAVE THE SHED.

Mr. Ben Yelland was working on his books in his house, Murray street, nearly opposite the drill shed, at the time the fire started. He heard the noise of the fire, but thinking it was something else, did not bother to investigate it. The house soon became filled with smoke, however, and he went to the door and opened it, when he saw the fire. He immediately went into the residence of Mr. Brownscombe, who telephoned an alarm to the fire hall. This was received almost simultaneously with the call from the police station.

When the brigade arrived on the scene the north end of the building had collapsed and the south end was enveloped in flames to such an extent, and the heat was so intense that several wires of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's system on Murray street, were melted. It was seen that the inflammable frame structure was doomed, and the attention of the firemen were turned towards saving the places near by.

DIFFERENT DETACHMENTS.

Eleven hundred and fifty feet of hose, affording four streams, were attached to adjacent hydrants and the water pressure was excellent. The chief detailed his men off in different directions to the south, stationing two at the Y.M.C.A., two at the rear of Mr. Brownscombe's residence, and two at the rear of Mr. William Yelland's blacksmith shop. Two men were sent down George St., and with the aid of chemicals these sub-divisions of the brigade kept the fire in check.

A big spark wrought havoc at the awning in front of the Chinese laundry on George street, opposite Bethany Tabernacle, and the awning was burned up.

P. C. Meagher gave excellent assistance to the regular firemen, who appreciated his services very much. The small crowd present also did what they could to help the fire fighters.

The destroyed building was purchased some time ago by Mr. Robert Nicholls, who had been tearing it down and disposing of the material.

Cinders were carried for a great distance, blowing onto George street and quite a number of them being carried over to Victoria Park.

Annual Benefit Concert C.G.E.

The annual concert of the C.G.E. Benefit Society will be held in the Grand Opera House on Thursday, May 6th. At the Lorain Company's entertainment last night Mr. R. E. Harding made the announcement of the date, saying the Lorain management had very kindly consented to let the Benefit Society have the evening mentioned.

There is no more generously patronized and interesting affair under local auspices than the annual C.G.E. benefit entertainment, and the program is always one of merit.

This year the committee will secure the best talent and endeavor to present a more than ordinarily attractive program.

Would Make Girl Perjure Herself, Lawyer Says—Judgment Reserved

"Cowardly and Unmanly," Lynch-Staunton Calls Florence Kinrade's Examination —Says the Coroner's Court is a Lawless Court

Toronto, April 28.—The legal fight in connection with the Kinrade case was continued at Osgoode Hall today, where argument in connection with the writ of certiorari granted by Mr. Justice Teetzel the other day was heard by the Divisional Court.

CALLS IT INQUISITION.

"It's an inquisition in the wildest possible manner," said Mr. Staunton. "Here's a girl 22 years of age, who speaks French and English, a member of one of Hamilton's leading choirs. Her father is a school teacher of ten years' standing in Hamilton, during all which time not a word was said against the reputation of that family, and I say it's a terrible thing to blast their reputation as has been done in this case.

The fight to quash the warrant for the arrest of Florence Kinrade was resumed with a dash at two o'clock this afternoon by Mr. Lynch-Staunton in a protest against the treatment of Miss Kinrade in the coroner's court at Hamilton.

"With this evidence before you," he said, "your lordships will see that this girl is a young girl of 22 years; her home is in Hamilton; lived in Hamilton all her life; a member of a leading choir of the city; her father a school teacher for forty years, and it is proved in the evidence that the family was most exemplary and in accord."

Chancellor Boyd—"The manner of serving would be the same under other circumstances."

Mr. Lynch-Staunton — "Yes, my lord, but to blast the reputation and character of a young girl like this is a terrible thing."

Chancellor Boyd—"Well, of course, we cannot restore what has been done. We must go on. I do not think a magistrate could do his duty and not have a witness appear."

"Well, my lord, all sorts of things may be asked her, relevant or irrelevant, and the only thing the coroner can do, if he is a man of any ability at all, is to sift it out and tell the jury not to be guided by it. But it is an imposition in the widest sense; they can ask anything they like. I press upon your lordships that no person can be asked any question before a coroner's jury."

After considerable cross firing by both counsel the judges reserved judgment.

Mr. Felix Brownscombe Thanks Fire Brigade,

Mr. Felix Brownscombe, manager of the Canadian Canoe Company, appreciates the efforts of Chief Howard and the fire brigade at the fire yesterday morning. Mr. Brownscombe wrote a letter of appreciation to the chief, and enclosed a cheque for the Firemen's Benefit Fund. That letter is published below as it is important and valuable evidence of the efficiency of the chief and his brigade. The evidence in all the more valuable coming from a man of Mr. Brownscombe's standing in the city and from an eye witness of the most dangerous fire this city has had for many years, or for that matter, ever had. The letter is as follows:

April 28th, 1909.

Chief Howard,
Fire Dept., city;

Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me to express to you my thanks for services rendered to my property at the time of the drill shed fire this morning. Being directly in the line of the fire, and the roofs of my buildings being at one time almost covered with burning shingles, I do not hesitate to say that had it not been for the promptness with which you responded to the alarm and the good judgment you displayed in distributing your men, my dwelling would, to say the least, have had the roof very badly damaged.

Also express to the men under you my thanks, and accept the enclosed cheque as a small contribution towards your "Firemen's Benefit Fund."

Yours truly,
FELIX BROWNSCOMBE.

THE WEST AND THE TARIFF

It is a good sign when the House of Commons discusses freely the vital issue of free trade against protection. It is a good sign no matter what conclusion may be reached for it means that the House of Commons is disposed to assert itself, to take its rightful position as a deliberative assembly, representing the people of Canada, and controlling the exercise of the power of taxing the people. Moreover, great issues have a wholesome influence on politics. They are the saving salt of party-ism, preventing it from degenerating into a mere strife of factions for place and power.

Last week, Dr. Clark of Red Deer, Alberta, spoke strongly in favor of a revenue tariff as against high protection, and Mr. Ralph Smith, of Nanaimo, declared for free trade in coal. The Winnipeg Free Press notes that in a previous debate no Conservative member from the West supported a demand for increased protection. The West must be counted with more and more by those who frame the tariff of Canada. The immigration of the last eight years, which amounts to nearly 1,200,000, is mainly an immigration of farmers, and the bulk of it has gone into the Canadian West. When the census of 1911 is taken, and the constituences are readjusted, the center of political power will shift westward, and the West will have more to say in the framing of the tariff and in all other Canadian legislation. There will be more voices like of Dr. Clark. Some day, the center of Canada will be not far from Port Arthur and Fort William. There will be as many voters lying west as east of that point.

The Western farmer will not be an advocate of a low tariff, if not of free trade. His main interest is not in keeping foreigners out of his home market, but in widening the market for his own products. He will always be on the side of freedom as against restriction. He will want freedom to buy as well as freedom to sell. And while manufacturing industries will spring up in the West, especially in Western Ontario and in British Columbia, the dominant element from the Great Lakes to the Pacific will be agricultural.

Some observers have expressed the opinion that the interests of the East and the West will be so diverse as to lead to serious political danger. More probably there will be compromise. We cannot all have all that we want, and there is no country in which this is better recognized than in Canada. Racial and religious questions, far more formidable than local questions, have been settled by compromises, usually based upon substantial justice. We shall probably have for many years in Canada neither free trade nor extreme protection, but a moderate protective tariff, with the tendency rather downward than upward. The farmers in the West and elsewhere have hitherto been content with resisting movements for increased protection. As their power increases, also as they become conscious of their power, they will probably grow more aggressive and demand reductions and also demand effective legislation against the combines created by the tariff. The eleventh parliament shows more of this sentiment than its predecessors. The twelfth parliament, elected on the basis of the census of 1911, will show still more strongly the sentiment of the West, of the farmers and of the consuming public.

Appetite Gone—Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter sorely tired her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Waterers, P.O., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headache. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfected. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring vigor, tone, health and spirits —are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essences in vegetable life—are safe for young and old and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength of every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut—today—25c. at all dealers.

New Armouries Can be Seen

For the first time the new armories were seen from George street yesterday morning after the big fire. There is now a decidedly vacant space, and it must be said that it is a big improvement. There is no doubt now about the old shed being cleared away by May 24th. Work will be started at once in cleaning up the few ashes that remain and in levelling off the grounds so that by the 24th, Central Park should present a very respectable appearance.

Case Against the Steamer Otonabee

Mr. P. P. Young of Young's Point, is suing the steamer Otonabee in the Admiralty Division of the Exchequer Court for $650, which he claims as damages as the result of a collision between the Otonabee and one of his scows. The collision took place last year in the canal just above the lock at Young's Point. The defence is that the accident was due to the negligence of those in charge of the scow.

The court is being held before Mr. Justice Hodgins, of the Admiralty Court, Toronto.

All day yesterday was taken up with the plaintiff's case, and it will be resumed this morning at ten o'clock. The defendants' case may be started this morning and will not likely be finished until Friday.

The judge intimated that if necessary he would take a trip to the scene of the accident, in order that he might examine matters personally.

All the evidence was not given at today's session. Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon are appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. R. F. McWilliams for defendants.

Beware of ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except in prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

No License in Colewater

The Divisional Court in Toronto dismissed the appeal of Mrs. Matilda J. Denison, wife of a Peterborough hotelkeeper, from the refusal of Chief Justice Mulock to compel by mandamus the license commissioners of Medonte township to consider an application for a hotel license for the incorporated village of Coldwater.

A local option bylaw was passed by the township on Jan. 25th, 1908, and on Jan. 29th, the village was incorporated under a bylaw passed by the Simcoe County Council. The claim was made by Mr. James Haverson, K.C., on behalf of Mrs. Denison, that as the bylaw was not to go into effect in the township till May 1st and that therefore it was not "in force" at the time the village was incorporated and became a separate municipality entitled itself to pass bylaws on local option.

The Divisional Court holds that it is improbable the legislature intended that an existing bylaw was not to affect any new municipality if the time for going into operation had not arrived.

Farm House Burned to the Ground

An early morning fire destroyed the home of Andrew Tully, on the third line of Smith, on Saturday. According to the report received the building was virtually burned over his head and was far advanced before he became aware of the fact. It seems he was preparing breakfast and was engaged in frying meat. The first intimation of the fire was the falling of cinders and coals from the roof about his head. Instantly realizing the situation it is said he left the pan and his fiddle which was hanging on the wall and with which he has won considerable reputation and made his escape from the house.

Mr. Tully has been keeping "bachelor's hall" for the past thirty-five years and his many friends sympathize with him in his loss.

Will Make Quebec a French Province

Quebec, April 28.—Mr. Armand Lavergne's bill to amend the civic code and compel all public utility companies doing business in the Province of Quebec to have their contracts drawn up in the French as well as the English language, passed the legislative assembly yesterday, notwithstanding strenuous opposition made by the representatives of railways, steamboat, and other companies to the measure.

The bill, which is looked upon by commercial corporations as one calculated to cause considerable inconvenience and unnecessary expense, was promoted by the Nationalist party, of which Mr. Bourassa is chief, who insists that Quebec is a French province; consequently all contracts should be drafted in French as well as in English, and the members of the rural constituencies dared not oppose it, while they privately condemned it.

Railway companies in future must have their passenger tickets, circulars, time tables, etc., printed in both languages, under the penalty of a fine of not less than five, or more than twenty dollars for each offence.

Lawyers, discussing the merits of the bill, declare it to be unconstitutional, and the companies concerned will lose no opportunity of bring the matter before the Supreme Court, and the Privy Council, if necessary, to have it declared ultra vires.

Mrs. M. W. Matcott and children left yesterday for Cannington, where they will visit for a few days before leaving for their new home in Hamilton.

License Commissioners Have Control of Clubs

Toronto, April 28.—The Board of License Commissioners will meet this afternoon to consider club licenses.

In previous years the board was forced to grant a license to every club that applied, if it possessed a Provincial charter. This year, by a change of a single word in the License Act, the local board can refuse every club a license.

It may not make any change this time, but during the coming year the board will keep every club under surveillance and if privileges are abused or considered hurtful to any large portion of the community there is a promise of some going out of active business so far as the sale of liquor is concerned.

Met with a Painful Accident

Master George Stevens, the second son of Mr. George Stevens of Ashburnham, met with a very painful accident last night. He was playing on a flat car when he fell and broke his arm. He will be here de combat for some time as a result.

Street Commissioner and His Assistant Must Look After all the Work

The Board of Works Department made the first step towards economy last night when it decided to get along this year with the officials they have on the permanent staff without engaging any foremen for the summer. The Board has only between $6000 and $7000 left of their appropriation for street work, and that amount of money will not do much, so it will be made to go as far as possible. The next step was to place Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine on the permanent staff at a lower salary.

The board also had a number of other matters up.

The city engineer reported on the Sherbrooke street drain, which Mr. Webb asked to have filled in, and advised that the work be left over until next year when the cost of the work can be put in the appropriations. There is no objection to the ditch being filled in except the cost. The Board has no money this year.

MONEY GOING FAST.

Ald. Bradburn pointed out that already $3000 has been spent this year and only about $6000 are left. Deducting from this the fixed expenditures there are only about $6,000 left for expenditure by the board. As yet the board has only just got started and at the present rate of going the money will be all gone by July 1st. This means that the board has got to start at once and cut down the expenditures.

Ald. Bradburn suggested that the board buy a horse, crush the 200 cords of stone and with two men and the dump cart use the stone for patch work on the streets. That will be about all that can be done this year.

ECONOMY, ECONOMY.

This opened up the economy question and the chairman asked where the board could start. The officials on the staff are; The engineer, the street commissioner, assistant commissioner and an assistant in the city engineer's office, and a plumbing inspector.

There was a lengthy discussion over the employes and it was felt by all that one man on the street force must be allowed to go as there would not be enough work to do. It was decided therefore to keep Messrs. Evans and Fitzgerald on, and not engage Mr. Thirtkell this year.

Moved by Aldermen Turner and Bradburn that Harry Evans be on the sidewalk gang, and that Mr. Fitzgerald take charge of the streets and bridges.—Carried.

On motion by Aldermen Turner and Bradburn, Mr. T. Q. Quartermain was placed on the permanent staff at $650 per year, dating from May 1st.—Carried.

Before Mr. Quartermaine was only temporarily engaged, and was paid at the rate of $700 per year.

POLICE PROTECTION.

A letter was received from City Engineer Hays asking for police protection in front five between seven and nine o'clock. The city engineer reported that very often hand rails are torn away from walks going over drains and crossings, etc. This often causes great danger to the public as well as expense and repairs.

On motion of Aldermen Bradburn and Turner, the letter was referred to the police commissioners.

A letter was received from the city engineer in reference to the flooding of the cellar at B. F. Ackerman's factory. Mr. Hay stated that the sewer connections in the factory were contrary to the plumbing by-law.

SIX MILES OF WALK.

The Board of Works has already nearly six miles of granolithic sidewalk to be built this year and that will keep them busy all summer. As a matter of fact six miles is about the limit of the board's ability. Yet there about two more miles asked for by the people who have petitioned in. These petitions the board considered last night and some of them will be constructed where absolutely needed, and the board will do all its possibly can.

SEWERS.

Sewers will be built as follows,

On Roger street to Douro street, from north side Hunter street.

On Manning avenue, from Benson avenue to Aylmer street.

On Aylmer street, from lot 40 to lot 50.

"Miss Fidgety" Has Been Sold

"Miss Fidgety" of the Schofield Bolden Co., the fastest boat built throughout in Canada, and the Queen of Toronto and surrounding waters in the past three years, was sold yesterday to H. J. Baldwin, the well known mining promoter of Haileybury, who intends to use her as a pleasure craft during the summer on Lake Temiskaming and surrounding waters. The people of New Liskeard, Haileybury and Cobalt will have a new sensation when this speedy and graceful craft reaches her destination.

Ugly Skin Sores

Zam-Buk Removes Them

It is just at this season that pimples, blotches, sores, scrofulous ailments, and eruptions generally, make themselves most felt; Zam-Buk will be found of wonderful use wherever there is skin eruptions or deep-seated ulceration. Pimples, blotches, and irritating rashes on the face and other parts of the body indicate a disturbance of the functions of the skin. Impure matter, which the blood should discharge by means of the skin, is allowed to remain in the pores, the process of "exhaustion" is interrupted, and just where the bad matter collects, there pimples, ulcers, and sores quickly appear, and the skin tissue suffers. To be complete, the treatment must be of two kinds. The sufferer may help to diminish the supply of impurities by taking no rich, greasy and indigestible foods; but, to remove the impurities themselves, the pores must be opened and the skin made healthier by the vigorous application of Zam-Buk, morning and night, and washing frequently with some pure soap. There is none better than the antiseptic Zam-Buk Medicinal and Toilet Soap. Zam-Buk balm stimulates the functions of the skin by the penetration of its refined herbal essences, and thus reaches the root of the disease.

Mr. Arthur B. Griffin, of 191 Picton street, E. Hamilton, says:—"I was greatly troubled with pimples and blotches breaking out on my face. I tried a number of remedies, and also specially dieted, yet the pimples and blotches remained. Acting on the suggestion of a friend, I began using Zam-Buk, and was much pleased to find an improvement after several applications. The itching was alleviated, and the inflammation seemed less. As I continued the Zam-Buk treatment, the pimples and blotches became less sore, the itching was cured altogether, and inflammation banished. In the course of a short time every blotch and pimple was removed."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for cuts, lacerations, burns, eczema, ring-worm, poisoned wounds, festering sores, bad leg, and all skin injuries and diseases. It is also a cure for piles. Druggists and Stores everywhere sell at 50c. a box, or post-free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price.

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and is so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual, no insult.

CATARRHOZONE

Rev. T. K. Smith, of White Head, N.S., was cured of catarrh by Catarrhozone.

The following statement coming from one of Nova Scotia's prominent churchmen carries conviction of the fact that Catarrhozone is all right.

"For years I tried all the advertised remedies for Catarrh, but was unable to get relief until I used Catarrhozone. Before I had used the Inhaler half an hour my nostrils became free and clear so that I could breathe easily through them. In one day Catarrhozone helped me immensely, stopped my coughing and hawking and cured a dull pain that was continually over my eyes. I have great pleasure in recommending Catarrhozone. I have proved it the best remedy for Catarrh and diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes."

There is certainly no remedy that is so well spoken of by the clergy as Catarrhozone and this can be accounted for by the fact that it gives perfect satisfaction.

It is the only remedy that reaches all diseased parts and gives quick relief without bad after effects. Catarrhozone contains no cocaine nor morphine. It is nature's own remedy, soothing and healing, and pleases everybody that uses it.

Catarrhozone is a local and constitutional treatment. The Inhaler clears the air passages, stops the headache, and Ferrozone Tablets that are included in every complete Catarrhozone outfit, never fail to drive impurities from the blood. This builds up and strengthens the system so that Catarrhal conditions cannot exist.

The speediest cure for Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Bronchitis, and Asthma is Catarrhozone. Two months' treatment, price $1.00; medium size 50c; at druggists, or N. C. Poison & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A GAME FISH PRESERVE

The proposal made by the Dominion Fisheries Commission that an extensive preserve for game fish should be made of the Georgian Bay region, extending from Killarney down to Cedar Point in the county of Simcoe, is one that this paper wishes to see adopted. The region described would include the shores of the Georgian Bay, the inland lakes and streams, and the Parry Sound and Muskoka districts. The proposal is that all net fishing should be prohibited within this preserve, only angling would be allowed, and anglers would have to take out licenses. They would be allowed to catch but one muskinonge in one day, six bass, and six yellow pickerel. The close season should, it is suggested, extend from January 1 to June 30.

The proposal that an angler should be allowed to catch but one lunge in a day may seem severe, but it will not seem so to those who know how scarce these fish are in these waters. Most anglers will agree that the season for black bass should not open, in the Georgian Bay country, until July 1. The 16th of June is too early for the season to open in those waters.

A dozen years ago a camping party could go up the shore from Penetanguishene and paddle about and fish among the countless islands without meeting anybody in a fortnight. Now the islands along that shore are dotted with summer cottages, whose occupants spend a great deal of cash in the nearby towns. Those people were attracted by the fresh air, the water, and the fishing. If the fishing keeps up the summer population will still greatly increase. The fishing, however, grows poorer every year, and unless the recommendation of the commissioners be adopted, and the region set apart as a game fish preserve, there will in a few years be no angling, and the summer population will cease to grow and will largely withdraw. If the close season is extended to to June 30, all the angling done there will never reduce those waters to a state of barrenness. Those lonely shores have a future as a summer resort region or no future at all, and the towns up that way should see that their interest lies in urging the adoption of the proposals of the Fisheries Commission.

Those who look to the United States to set the world an example in the matter of militarism have been somewhat discouraged by the trend of things of late. Uncle Sam takes on more and more the appearance of an armed man. Little by little the garb and manner of a civilian leave him, and he adopts the airs and ways of the soldier.

Dancer's Revenge.

One afternoon recently Jeannie Smith, a ballet dancer, entered a garage in Milton street, Glasgow, and approaching her sweetheart, Edward McEwan, a chauffeur, dashed a quantity of vitrol into his face. McEwan rushed to a hose-pipe and turned water on to his eyes to alleviate the agony. Meanwhile the girl threw the vitrol bottle against a wall and made off. Before she had gone many yards she produced a second bottle, containing carbolic acid, and, drinking the contents, she fell in the street in great agony. Other chauffeurs had gone to the assistance of McEwan, who was placed in a taxicab to be taken to the infirmary. Outside the garage the cab was stopped, and the young woman was also put into the vehicle. Both were detained in the infirmary and were reported in a critical condition, the man being terribly burned.

Miss Smith, who is 27 years of age and strikingly handsome, has been engaged as a ballet dancer in a local pantomime. She declares that McEwan, who is 25, had jilted her.

Marries a Porter.

Following the example of other ... abilities, Miss Dorothy Hopton, a ward in Chancery, who recently contracted a sensationally romantic marriage with Tom Jones, a Shropshire railway porter, has decided to go on the stage. According to the Liverpool Post, Mrs. Jones has accepted an engagement at an Oswestry music hall. The lady, it is stated, has a pleasing voice, and at her nightly turn at the Public Hall she will sing two songs. Mrs. Jones came from a well-known Shropshire family, and was heiress to a large fortune. She married to prevent her mother sending her to a Brussels convent. Mrs. Hopton has cut off all communication with her daughter and left the district, and pending the settlement of her affairs, Mrs. Jones has taken the opportunity of aiding her husband to get their living.

Bottle Tells of Tragedy.

A bottle was recently picked up on the Berwickshire coast near St. Abbs, containing the following message: "Captain or any one who receives this message shall receive the remains of the Dundee whaler Snowdrop; collided with iceberg, no hope, Nov. 14, 1908, sinking fast." For some time fears have been entertained regarding the safety of this vessel, of which nothing had been seen since she was sighted in the Arctic region last June.

Crockett's Profits.

Forty pounds a year was all Mr. S. R. Crockett received in his early days for editing a paper, most of which he wrote himself; while for his first great success, "The Stickit Minister," he only received 7s. 6d. per 1,000 words, when the stories appeared in a Glasgow weekly paper.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important. Both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, making the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, ends nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Belle, The Jessie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Richenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Luna Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.52.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, is sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chenowith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500. for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same lodge, and are now 45 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 300 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense shoots already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously. It is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 15c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

GO UP AHEAD.

Then See That You Stay There—You Can If You Work Hard.

Thirty years ago in a poor schoolhouse in a back district a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word that had passed down the entire class.

"Go up ahead," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."

The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one. Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every word.

"Dave, how do you get your lesson so well now?" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson and get my mother to hear me at night, then I go over them in the morning before I come in school, and I go over them at my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave!" said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way and you'll do."

Dave is today the manager of a big lumber company, and he attributes his start to the words:

"Go up ahead and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."

DO HEARTS BREAK?

Human Nature the Same Despite Modern Improvements.

Broken hearts, so the British Journal of Nursing tells us, are quite out of fashion. The disease has become obsolete, and two reasons are assigned for this. In the first place, we are told that women do not fall in love as once they did. More children are not encouraged to think on love and matrimony, and then women, having come to riper years and sounder judgment before they decide to marry, do not let themselves fall into that state which was supposed to produce cardiac rupture.

One ventures to express the opinion that the statement is not altogether accurate.

Human nature does not alter from one generation to another. People "fell in love" a thousand years ago; a thousand years hence they will be doing the same. But they wore their rue with a difference; so will those who are to succeed us. The fact is we do not now wear our hearts on our sleeves, and we have learned that if lovers prove untrue or unworthy there are better and more dignified ways of lamenting them than souring our tempers, wasting away and allowing our friends and relations to treat us as derelicts.

Solomon's Bathtub.

With Chronicles as its authority, the Plumbers' Trade Journal says that the bathroom was an invention of King Solomon, who put it in use a thousand years before the Christian era. It was sinful to enter the sanctuary unless the body was perfectly clean, and for the accommodation of priests a bathtub was erected at the entrance to the temple. It was said of Solomon, "He made a molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim round in compass and five cubits the height thereof, and a line of thirty cubits did compass it roundabout." According to the measurements, the Solomonian tub was forty-five feet in circumference at the top and six and one-half feet deep. It rested on carved figures of oxen and was of solid brass cast in one piece, decorated with a floral design. Connected with it there were ten small sinks, which were used for washing the offering.

Men Who Cheat Themselves.

I have known employees actually to work harder in scheming, shirking, trying to keep from working hard in the performance of their duties, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine, than they would have worked if they had tried to do their best and had given the largest, the most liberal service possible to their employers. The hardest work in the world is that which is grudgingly done. The youth who is always haggling over the question of how many dollars and cents he will sell his services for little realizes how he is cheating himself by not looking at the larger salary he can pay himself in increasing his skill, in expanding his experience and in making himself a better, stronger, more useful man.

College Foolishness Barred.

"John," said the farmer, "I've given you the best education the college had in the shop."

"Yes, sir."

"Never stood back for expenses?"

"Never."

"You speak six languages?"

"Perfectly."

"So fur, so good. Now, listen. Don't swear at the mule in Greek. Don't use no Latin terms to him, an' fling no French his way. Use the Georgy dialect that you an' the mule was raised to. It's my opinion that the mule won't stand no college foolishness."

Judge Hoar's Retort.

Judge Hoar and General Butler were opponents in a case of a new trial. General Butler quoted, "Eye for eye, skin for skin, tooth for tooth—yea, all that a man hath—will he give for his life."

To which Judge Hoar replied, "Yes, the devil quoted that once before in a motion for a new trial."

FOR A SPECIAL TRAIN

Quick Action Is Necessary When One Is Ordered.

WORK OF THE DISPATCHER.

This Official Has a Complicated Task in Putting the Special Through Without Interfering With the Running Time of Other Fast Trains.

Suppose you wished to take a special trip to any place on the map and the hour of your sudden resolution was 2 a. m. The chances are against knowing how to make this masterly move at such an unearthly hour, to say nothing of knowing how to go about it during the hours of business. It is easier than the uninitated possibly may believe. Of course the principal thing is money, the thing that makes both the mare and the special train go.

The train dispatcher is the official who can start the train while his superiors are asleep and when a wild eyed man who has a race against death to make halfway across the continent dashes into the station looking for a train that will make the distance on its own schedule. What the chief dispatcher wants to be sure about is the identity of the applicant for the unusual privilege and in this connection whether he is able to pay for a special.

Five thousand dollars in bills will make the dispatcher feel very much like ordering out the train. A deposit of that amount in his hands will undoubtedly bring the train out in a few minutes after the order is given. Sometimes a call on the telephone to the residence of a well known citizen who says he will be responsible for the cost of the train will answer the requirements of the dispatcher, or the check of the applicant, if he is a well known citizen, is a sufficient guarantee. It can be made large enough to cover the bill for the special.

In the case of a wealthy man who will let nothing stand in the way of accomplishing his purpose the cost of the train is not a previous consideration. He simply wants to get to a certain point at a certain time. Getting there on time is the uppermost thought in his mind. He paces restlessly up and down the platform until the train backs into the station or on to the siding where he is notified it may be waiting for him. Unless he stipulates that a private car be used in the train he will get a Pullman all by himself or those who accompany him. The use of a private car costs more, but is preferred by the wealthy patron. When everything is ready for embarking the work of the dispatcher has just begun.

This official must put the special through without interrupting seriously the running time of other fast trains. It takes some ticklish work, for the other trains must be "cut out" on side tracks just before the special is to pass. In this way the schedules of the other trains are not broken more than a few minutes. The special dashes past on the right of way, and the regular fast train follows it. Freight trains using the same track are apt to lie on the sidings longer than the passengers because they cannot make distances between sidings quick enough to cut out in time to give the special a clear track.

The man who has paid his good money for the right to the track does not expect to be stopped en route, and it becomes the business of the railway or railways over which he is racing against time to afford him all the facilities. Usually in case of such an extraordinary emergency the railway takes great pride in making a record run and landing its patron at his destination in time to accomplish his purpose. The best engineers obtainable and a trustworthy conductor are placed in charge of the equipment of one engine and one car, for the running is at a rate of speed not undertaken in the passenger service.

Usually the extraordinary passenger is required to give the railway company some form of release from responsibility for loss of life or injury from accident due to what might be regarded under ordinary circumstances as a reckless speed, but the man who is racing to see a loved wife or daughter or son is always willing to take a greater risk than at any other time in his existence. But not only is his own life, but the lives of the train crew, in jeopardy during a wild race over the rails. However, on such an occasion the whole crew is imbued with the excitement and heroic nature of the fast mission and contribute in every way to the fulfillment of the errand.

Thousands of dollars have been paid by private citizens for just such races with death and sometimes where great financial crisis is at stake. The railway companies, despite the large honorarium received for undertaking such journeys, are loath to accept a passenger on these conditions. The crisis must be one that involves remarkable stress of mind and money. Usually their acceptance of such great responsibility both to the single passenger as well as thousands of others who may be using the tracks at the same time is governed by a great deal of sentiment.—St. Louis Republic.

GRIEF AND GREED.

Sorely Afflicted, Yet He Kept an Eye on the Main Point.

The following communication was recently addressed by a grief stricken German husband to the secretary of a life insurance company in Germany:

"Sir—Deeply afflicted, I take up my pen to inform you that my dear wife, Anne Maria, nee L——, insured in your company for the sum of $750, has suddenly died, leaving me a victim to the deepest despair. This grievous blow fall on me this morning at 7. Kindly endeavor to let me have my insurance money as promptly as possible. The policy bears the number ——, as you will find by reference to your books.

"I may say very seriously and in all sincerity that she was a faithful wife and an admirable mother. In order that all formalities may be settled with promptitude I inclose herewith a certificate officially recording her death.

"Her illness was but a short one. Nevertheless she suffered intensely, which naturally renders my grief all the more poignant. I have no doubt that you will afford me partial consolation by sending on the insurance money as promptly as possible.

"In return I hereby formally promise to have my second wife insured in your company for $1,500, double the sum for which my defunct darling was insured.

"My grief is immense, yet the conviction that you will afford me consolation sustains me during this terrible ordeal. In the hope that we shall soon draw our insurance money, my children join me in," etc.—Exchange.

CAME ON THE JUMP.

A Signal That Brought the Busy Waiters in a Body.

To get a waiter quickly in a big cafe is at times very difficult, but a Germantown man recently learned a method from a New York friend which is guaranteed instantly to bring not one but several waiters. This Germantown man was giving a dinner in one of Philadelphia's swellest cafes, with the New Yorker and two women as his guests. After a long delay a waiter came and took the order. Then one of the women decided that she must make a change in her order. The host signaled one waiter after another without avail. After about ten minutes of violent gesticulating on his part the New Yorker said:

"You don't know how to attract their attention. I'll bet you $5 I can bring a waiter to this table within thirty seconds."

"I'll take the bet," said the Philadelphian, drawing out his watch. The New Yorker reached over into the middle of the table, picked up a thin, delicate glass and deliberately dashed it to the floor. Instantly every waiter in the room came rushing up to see what was the trouble.

"Charge one tumbler up on the bill," said the New Yorker laconically, "and change one of those oyster orders to Blue Points."

As the waiters dispersed he added, "I guess you owe me a five spot, old man."

Fishing Snakes.

While fishing in the Fort St. George moat, at Madras, a correspondent of Country Life saw a snake fifteen inches long come out of the water with a fish in its mouth. On catching sight of the writer it dropped the fish and bolted, leaving the fish on the bank alive. On another occasion, while fishing in a reservoir near Ghatabad, he again saw a snake emerging from the water with a fish in its mouth. This snake was about twenty-four inches long, and on killing it he was able to identify the fish as a common species of Indian fresh water fish. Later on he saw a viper, nearly four feet long, lying in shallow water. The writer hooked it ashore with his tackle, upon which the snake attacked him, leaving a large yellow fang in his fishing rod.

Nature's Armor.

Lobsters and crabs are familiar examples of armor bearing creatures. The lobsters have wonderful coats of mail suggestive of those devised by human warriors in the age of chivalry. They combine perfect security with ease of movement, owing to their jointed structure. The manner in which crabs when at rest tuck their legs beneath them so as to bring them under the shelter of the hard carapace is interesting. The crab is doubly protected, for it resembles a water worn pebble, and thus looks to large fishes which like to eat the crustacean—so long as it keeps still—very similar to the objects with which it is surrounded.

Cutting the Finger Nails.

Cutting the finger nails appears to have been the most indispensable service the ancient Roman barber rendered to his patrons. Martial, chaffing a Jap who had tried to dodge the barber by using plasters to remove his beard, asks triumphantly, "How are you going to manage about your nails?" And the miser in Plautus collects the parings of his nails from the barber to make something out of them, apparently never dreaming that he could save money by cutting them himself.

No Excuse.

Waiter (whose attention has been called to a gross error in addition)—Very sorry, sir; but, even if you hadn't found out the mistake, the firm would have benefited, not me. Diner—Then you have no excuse!—Punch.

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Dr Shoop first pointed out this error This is why his prescription— Dr Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerves. Dublin's Slums.

The strong remarks of the Recorder of Dublin in regard to the terrible slums which darken the Irish capital have again drawn attention to what is undoubtedly a shocking state of affairs. Sir Charles Cameron, medical officer of health for the city, said he considered that the main cause of the extreme poverty was the lack of employment owing to the absence of large industries. "Thirty-seven out of every hundred families live in one room," he said, 'and I think their case is worse than that of the very poor in any centre in England. The proportion of the people of Dublin who are very badly off in regard to good clothes and fire is very large indeed. Here is a typical case which has been brought to my notice. It is that of a poor young woman five or six and twenty in an advanced state of consumption. She has four children, including a baby in arms who is also consumptive, and her husband only earns eleven shilling a week as a messenger. All they live on is bread and tea. There are considerably over 1,000 regular beggars in Dublin. Most of the very poor live in tenement houses. Much of the property is old and decayed. It often gets so dilapidated as to be unfit for habitation. We have closed about 3,000 such houses in the last twenty-five years. Some of the rooms are let as low as 1s. a week, but the rents vary from 1s. to 2s. It is strange how few bachelors you find among the very poor. They marry no matter how poor they are and thus the ranks of the poverty-stricken are swelled."

A Youthful Robber.

Brought before the Preston (Eng.) magistrates recently as not being under proper guardianship, a diminutive boy named Francis Glaze, eleven years of age, was remanded for a week, after a remarkable account had been given of his alleged proficiency in thiefs of a particular order. The chief constable informed the court that Glaze was the leader of a gang of boy thieves who went about robbing letter and pillar-boxes in different parts of the town. On the previous Sunday alone the prisoner obtained in this manner cheques, postal orders, etc., to the value of £460, and he had given the postal authorities a great amount of trouble. On another occasion he obtained over £60. Detective Woodacre stated that the boy had a remarkably small hand and a thin arm, which he could thrust through apertures in the boxes and so abstract the contents. The prisoner hid the plunder in a cellar underneath his school and in crevices in different parts of the town. Although so young, he was absolutely beyond control, and frequented the company of thieves.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain tells an excellent story against himself. When he left his Alma Mater he travelled on the Continent for some months, and then returned to Birmingham with the intention of devoting himself seriously to politics. He had been at home only a few days when he met his old nurse, who inquired what vocation he thought of pursuing. "Oh," he said, in reply, "I'm going in for politics!" "For politics!" was the exclamation of the old lady. "Oh, Mr. Austen, I should have thought two in the family, your father and Mr. Richard, enough to have had in politics! Why don't you go in for something useful?"

OBITUARY

MRS. FREDERIC NICHOLLS.

Death came with startling suddenness to Mrs. Nicholls, wife of Mr. Frederic Nicholls, second vice-president and managing director of the Canadian General Electric Company, at her beautiful home, 13 Homewood place, last evening. Mrs. Nicholls sat down to dinner with the family about 7 p.m., apparently in her usual good health. Shortly after dinner she retired to her room, where she was stricken with apoplexy, and died shortly afterwards without recovering consciousness.

Deceased was Miss Florence Greham of Ottawa, but the greater portion of her married life was spent in Toronto. She was a lady of charming personality, charitable to a degree, and greatly beloved by her large circle of friends and acquaintances. The intelligence of her untimely demise will be received with general regret. Besides her husband she leaves a family of four sons and three daughters. The sons are Henry G. P., Walter, Frederic, jr., and Norman. One daughter married Mr. Ernest Proctor and the other two, Hazel and Bessie, are at home. Mrs. Nicholls was a member of the Anglican Church. The funeral, which will be private, will take place to Mount Pleasant cemetery on Friday.—Mail & Empire.

WEDDING BELLS

KINGSLEY—FOLEY.

A quiet but exceedingly pretty wedding took place in St. Peter's cathedral, at an early hour yesterday morning, when Miss May Cecelia Foley, formerly of Lindsay, was united in marriage to Mr. E. J. Kingsley of Lindsay. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McCabe. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Veronica, and Mr. W. C. Cain, B.A., of Toronto, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley left on the morning train for an extended trip to Buffalo, New York and Boston, returning via Quebec and Montreal. On their return they will reside in Lindsay.

Two More Grass Fires

There were two grass fires yesterday afternoon. The first one came in from box 45 on Barnardo avenue, and while the brigade were there another alarm was telephoned in three minutes later from Jackson Park. For this fire the chief hooked on his own rig and hustled after the department. He got a couple of chemicals and two men and went to the park. This fire was started by a couple of boys who are known to the chief, and a police court case is likely to follow.

Case Between Stony Lake Navigation Co. and The Otonabee was Settled

The case before the Admiralty Court which has occupied the attention of the court for the past two days has been settled amicably by the two principals. His Honor Judge Hodgins of the Toronto branch of the Admiralty Court, was on the bench. After he had heard the evidence for two days he adjourned the trial yesterday afternoon, stating that it was a case in which the damages claimed were comparatively trifling. He thought it would be advisable for the principals in the case to get together and endeavor to reach a settlement. Each party concerned retired for consultation. After some time it was found that they were still far apart and on returning to court so reported to the judge. Then his honor addressed a few words to the two principals, Mr. T. P. Young, president of the Stony Lake Navigation Co., the plaintiff, and Mr. W. H. Roberston, president of the Otonabee Navigation Co., the defendants. He pointed out the fact that the costs of the case would be considerably above the amount of the damages that could possibly be shown; therefore a settlement was most desirable for both parties. He recommended another conference, and adjourned the court until 9.30 this morning asking the principals to get together in the meantime.

Last night the desired settlement was accomplished and both parties are satisfied. The result will probably mean a better understanding in future between the two navigation companies, and a better service will be afforded the public, as the settlement is of such a nature as to mean harmony and good will.

Foot of Snow Falls in London--Farmers May be Heavy Losers

London, Ont., April 29.—The worst blizzard of the season is raging here. The snow is over a foot deep, and is still falling heavily.

The railroads and street car lines are completely tied up, as all the snow plows were put away weeks ago.

Farmers who were busy seeding have to stop, and it is feared they will lose much that was sown.

SLEIGHS AND CUTTERS OUT.

Woodstock, April 29.—As heavy a snow storm as Woodstock saw all last winter commenced last night and is still raging this morning.

Nearly a foot of snow has fallen, driven westward by a high wind, and sleighs and cutters are to be seen on the streets.

The oldest inhabitants say they never saw anything like it before at this late period of the spring.

Towards 11 o'clock the storm moderated greatly, and there are indications that rain is not far off.

NO SNOW AT PORT HOPE.

Port Hope, April 29.—A strong easterly wind is prevailing here, with raw, cloudy, unseasonable weather, but no snow as yet. The temperature is 34. Spring development is retarded.

FURNACES ALL BUSY.

Kingston, April 29.—A very chilly, strong east wind is the feature of the weather today. Winter clothing is still in use, and furnaces are running in nearly all the homes. April has been a real winter month this year.

FINE AND CLEAR AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, April 29.—Weather conditions here today are fine and clear, with a rising temperature and no wind. There has been much wet and cold weather here during the past fortnight, but the indications seem to point to clear and finer conditions.

BOLT FIRED THE COLLEGIATE.

Chatham, April 29.—At 3.30 o'clock this morning a heavy bolt of lightning struck the tower of the collegiate institute, which immediately caught fire. The janitor, Mr. Brown, was the only man in the building at the time. He was in the basement adjusting the furnaces. He was stunned by the shock. A young lad named Kenneth Cummings was the first to notice the blaze. The firemen were successful in keeping the fire in the tower and the other damage to the rest of the schoolhouse done only by the water.

The storm which passed over this city last night and this morning was one of the most severe ever witnessed in Chatham at this season of the year. Last night it snowed fully four inches and this morning it turned to sleet and rain. The thunder and lightning, which accompanied it, was very sharp and severe. It is expected that it will do a lot of damage especially to the crops of Kent county.

FIERCE STORM AT GUELPH.

Guelph, April 29.—One of the fiercest snowstorms of the season is prevailing in this section. It commenced about eight o'clock this morning, and a strong east wind and snow combined is making things very unpleasant, and putting the street railway service off schedule time. All morning trains show the effect of the storm. The early train from the West appeared to have encountered the storm all the way from Sarnia. It was so heavily covered with snow.

Y.W.C.A. Annual Meeting Tonight

The annual meeting of the Y.W.C.A. will take place this evening in the parlors. It will be open to of this week. It will be open to the public and a large gathering is expected. An effort was made to secure Mrs. Bob. Kilgour of Toronto, the Dominion president, for some night next week, but she was unable to come another night but this Friday. Mrs. Kilgour will deliver an address, and Miss E. Pringle, soloist of Charlotte street Methodist, will sing. Refreshments will also be served.

Shrubb Picks Marsh to Win Canadian Derby

Toronto, April 29.—To pick a winner of the Canadian Marathon Derby at Hanlan's Point Saturday afternoon is "some" task.

There is no accurate line upon the men at all, outside of Fred Simpson, John D. Marsh, and Tom Coley. All these are runners who have gone the route before, but at that, two of the three have not stayed in other long races.

Simpson went down in the Svanberg race April 18, and Coley could not stick out the route in the Canadian Marathon trials last spring.

Marsh has never broken down in long races, but he has had his head beaten off at shorter distances by men he can, and in most cases has walloped in longer journeys.

Alfred Shrubb fancies Marsh.

"This Canadian Derby I regard as a very open race," said Alfred Shrubb, the referee today, upon his return from New York. "There are ten dangerous men in the line-up, but after looking them all over I pin my faith to John D. Marsh. Marsh is a plugger, a good strong fellow, with sturdy legs, lots of bottom and courage. Unless Fred Simpson is greatly improved since he ran John Svanberg, Marsh will beat him. Tom Coley, if he is right should be a factor, too. There are three or four crashing good Hamiters in there, too, but I don't think any of them will last the route. Sellen is in grand shape right now, but I don't think he can go the route any more than I can. Of course if he can he will win on his early speed. Wood, Meadows, Cunningham and the Indian, Red Hawk, are tall Hamiters, and I doubt their ability to go all the way. Of the rest of the field I know nothing, and there is always a chance for the proverbial dark horse to come up, but at that I think Marsh, Simpson and Coley will fight it out for the honors."

Shrubb is right about the speed merchants, but the speedy boys are the ones that upset all calculations in these long races. They start in to tear things early, and some good, reliable, plugger gets the fever of impatience, goes after them too early in the race and kills himself, leaving some more phlegmatic and less fancied individual to come on and get a slice of the prize melon. Then, again, a fast man who gets a nice long lead early is liable to lay in behind a plugger, and with gritted teeth hang on till the bitter end and win out a race, which on form he has no license to win.

A belated entry arrived yesterday for the Marathon, bringing the total to 20 entries. The latest is Charles Green of Caledonia. His entry was delayed in the mail.

The old fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach, or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments: the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerves. When these nerves fail, then these organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days, and see! Improvement will promptly and surely follow. Sold by all dealers.

Hamilton Coronor Cannot Execute Warrant Outside Wentworth County

Was Decision of Court in the Kinrade Case —Certiorari Proceedings are Not the Proper Mode

Toronto, April 29.—The following is the text of the decision of the Divisional Court in the Kinrade case.

"The application was argued on its merits, subject to a preliminary objection. I have considered the motion in both aspects. I'll briefly give the conclusions reached.

"First; I think that the proceeding by way of certiorari is not the proper method of seeking redress. The coroner in issuing the warrant to apprehend based upon default in defying the summons to appear and testify, was acting not in a judicial, but in a ministerial capacity. His duty is to serve such witnesses as may be indicated by the Crown or its representatives and to follow up that summons in the event of default by enforcing their attendance. Therein he acts not according to the mandate of another as provided by the statute.

"The little authority there is as to the examination of magistrates' warrants upon certiorari justifies the distinction and this conclusion. For example, if the warrant is of judicial character such as a search warrant, certiorari will lie; other wise the warrant is of ministerial character.

"On the other hand, I think it very clear that the coroner is a local officer and can act only within his own municipal jurisdiction. Whether the service of his summons out of the county be or not be valid service I do not express an opinion, but I am very well satisfied that the warrant to arrest or apprehend based thereon cannot be validly executed in another country. This is pretty distinctly indicated in 'Jarvis on Coroners,' where it is said that the precise point has never been decided. But a similar situation has been judicially passed upon in this Province to the effect that the power of a local officer cannot be legally carried into effect outside of his territorial jurisdiction.

"I do not think we should interfere on the ground that the witness having been already questioned at great length should not be subjected to further examination. We must assume that the magistrate will not permit the witness to be unduly harassed. That he will not permit the examiner to go over the ground already traveled; that he will not permit any line of inquiry to lay a foundation for collateral purposes. And from what was said by the deputy Attorney General in court it is to be assumed that the witness is to be examined on new matter lately disclosed or discovered.

"This application is dismissed. No costs."

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

It was expected that the announcement of the decision reached by the judges would end all doubt, at least as far as the immediate course of the Crown is concerned. Such was not the case. For about fifteen minutes Mr. Justice Magee spoke at the opening of the Divisional court this morning. Then those who had been in the court walked out into the corridor to see what it all meant.

The Crown's Next Move

If the warrant issued by Coroner Anderson, of Hamilton, for the appearance of Miss Florence Kinrade is decided to be illegal a "Crown Office Subpoena," a special legal process never before called into use in Canada, will be issued.

Application must be made by the Attorney General in person, and a declaration made by him that the presence of the witness is necessary in the interests of justice.

The application must also be made to a judge of the High Court. It is based on the English Criminal Law, as no special provision in the Canadian Criminal Code exists. The penalty for disregarding the judge's order under the English law is very severe.

The Crown's last hope of validating the bench warrant disappeared this afternoon when it was learned that the backing of the warrant by Col. Denison, or any other magistrate, would still leave it as useless for enforcement in Toronto as it was before.

This, it is understood, was the view held by the Divisional Court on the ground that no magistrate had a right to endorse a warrant from an outside district, unless it had been issued by another magistrate. The statute does not include coroners.

The only step now open to the Attorney General's Department is to make application to a High Court judge for a "Crown Office Subpoena."

Dead Bodies Lie in Fields and Float Down into the Harbors

Adana, Asiatic Turkey, April 29.—The conditions in the country surrounding Adana, as a result of the recent fanatical attacks by Moslems upon the Christian population, are terrible.

Dead bodies are lying out on the fields. Numberless Armenian farmhouses have been burned.

Conditions are most unsanitary, and dysentery is beginning to make its appearance.

Mersina, Asiatic Turkey, April 29.—The river that empties itself into the sea here is carrying down a great many bodies of men, women and children. Several corpses are drifting in close proximity to the Italian warship in the harbor. They undoubtedly were thrown into the river in the country above the city.

The men from the British warship in the harbor are doing splendid service.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief in the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents, large size 50 cents.

To Drill for Gas on a Douro Farm

Warsaw, April 29.—Mr. David Forsythe is busily engaged getting ready for drilling an oil well on his farm, about three miles from the village. Mr. Forsythe has all the machinery placed on the ground and will start to drill in a short time. It will be remembered that Mr. Forsythe discovered coal oil in digging a well, and has been offered a large price for the property several times. We are expecting good results out of this experiment, and we hope that the result will overshadow all our expectations. We hope to see Warsaw the Petrolia of Central Ontario. The coal oil that was found in the well seemed very pure, and it is to be hoped that we will soon be in a position that we do not have to pay John D. Rockefeller a bounty for our light after the sun goes down.

Will Choose Her Successor Tonight

An important meeting of the Board of Managers of the Y.W.C.A., will be held this evening at 7.30 when the resignation of Miss Haycock, the superintendent, will be received, and her successor will be appointed.

"Question Night" for Astronomers

The local center of the Royal Astronomical Society will have an unusually interesting meeting at the Collegiate Institute next Tuesday evening. Fifty new slides are being sent here from Toronto and they will be shown.

The slides will be of great interest to those interested in astronomy. It will also be "question" night and persons having queries of an astronomical nature should forward them to the local newspapers before Saturday. These questions will be answered at the meeting.

The following question has already been sent in;

"What advantage will accrue from having explorers reach either of the poles?"

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and is so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual, no insult.

The Kinrade Inquest Adjourned Until Next Monday Night

Toronto, April 29.—Mr. J. R. Cartwright, deputy attorney general, stated this afternoon that there would be no inquest in Hamilton tonight and that he had advised Crown-Attorney Washington, Hamilton, to adjourn the sittings tonight until Monday night. He also stated that out of deference to the decision of the Divisional Court the Crown would not take any further notice of the bench warrant issued by the coroner. Some other method will be adopted.

FOUND AFTER LONG SEARCH.

The "Crown Office Subpoena," which will probably be the next move taken by the prosecution, it is understood, was discovered only after a diligent search by the department for several days.

It is an old English form of practice and is not contained in the Canadian criminal code. There is a general clause, however, which makes the English criminal law as it was in 1759 the law of Canada in all points not excepted or otherwise provided for by Canadian law. This subpoena even in the English courts has seldom been brought into use, and has been resorted to by the attorney-general's department for the emergency that would arise in case the Divisional Court's judgment was adverse.

Coming from the attorney-general himself, and from no one else, the application must be in the form of a sworn statement as to the pressing need for the appearance of the witness. It has never been used in a Canadian case before.

The disobedience of the subpoena is at the "peril" of the party who receives it, and almost any penalty can be imposed.

Chimney Fires

Three chimney fires from which no damage resulted were on the business list of the firemen yesterday. One call came at 11.45 for a fire in a chimney on the T.A.S. rooms, and another for a chimney fire at the Temperance House, of which Mr. Foster is proprietor.

General Hains Tells of His Son's Nervous Disposition

Flushing, N.Y., April 29.—General Peter C. Hains, retired, the aged father of Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., of the Coast Artillery, who is on trial before Justice Garretson in the Supreme Court here for the murder of Wm. E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club last August, took the stand as the first witness for the defence at the resumption of the trial today.

John F. McIntyre, counsel for the defendant, expected to occupy two or three hours with the direct examination of the general, taking him over many of the early incidents of his son's life, to show the captain's irritable and nervous temperament as a child, and his many irrational acts previous to May, 1908, when he first learned of the alleged improper conduct of his wife, Claudia, with Annis.

The defence contends that his trouble drove him into a state of total insanity, subject to violent maniacal outbursts, during one of which he shot down the man whom he believed had ruined his home.

When the prisoner reached court today, his chair was moved from the counsel table to a place near the jury box, where he could look directly into the eyes of the witnesses. As his father began to tell his own record in the army in answer to Mr. McIntyre's questions, the captain sat with his face toward the jury, and paid no attention to the witness.

The witness said that he discovered at an early period of Capt. Hains' life that the boy was suffering from excessive nervousness. He described the conduct of Claudia Hains toward her husband, the captain, during their early married life as that of "a loving wife." He said that they were very happy, until 1908.

DEFENCE IS INSANITY

Because of anonymous threats against the life of Thornton Hains, counsel has asked for a police bodyguard for him, and the court will probably delegate a special officer to sit near him.

Era of Great Mining Development Dawning

The pulse of national expansion is beating firmer today than at any period since 1906, and the current year should pass into history as one of the most notable in the industrial life of this country.

Much has been said of the wealth of the agricultural areas of the Dominion, and the wealth of its timber.

But it is in mining that Canada will experience this year a new national impulse.

The new mining fields of Canada have dared to, not only rival, but surpass the great mining camps of the Western States.

The rush into the north country this spring will have no equal in mining history, not even in the great rush to the gold fields of the Yukon.

Millions of foreign capital have been invested in Cobalt and Gow Ganda, and many more millions will yet be invested.

It is stated on reliable authority that the United States Steel Corporation has invested over $1,000,000 in the mining industry of the north country, also that the Krupps of Germany have been heavy investors.

Canada is just awakening to the wealth and importance of her mineral resources.

In no mining camp in the world, outside of Alverda, Mexico, have silver veins of such fabulous richness been discovered as in Cobalt and Gow Ganda.

Might be the Means of Preventing Serious Fire

As a result of the increasing number of Chimney fires Chief Howard mentioned to The Times last night that a little word of caution passed out to the ratepayers would not be amiss and might be the means of preventing in the future a serious blaze. While the spring cleaning is being done the chimneys should not be overlooked and particularly while there are strong April winds which will rapidly cause trouble in a length of pipe that is plugged with soot. "A word to the wise is sufficient," Chief Howard states that since the first of January there have been 36 chimney fires to reach, which the apparatus has travelled 36 1-2 miles.

City's Finances Need Increasing

No doubt a deep impression has been made upon the people by the financial position of the city this year. Anyone who has ever followed the Board of Works department will know how much work can be done for $6,000 or $7,000. It is very little and it will not take long to spend it.

In talking over the financial affairs the other night in the city offices, one person observed that already the special grants department had exceeded its appropriation. Another gentleman mentioned the fact that four hotels had only been granted a three months' license, and if they were cut off the city's revenue would go down several hundred dollars, while a third stated that nearly all the dogs in the city had been killed. The outlook is indeed blue.

A gentlemen suggested that the council pass a bylaw at once compelling the cleaning of chimneys, and then fine every person whose chimney takes fire, thus increasing the revenue of the city.

A move might also be made to put everybody on the black list and all who are found drunk be fined $20 and costs.

The aldermen might place a fine of $5 upon themselves for being late at meetings.

A tax on old maids would also swell the city coffers, while public marriages with $1 entrance fee to guests would help some.

Other suggestions could be made if the fathers of Peterborough care to accept them.

Cigarette and Smoker

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—A whole lot of nonsense is being heard at the present time about the abolition of cigarette smoking among the young. Surely there is no one so foolish as to believe that cigarette smoking among boys can be stopped so long as adults are allowed to smoke the coffin nails. Cigarettes are undoubtedly injurious to young people. At the same time they do the adult no good, and it does not matter who smokes them they are an abomination to everyone. A polecat and its famous odor is sweet compared to the stench of a cigarette and a cigarette smoker.

Just so long, however, as those overgrown Willies are permitted to smoke cigarettes and poison the air, just so long will the boys under age smoke them, for it is a very small percentage of cigarette smokers who possess sufficient grey matter to refuse a coffin nail to a kid.

Let the Anti-Cigarette League and the editors of the papers who pretend to be opposed to youthful smoking, direct their guns against the sale of cigarettes altogether.

Yours truly,

CITIZEN.

"There's a Reason"

Catarrh

THE MOTHER OF CONSUMPTION.

How this dread disease may be prevented and cured—the opinions of people who have been cured by

CATARRHOZONE.

Catarrh is very often spoken of as the mother of consumption, because when unchecked it extends from its place of beginning to the bronchial tubes then deeper and deeper, till finally the disease becomes consumption of the lungs.

The safest and best remedy for any form of Catarrh is Catarrhozone. It is inhaled to all parts of the breathing organs, kills the disease, and drives it completely out of the system.

Mrs. Mary J. Whitney, of Clay street, Topeka, Kansas, was cured of Nasal Catarrh after twenty years' suffering by Catarrhozone. She says;

"I owe to Catarrhozone an immense debt of gratitude. It cured me of Catarrh of the most disagreeable kind after doctors without number had pronounced my case incurable. My breath is pure and my respiration regular, and I do not cough any more since using Catarrhozone. It has cured me perfectly."

Another case of Chronic Catarrh that was cured quickly by Catarrhozone is that of Mr. G. I. Luce, of young Nassau street, Mr. Luce says;

"I tried for four years to get rid of Nasal Catarrh, used salt douches, steamers, tablets, stomach medicines, etc., but they didn't do me much good.

"Then I tried Catarrhozone, and received relief in a few hours. It cured in a week, so that I never had a recurrence of my former trouble."

Miss Winer, who resides on May street in Hartford, Conn., was cured of throat trouble by Catarrhozone, and speaks of her recovery in the following words:—

"Repeated colds finally resulted in a Catarrhal condition from which I suffered more or less every spring and fall. Catarrhozone was the only remedy that relieved and cured me. I recommended it."

No treatment is so good for Catarrhal affections and Bronchitis as Catarrhozone. Its success is quite unequalled in the history of medicine. It will cure you quickly and surely, and is well worth a trial. Two months' treatment guaranteed to cure, price $1.00; small size 50c. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Buy it today.

C.P.R. Sending Out 50,000 Free Packages of Flower Seeds to Its Employees.

WILL MEAN 1,500 FINE GARDENS STRETCHING ACROSS CONTINENT.

(Montreal "Witness.")

Enthusiasm and success are stamped all over the scheme for making the stations of the Canadian Pacific Railway the links in a flower chain extending across the continent. Mr. M. S. Dunlop, the chief of the C.P.R. claims department, twelve years ago inaugerated the free distribution of flower seeds to station agents and others, and the beautiful flower gardens by which so many of the company's stations are surrounded in the summer months are the direct result. In this direction the company has certainly given an impulse to civic pride all over the Dominion the full effects of which can never be adequately estimated. It is been noticed wherever the station agent or section men established a garden with the seeds supplied free from the company's floral departments, the enthusiasm for flowers invariably extends to the whole community and fosters pride in the beautifying of the homes of the people.

Mr. Dunlop is now sending out the annual package of seeds. No fewer than 50,000 packages, representing 32 varieties, are being shipped out, to be distributed in 1,500 gardens across the continent.

"The flower fever," said Mr. Dunlop this morning, "has spread over 10,000 miles of railway, and the desire for flowers extends to the company's hotels, dining cars, Atlantic and Pacific steamers, as well as the steamers on the Great Lakes, inland system of British Columbia and the B.C. coast service.

"Agents, sectionmen and employes, together with their wives, vie with each other and make a flowery chain across Canada, and now wherever there is a C.P.R. station, section house, or office building, there you will find flowers.

"Later on thousands of plants and shrubs will be sent out, while last fall we distributed 250,000 tulips, hyacinths, lilies, crocuses, iris bulbs. This means that with these sent out in former years there will soon be millions of early spring bulbs in bloom.

"For months I have been receiving hundreds of letters of encouragement and inquiries regarding the flower scheme for the present year, and the indications are that the work will be made broader and greater by the hundreds of amateurs who now vie with each other to brighten their surroundings by the cultivation of flowers during [illegible] time."

Mr. Dunlop's office is a veritable bureau of information on the subject of floriculture, four large members of the employes write to him for pointers. This morning the office was gaily decorated with flowers in honor of the occasion. The varieties of seeds sent out today were as follows:—Alyssum, antirrhinum, cosmos, balsam, candytuft, carnation, calimbera, dahlia, dianthus, cacheolscholtzia, everlasting flowers, gaillardia, hibiscus, hyacinth bean, kochia, mignonette, nasturtium, nicotiana, pansy; petunia; phlox, poppy, portulaca, scabiosa, stocks, sunflower, sweet peas, verbena and zinnia.

Colonial Weaving Co. Request Granted

A letter was received by the council from the Colonial Weaving Company, Limited, in reference to the bylaw which was passed some time ago. The company pointed out that owing to the financial stringency last year the company did not build as was intended, but this year they are prepared to go ahead and asked the city to amend the bylaw so that the new factory will have a frontage of 50 feet instead of 60, and that the number of hands to be employed be 60 hands instead of 90 hands, and that the time be extended to 1910 instead of 1909.

The company will be in operation by the 1st of September of this year, and when they get under way they will employ 010 hands.

The bylaw has already been confirmed by the legislature, and cannot be changed without going to the legislature again, and under the circumstances the city could do nothing. The city clerk was instructed to write to Mr. R. R. Hall of the company to that effect. The council will not, however, oppose the action upon the part of the company to have the bylaw amended by the legislature.

The new building was to have been 60x200 feet, and was to have been completed by June 1st next. The company only want to build now 50x200 feet.

Aldermen Gillespie and Duncan moved that the council express its willingness to apply to the legislature for an amendment to the bylaw in accordance to the request of the Colonial Weaving Co., on condition that the number of hands employed be 60 hands for ten months or 50 hands for twelve months.

This motion is on condition that the work be gone on with this year and that the company put up a marked cheque for $200 to cover the expense of the bylaw, and the motion for the amendment in case they do not go ahead with their work this year. The cheque to be put up by June 1st this year.

This motion was carried.

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for over non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bell, The Jessie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Davey, Richardson, Flint Home, Henriette, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lumn Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $2048.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Sullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I am sure best one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and is continuous thickening 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chasesmith, Mayer Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, it is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us dark $500. for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 60 feet deep, are from the surface, we will sink this shaft 500 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense sheets already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a portion where big things are being accomplished continuously. It is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profits through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $25,000, are selling stock at 15c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

THE USEFUL PIG.

A Colored Woman's Story of a Trade and Its Results.

A colored woman was being examined at a conference at Tuskegee. "Do the people in your community own homes?" came the query from Mr. Booker Washington.

"I think's they's fixing to own 'em, suh."

"But do they own them?"

"A heap of times you can't just tell, suh. But they's holding 'em down."

"Do you own your home?"

"Yes, suh, I do," proudly. "And I can tell you just how I got it. I swapped a puppy dog for it."

"Tell us about it."

"Well, it was this way. When I started I didn't have anything at all but just a little yaller puppy dog.

"I took the dog over to my brother-in-law's. He had eight little bits of pigs, oh, just so little, and I swapped the puppy with him for one of the pigs. It was such a little pig that it didn't look like it would live, but I nursed it good, and I prayed to the Lord to make that little pig come for'ard to do me good, and the pig lived and grew.

"The first year I turned her out, and when she came back in the fall she brought me seven little pigs with her. That was my start. I've never had to buy any meat since. This winter I've killed three hogs, and I've got another at home now ready to kill. I've got forty acres of land now, all paid for, and a house, and it all come from that one little puppy."

"Do you hear that," exclaimed Mr. Washington, "you men? Some of you'd better go back home and swap your dogs for pigs!"

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

It Illustrates the Wonderful Ability of the Ancient Egyptians.

The cost of the labor and material necessary to duplicate the great pyramid of Ghizh at the present time would amount to considerably more than $20,000,000, according to a paper read before the Society of Engineers in New York city by R. S. Wheeler, says the American Architect. The cost of the material alone is estimated at $40,000,000.

This structure, one of the wonders of the world, is founded on solid rock at a depth of about 120 feet below the surface level and rises to a height of 454 feet. Its base covers an area of almost fifteen acres.

Mr. Wheeler's scheme for the reproduction of this pyramid contemplates first the setting of a base of concrete. This would represent about 2,000,000 cubic yards of material and would cost at least $10,000,000. The estimate for the superstructure is about $30,000,000, and it would contain 2,312,000 cubic yards of backing stone and 140,000 cubic yards of facing stone. Mr. Wheeler's estimate of labor is 24,000,000 days.

These figures are cited to show the great engineering skill of the Egyptians and the fact that no task in construction appeared to be too large for a people whose extant monuments showed their patience and ability to overcome obstacles that would daunt even the modern engineer.

Curious Epitaphs.

Old New England graveyards are not the only ones which contain curious epitaphs. The old time dweller of Miglen who "died of a falling tree," as his headstone asserts, had a fellow in misfortune in faroff Austria, as is shown by W. A. Baillie-Grohman's "The Tyrol and the Tyrolese."

A wooden slab, painted with the representation of a prostrate tree under which lies a man in spread eagle attitude, bears testimony to the violent death of "Johann Leitzberger, aged fifty-two and three-quarters years. This upright and virtuous youth was squashed by a falling tree."

The record of Michael Gantner is even more succinct and convincing. He "climbed up, fell down and was dead."

Horse Sense.

A horse is so constructed by nature that he has no desire to do anything which will injure his health. He walks around whatever is not good for him and without a struggle. But man is so constructed that whatever is not good for him he wants to do. He eats too much, and he eats too fast. He drinks while eating, and there is nothing proper that he does without an effort. Why this distinction in favor of a horse? It may be said that a horse has only instinct, while a man has reason, which he should use. It is a pity that man was not given more instinct and less reason.

First Aid.

"If you were called upon to deal with athyrotical person," asked the examiner at the emergency class, "what would you do?"

"I'd amputate his funny bone," said the student with a turn for surgery and humor.

"Yes, indeed. He is already doing 'phat with the way his boss carries on the business."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

KILL FOR THE SPORT OF IT.

Few Animals Who Do Not Slaughter For Simple Pleasure.

There are some species of our carnivorous animals which often kill for sport and there are few kinds of which some individuals at some time or other do not kill for the simple pleasure of killing, writes a nature student in Forest and Stream.

When I was a boy and there were wolves in Maine I have known four or five wolves to kill over 60 sheep in a single night in a town near here.

My father once saw 13 fully grown sheep which two wildcats had killed in one night on Mount Desert Island. I know of several cases where wildcats have entered barns and outbuildings and killed numbers of hens or ducks. Raccoons often kill hens which they cannot carry off. I know of many cases of foxes killing many hens or turkeys which they could not eat. I once saw the skin of a mink which a loup-cervier had killed. The person who had it said that there was a fight once, so he could see every marken. The loup-cervier had apparently met the mink by accident on the ice. He had bitten it through the back, dropped it and walked on.

I once saw a loup-cervier dropped which had killed several lambs. Red squirrels will kill more young birds than they can eat. I have known an otter to pile up a large lot of suckers which he must have caught just for sport. House cats often kill birds which they do not eat; they also often bring in moles, frogs and snakes which they kill for the fun of killing. I have no doubt that sable and fisher would kill poultry fast as mink and raccoon do if they had the same opportunity.

Some birds also kill for sport. All ornithologists know of shrikes hanging up birds and mice which they do not need. I have several times seen sheldrakes kill scores of small fish just for fun. They bit them, dropped them and passed along. I have seen eight or ten sheldrakes doing this at a time. Goshawks kill for sport. I have known a goshawk in one morning to kill five ruffer grouse and leave them after tearing them in pieces.

It seems as if many animals and birds take as much pleasure in killing things for mere sport as many of our sportsmen and fishermen do.

A Helpful Allusion.

There were times when Rev. Mr. Pomfret felt that he failed to reach the hearts of his parishioners. Sometimes he even failed to reach their ears. Therefore he was much cheered by something he saw in the Elton pew one Sunday morning.

"I—I couldn't help wondering, Mrs Elton," he said diffidently when he met his parishioner the next afternoon, "what it was in my sermon that—er—particularly caught your attention yesterday morning. I happened to be looking your way, and I saw your face light up, and you slapped your hand against your knee as if something pleased you."

"It did," said Mr. Elton cordially. "I felt very grateful to you. When you spoke of Simeon it came over me in a flash that it was at Simeon Davis' I left my umbrella the last time I went to town. It's been lost for six weeks."

Dean Ramsay tells of an old lady of Edinburgh who ordered her maid to call upon the doctor every morning and report the latest particulars as to her mistress' health, always carefully adding her compliments. At last one day the girl arrived with "Miss S.'s compliments, and she died last night at eight o'clock."

Japan's Good Roads.

Japan is peculiarly well off in respect of good highways. The Tokaido, which runs from Kioto to Tokyo, is over 280 miles in length, and, as the writer can testify, is admirably constructed. There is also the Hokkaido, which is even longer and passes through some of the finest scenery in the world. The reason of Japan's excellence in the matter of roads is that in the old days—not so very long ago—the daimios, or territorial nobles, had to journey to Tokyo once a year in order to pay their respects to the sovereign. They travelled by road, with great retinues, and if the highways were not in perfect condition legal justice was meted out to the delinquents.—London Chronicle.

Quite In Character.

The late William Terriss, who for many years was invariably the hero in the dramas produced at the Adelphi theatre, London, seems to have been in nice accord with the characters he played. One day, writes Ellen Terry in her book, "The Story of My Life," he came into the theatre excited.

"Is it raining, Terriss?" asked some one, who noticed that he was wet.

"Looks like it, doesn't it?" said Terriss carelessly.

Later it came out that he had jumped off a penny steamboat into the Thames and saved a little girl's life.

And All From Tips.

The man who has the coat and hat stand in one of New York's big restaurants pays $3,000 a year for the privilege. In addition he pays $10 a week to his boys who take the overcoats and hats, hence there is millionaire, so many make a year, and makes a great deal of money for himself. How much the public pays in tips can be imagined when this system prevails not only in this restaurant, but in many of the big cafes and hotels of the city. The tip at these places is rarely less than a quarter and sometimes is as much as a dollar.

All Done by Lightning.

Lightning struck the steeple of the little village church of Gentilly, near Toulon, France, the other day. The electric fluid, it is stated, followed the iron cable which is used to ring the church bell and set the bell ringing. Then it tore the door off a cupboard containing a number of communion cups and all the candles on the high altar. It completed its mischief by ripping up the floor of the sacristy, but, as it is said, previously rolled up the carpet with perfect quiet and ease.

LANGUAGE OF MUSIC.

The Manner in Which It Appeals to the Human Heart.

To those musical agnostics who deny to music any beautiful save those of design and maintain that of itself it cannot express ideas and feelings Beethoven Mason makes appropriate reply.

But there is another side to the picture. What was it that made George II. rise in his place when they sang the "Hallelujah" chorus, thereby setting an example which is followed to this day? What was it in the finale of the fifth symphony that drew the Napoleonic veterans to his feet with the exclamation, "The emperor!" What sanctity in the Ambrosian hymns moved St. Augustine to tears?

During the wars of the French revolution it was forbidden, on pain of death, to play the "Ranz des Vaches" in the hearing of the Swiss soldiers, for so acute a longing for home did it bring upon them that they deserted in hundreds. Are we to think that there was no virtue in the music itself and that the effect produced was the outcome of purely accidental circumstances?

The Austrian government forbade Berlioz to play the "Rackoczy" march at Budapest, fearful of its effect on the inflammable Hungarians. Was the fire of patriotism kindled by the mere knowledge that the melody symbolized Hungary, or did the notes speak with tongues of flame?

A LION HUNT.

Usually a Case in Which Hunters Goad the Game Into Combat.

There is a distinction in Africa between ordinary lions and "man eaters," says T. R. MacMorlan in McClure's Magazine. The ordinary lion does not wilfully attack man. The presence of lions roaming at night on the veldt is not disturbing to any native nor to whites who have come to understand the beast. Persons returning to their camps after nightfall do not notice the roaring of lions or the cries of leopards or hyenas.

It is seldom that people host upon domestic errands carry weapons in the darkness, although at night the veldt of British East Africa is alive with roaming beasts, which may be heard from the verandas of the mission. Lions give the passing man a wide berth, day or night, when it is apparent that he means no mischief. An ordinary lion, even when wounded, will try flight before fight. When the escape is disputed it will, especially if wounded, try to maul its enemy with teeth and claws.

A lion hunt is usually a chase in which the hunters goad the game into combat. Once a lion has tasted human blood, however, it is no more afraid of man, but learns that he is the weakest of animals and the choicest of meat. Such a lion is known as a man eater because now he hunts man.

Ready Replies.

One of Lord Carmarthen's future constituents once asked the youthful candidate his opinion upon some abstruse question of which he knew nothing. "Let him alone!" cried another derisively. "Don't you see he's nothing but a baby?" "What do you think?" reiterated his inquirer, heedless of the interruption and determined to have an answer. "I think," said Lord Carmarthen, with ready wit, "that it is high time for all babies to be in bed," and so saying he gathered up his papers and disappeared from the platform.

Again—and this last anecdote is as well known as to have become well nigh historical—at a crowded meeting just before his election, he was interrupted by the question, "Does your mother know you're out?" "Yes, she does," was the instant retort, "and by Tuesday night she will know I'm in." His prophecy proved correct, and he headed the poll by a large majority.

A Batch of Guilt.

An Irishman excused himself from going to church by saying he had such an excellent telescope that with it he could bring the church so near he could hear the organ playing.

It was Pat who observed, after watching two men shoot at an eagle and kill it, that they might have saved the powder and shot, as the fall alone would have killed the bird.

And it was Pat again who, telling a story as original and being informed by one of his auditors that he had read it in the translation of a Latin work, cried out: "Confound those ancients! They are always stealing one's good thoughts."

The Real Scrap.

Two muscular individuals were hammering at each other in the ring.

"Horrible!" ejaculated a tender hearted spectator.

"Horrible nothing," said a regular patron. "If you want to see a real scrap get next to them when they divide the purse."

In a Safe Place.

"We have a man in this prison who never tried to escape," declared the head keeper.

"What's he in for?" inquired the visitor.

"Bigamy," replied the head keeper.—Bohemian.

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to look weary, weary, restless,—haste to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state read what J. W. Jarvell, well known in Sherrington, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, lame and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills—They possess mystic powers surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of valuable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize delicate glands, scorch out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today. 25c. at all dealers.

Big Snow Storm

There was quite a fall of snow yesterday, April 29. For the encouragement of the down-hearted, it might be said that last year on the 9th of May, six inches of snow fell. It is now in order for an old timer to tell his experiences of 30 or 40 or 50 years ago in a terrific blizzard in the month of June. All who feel the Annias spirit working within them please come forward and give your testimony so that the young may be encouraged.

Cadets Have No Uniforms

There was some talk of the Collegiate Institute Cadets turning out for the military parade on May 24th. It was learned yesterday that the cadets would not take part in the demonstration. They have no uniforms, and while well up in their drill, they would present a rather odd appearance marching in civilian attire. It is regrettable that the boys have to do without uniforms," said a citizen yesterday. "It is a matter which might well receive the attention of the minister of militia."

GOW GANDA

MAC GREGOR SYNDICATE

This district promises better than Cobalt did—Cobalt has been heralded as the world's Greatest Silver Camp. Although in its infancy Cobalt has paid $11,600,000 in dividends. : : : :

MAC GREGOR SYNDICATE

GOW GANDA WILL SURPASS IT

Millions are made in Cobalt by small syndicates who purchased properties and did initial development. Hundreds invested in this way made tens of thousands. Such a chance is now offered at Gow Ganda.

THE MACGREGOR SYNDICATE

Now in Process of Formation. Here Are particulars:

SHARES $100.00 EACH

THE INVESTOR'S GREAT CHANCE

The MACGREGOR Syndicate is being formed for $20,000 with shares at $100 each, and will own 120 ACRES (3 claims: M. R. 3507 M. R. 3523, M. R. 3524) at the south end of GOW GANDA Lake, right in the midst of valuable discoveries.

Also G. G. 341 at Elkhorn Lake. The vendor reports and guarantees a rich discovery of native silver averaging 500 ozs. to the ton for full length of vein. This means $350 per ton, and is high grade shipping ore.

We consider this claim by itself to be worth, on its guaranteed silver showing, four times the entire capitalization of the Syndicate.

The Syndicate with its large holdings of valuable property will undoubtedly yield large profits to its members. The Syndicate will close within a few days as there is a lively demand for its shares.

When the Syndicate is closed it is proposed to form a company to take over, purchase and operate the three properties. The proposed capitalization of the company will be $3,000,000—a fair capitalization, for 120 acres, located as these properties are—the Syndicate will turn over the properties of the Company for, say, 1,200,000 shares of stock at $1 per share, par value, leaving 800,000 shares in the Treasury of the Company to be sold at 50 cents a share for the installation of the machinery and thoroughly working the properties. This plan would give each holder of shares in the Syndicate 6,000 shares in the company for each share held. It is proposed to place the stock of the Company on the market at 50c a share, and on this basis members of the Syndicate will be entitled to have their stock sold share for share with treasury stock. This would give members of the syndicate $3,000 in cash for each share held in the syndicate, less a brokerage of, say 5 per cent. for selling.

SURFACE SILVER VEINS OF FABULOUS RICHNESS CHARACTERIZES GOW GANDA.

Forty-acre properties that six months ago could have been had for the staking have sold at prices ranging up to $350,000.

It is reasonable to expect that the MACGREGOR properties will be among the richest producers, and the chance of securing an interest should be taken advantage of.

SAFETY—Our confidence in the safety of the investment is expressed in the fact that we have taken shares in the Syndicate. We think it is a first-class investment, and we offer it to careful, conservative men as such, in our belief. We call it an unique opportunity for men of moderate means; that others appreciate it to be so is shown by the keen demand for shares. Send your remittance at once if you want to get in.

Taylor of Cook's church, Toronto, will occupy the pulpit and in the evening Rev. Principal Gandier of Knox College, Toronto. Less Than One Hundred Tags Issued

Up to last night less than 100 dog tags had been issued for the year and today is the first of May. Usually the city clerk issues in the neighborhood of 900 tags so that there will be a big rush today as after today Chief Rowel will start his men out looking for tagless dogs. They will have a big job too, but it will have to be done as the city needs the money. The dog population has however been decreased considerably during the past year or two.

A Fine Hotel at South Beach

Mr. W. E. Brooks, proprietor of the South Beach House, at Young's Point, was in the city yesterday, and paid a friendly visit to The Times. Mr. Brooks stated that the prospects this year were very bright for a big season, and he is making preparations accordingly. The new addition to the house will afford accommodation to a large number of extra guests. There will be 18 additional bedrooms, making a total of 40, and the new dining room, 30x60 feet, will seat 100 people. Mr. Brooks has also had a septic tank placed on his property to look after the sewage so that South Beach will be modern in every respect this year. This house has had a successful career under the present management and it will continue to prosper.

Four Children Burned to Death and Three Others badly Injured

Sydney, N.S., April 30.—A disastrous fire occurred this morning at Glace Bay, when four young children of Stephen McAskill were burned to death.

The alarm was given by the night watchman of Dominion No 8 Colliery, who noticed the flames issuing from the roof of the building. The family was in bed at the time.

The eldest boy, aged 13, who slept with his brothers and sisters on the second floor, while the father and mother slept downstairs, threw the youngest child out of the window, and became badly burned in his efforts to force his 15-year-old sister through the casement. Finding egress impossible the girl rushed downstairs, through the flames, and was burned to a crisp. Three other children were so badly burned that they died almost instantly.

The children ranged in age from 5 to 12 years.

The house was completely destroyed.

Three other children were badly burned. One is not expected to recover.

Fred Simpson Left for Toronto Yesterday

Fred Simpson, the Ojibway Thunderbolt, who is looked upon by many as the winner of this afternoon's race, left Peterborough yesterday afternoon for Toronto. Fred has been spending a few days at his home in Hiawatha, where he got a good rest. When seen yesterday he was looking fine and said that he never felt better nor more confident of winning. There are many Peterborough people who will back Simpson against the big field in the first Canadian Marathon Derby. The race will be started at three o'clock this afternoon at the Toronto Island. The results will be awaited there with great interest.

Band Concert This Afternoon

The band will be at the roller rink this afternoon. On Tuesday next there will be a grand carnival. Keep this date open as it will be the attraction of the season.

Y. W. C. A. Annual Meeting Showed Progress in All the Departments

The Finances of the Association in Splendid Condition—Mrs. W. J. Read was Appointed Superintendent—Reports of the Various Departments—Good Program

With the public annual meeting held last night the Y.W.C.A. of Peterborough closed one of the most successful years the association has had in Peterborough. The work has been enlarged by adding several new departments, the membership has increased and the finances are in splendid condition. To Miss McCalla, general secretary, and Miss Haycock, superintendent of the house department is due a great deal of the credit for the success. They have been untiring in their efforts and the results are indeed gratifying.

The board of directors have been very faithful during the year, and the ladies have looked after the work exceptionally well and they are to be congratulated.

There was a large attendance at the annual meeting and great interest was taken in the proceedings. The meeting was held in the gymnasium while refreshments were served in the green room.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT.

Before the general meeting the Board of Managers met and completed their report. One important matter was to choose a successor to Miss Haycock, superintendent of the House Department. Miss Haycock has accepted a position in Toronto, and leaves the Peterborough association on May 5th. She has been here for several years and has made a success of her department. General regret is expressed at her departure as she will be much missed. At the same time all wish her every success in her new position. Her successor will be Mrs. W. J. Read of Bobcaygeon.

PROGRAM.

A feature of last night's program was the address by Mrs. Robt. Kilgour of Toronto, the Dominion president. Other numbers on the program were;

Solo—Miss Pringle.
Prayer—Rev. J. R. Webb.
Piano solo—Mr. R. J. Dewey.
Piano solo—Miss Campbell.
Remarks—The President.
Vocal solo—Miss Pringle.
Piano solo—Miss Gladman.
Gospology.
Refreshments.

BOARD SECRETARY.

Mrs. G. M. Stevenson presented the 18th annual report of the Board of Management. During the year 12 meetings have been held, with an average attendance of 14, not as large as last year. Regret was expressed at resignations of Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Boushey and Mrs. Lees.

Domestic science being taught in the Peterborough schools has made it difficult to carry on successfully the domestic science classes here and this branch was closed in December last.

Mrs. Barnet donated $15 to the department.

Credit was given Miss Haycock, superintendent of the boarding house which is so successful in this institution.

Thanks were expressed to Dr. Greer, Mr. Mowat, Miss Nicholls, Mr. T. F. Matthews, Mr. Adams, Miss Ross, Mr. Cornish, Sheriff Hall and Prof. A. H. Young.

The closing exercise of the physical culture department were held in the Collegiate Institute hall a few weeks ago brought the classes to a successful finish, and we feel that the committee and Miss Coventry are to be congratulated. In spite of having a deficit in their finance the department has been a great help to the furtherance of our work in general and plans are already on foot to make this work one of our chief features for the coming year. We would like to draw the attention of the public to our Saturday Children's class. This has now attained a membership of 65 and its success is due to the efforts of Miss McCalla and Miss Coventry, whose work in this line we cannot acknowledge too gratefully.

The Financial Committee is congratulated upon its showing this year in connection with the public department which shows a balance on hand of $67.20.

The paid staff consists of Miss McCalla, general secretary, Miss Coventry, physical culture directress, Miss Rumley, musical director, Miss Elliott, domestic science teacher and Miss Haycock.

Expressions of appreciation was extended to the three local papers.

R. MORROW, Treasurer.

GENERAL SECRETARY.

Our work is fourfold;—The physical, intellectual, social and spiritual development. In touching the lives and hearts of young women and winning them for Christ, and for workers in His vineyard, lies our all important work, to which we would have all the other activities of the association but subordinate.

Rev. Elmore Harris, DD. gave a series of Biblical lectures from Ephesians, and Exodus, on the church, and were greatly enjoyed.

Miss Little, the Dominion secretary was here in October and gave an address.

We have enjoyed our monthly visit to the Protestant Home. These meetings are now held twice a month on Thursday afternoons.

MEMBERSHIP.

An increased interest has been taken and many new faces have been the encouraging outcome of our efforts and we trust for even a large membership. There are on the roll 180 active members and 40 junior. 75 new names were added during the year to the active membership.

SOCIAL DEPT.

The thanks of the association are expressed to all who assisted in this branch of the work. The season began on October 16th, with an electionally rally, when a jolly masquerade Hallowe'en party was held. The next was a welcome to the Normal students to meet Miss Anderson at an afternoon tea. The committee furnished the beautiful Christmas decorations. Miss Little visited the association again in February in the interests of the Dominion work. On March 18th, two of the educational classes held an enjoyable evening social in honor of the teachers, Dr. Greer and Mr. A. Mowatt.

READING ROOM AND LIBRARY.

We have a library of 200 books, but no new ones were added this year. We need new books and would gratefully acknowledge such gifts. Also a subscription for a magazine for our reading room table. The thanks of the association are extended to the local press for its hearty co-operation in our work.

JUNIOR DEPT.

At present there are 65 little girls on the roll of the Sunshine Club, with a growing average attendance. The children come soon after dinner and play in the gymnasium until 2.30, when they go to the class room. Devotional exercises are held and then the sewing box is opened for half an hour. Then a play is enjoyed in the gym.

Recently the Merry Makers Club has been organized for the children.

INFORMATION AND EMPLOYMENT

By means of the information and employment bureau a large number of lives are reached during the year. This work is undertaken wholly with a view of helping young women and no charge is made. It is impossible to give a report of the work done by the secretary. A secretary's life is no largely one of faith and love. Statistics of personal work can scarcely be given.

The days are occupied with office work, study, house and business calls, receiving callers, etc.

Appreciation is expressed to the Dominion Council for sending Miss Gilfillan for ten days to help here.

As a house family there has been no serious illness. Our motto is "By love serve one another." The attendance at prayers has been good. We express our appreciation of the service of Miss Haycock, the superintendent, who is soon to leave us, and also express our regret at her departure.

The earnest prayer and continued financial support of the christian men and women of Peterborough are requested.

Nearly Thirty Persons Killed in Tornadoes

Atlanta, Ga., April 30.—Between 25 and 30 persons dead in Tennessee, Mississippi, and Arkansas, and scores of injured, were the toll last night of a series of tornadoes in those states.

The storms, which wrought the havoc, appear to have been little outriders of the big disturbances, which simultaneously were sweeping through the north.

TOWN BLOWN AWAY.

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—Several persons are reported killed in last night's tornado, near Franklin, Tenn., and the town of Hillsboro, a few miles from there, is said to have been blown away. Much damage is reported at Centerville, Tenn., and other nearby towns. Much property damage was done in this city, and throughout the state.

Communication by both telegraph and telephone is all but suspended.

The latest in souvenir cards just in at Times Bookstore, be sure and see our new lines. Also comic and view cards at 10 cents per dozen.

The Kinrade Inquest

Hamilton, April 30.—A formal meeting of the jury which is investigating the death of Miss Ethel Kinrade took place last night, at which Crown Attorney Washington asked for an adjournment until Monday afternoon. This was granted.

After the formalities were done with Mr. Washington said that for reasons he need not state there the Crown asked for an adjournment. He desired, if it was agreeable to the jurors and would not inconvenience them or some them here, to have them meet at three o'clock on Monday afternoon. Coroner Anderson said he thought this would be agreeable to the jurors, and they assented.

In talking the matter over himself, the jurymen thought they should sit till 6 or 6.30 on Monday, and then adjourn and come back again at 8 o'clock if the Crown desired their further attendance.

Mr. Washington and Coroner Anderson were asked if the next session should be conducted in camera, and they replied that they could not say. Any order to this effect will have to come from the Attorney-General's Department. There has been considerable talk about this, and it would not surprise Coroner Anderson should such an order issue.

Troops Ready to Nip Revolution in France---Foreigners Clearing Out

Paris, April 30.—Tomorrow is May Day—the day on which the National Federation of Labor Unions has urged laborers throughout the country to join in a one-day's strike, in demonstration of the strength of of organized labor, and of its protest against present conditions.

The police have issued an order, prohibiting all parades in Paris tomorrow, and much uneasiness has manifested itself in the city regarding the possibilities of the day.

The government is known to have taken measures to concentrate many thousands of troops in the city, and has scattered ships with wireless apparatus to every important port in France, where they will maintain communication with the Eiffel Tower wireless operators belonging to the navy, who can be depended on.

Correspondents of all the Paris newspapers have arranged automobile service to Bologne and Havre, in case communication by ordinary methods is cut off.

Today a number of English and American residents left for the country. They disclaim fear, but I think the occasion a good one for a week-end elsewhere.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is always worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents. large size 50 cents.

Black Hand's Terrible Work in New York

New York, April 30.—Eight persons, five of them children, were burned to death, and fourteen others were injured, some of them fatally, in an incendiary fire in a five storey tenement house at 67 Spring street, occupied by twenty Italian families, early today.

The blaze followed a demand by members of a so-called Black Hand society for the payment of $1000 blackmail. It spread through the building with startling rapidity, as the hallways were soaked with kerosene oil by the blackmailers.

In a panic which followed the alarm the tenants fought their way down the fire escapes or jumped from the windows, while babies were thrown into the arms of policemen on the sidewalk.

Jacob Bruck, the proprietor of a grocery store on the main floor of the building, received on April 18 a letter reading;

"We demand $1,000 or death. Bring it in Mott street. Petrosino is dead, but the Black Hand lives. (Signed) Black Hand Society.

On Monday last Bruck received another letter written in a similar strain. He turned both letters over to the police.

The alarm was spread by the firing of a volley of revolver shots from the windows of the burning building. Policemen who, responding burst in the main door, found the hallway saturated with kerosene and blazing fiercely. Two half-emptied cans of kerosene were on the stairs. The frightened tenants fled to the roof or thronged the fire escapes in the rear, which were clogged with obstruction. Men and women were fighting for a way down the escapes when the police went up and aided them, and, entering the rooms, brought out several unconscious persons. In the scramble several tenants were injured by falling from the escapes, and the police had to club the men to save the women and children. The loss was about $10,000.

A New Fire Team was Purchased

A handsome new team of horses has been purchased for the fire department from Mr. Sanderson of Millbrook. The animals are large and strong and well adapted for fire hall purposes. They are of an iron grey color, are six and seven years old and weigh about 2000 pounds. The Fire, Water & Light Committee will likely meet this morning and finally decide upon the purchase. If they are taken they will be put into the stables at once, and broken in to their new duties. This will mean that the department will have a team for sale.

A Royal Baby at the Hague

The Hague, April 30.—Wilhelmina, Queen of the Netherlands, gave birth to a daughter this morning. The condition of her majesty is most satisfactory, the infant princess is doing well, and Holland is celebrating the happy event from one end of the country to the other with expressions of joy and gratification such as seldom before have been witnessed on the part of this placid people.

Anti-Cigarette League Heard Good Address

The Anti-Cigarette League held an interesting meeting in the Y.M.C.A. last evening at which a large number of boys was present. The chairman of the evening was Rev. H. J. Keith, pastor of Knox church, who after singing of a hymn and prayers by Rev. H. M. Manning, introduced the various speakers.

Those who addressed the assembly were; Magistrate Dumble, K.C., Dr. J. E. Middleton, and Messrs. J. A. McKone and Inspector Mowat. Each referred to the evil of cigarette smoking, proving that it was a detriment to the physical, mental and moral training of all young boys. Dr. Middleton went into the subject of how it affected the health of a young man. Others dealt with it in other lines, urging the boys not to become addicted to the habit.

During the evening the Charlotte street orchestra sang a selection, and music was rendered by an orchestra under the leadership of Mr. R. Common.

Norwood Merchant Leaves for Lindsay

Mr. A. S. Harrison, one of the most popular citizens, is moving to Lindsay, where he has purchased a grocery business. Mr. Harrison is an experienced and up-to-date groceryman and Lindsayites will find him an A1 citizen and a good business man. He was in business here for a number of years, but on account of some trouble with his eyes was compelled to dispose of his business about 18 months ago. The trouble having now disappeared he has decided to re-enter business life. We regret that he is leaving Norwood as he is an enterprising and useful citizen, serving for some years on the Board of Education and also as a member of the town council for a time. In church life his worth is also recognized, he having for considerable time, filled the office of treasurer of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Harrison is also greatly esteemed, having been a life-long resident of Norwood. They expect to leave the first of the week for Lindsay.—Norwood Register.

Lawn Bowlers Selected Skips

At a meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club held this week in the Dominion Bank chambers, the skips for the season were selected. There was a good attendance of members of the club and great enthusiasm was shown.

The following skips were chosen; Dr. Greer, D. Bellegbem, Dr. Marshall, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, R. Kerr, W. M. Lang, J. H. McIntyre, E. Runnells, R. M. Waddell, W. E. Talbot, T. E. Pratt, Dr. Holloway, W. J. Thomson, T. Brightman, Fred Dixon, J. Mayers, Dr. Caldwell, W. Mellroy, D. Kernaghan, L. M. Pearson, T. B. Yeates, R. Cottrell, S. Sharp and D. H. Moore.

These skips are requested to select their vice skips and report to the secretary at once.

It was decided to open the season with the president vs. vice-president match followed by a local tournament for which substantial prizes will be awarded.

The club decided to change its name to the Peterborough Lawn Bowling and Tennis Club.

Tennis has been adopted by the bowlers and the lot at the west of their green is being converted into courts. Work has already commenced and when the warm weather comes it will be ready for use.

Asthma Cured

Mrs. Farndel, of Clementsport, N.S., suffered all her life from asthma, but was permanently cured by Catarrhozone after all other means failed.

Mrs. Farndel's recovery affords overwhelming proof of what Catarrhozone will do. Nothing except Catarrhozone was of the slightest benefit, but when given a fair trial it cured.

Now perhaps you need something for your cold, or bronchitis or Asthma? Why not try Catarrhozone? Thousands have been cured by inhaling it a few minutes now and again, and certainly it wouldn't do you any harm to profit by their experience.

Mrs. Farndel gives the following statement of her case for the benefit of others who are suffering from asthma, and hopes that many will follow her example and use Catarrhozone.

"I am now in my eightieth year, and cannot recall the time when I was free from the Asthma. I had always a choking cough, feverishness, spasms, difficulty in breathing, head ache and nausea. My druggist advised Catarrhozone one day, and I bought a large outfit. It gave relief in five minutes and helped me very much in one day.

"I inhaled Catarrhozone ten minutes every hour, and by the time two bottles were used, I was completely cured. I am as free now from Asthma as if I never had it. My perfect recovery is due entirely to Catarrhozone. I prize my Catarrhozone inhaler next to life itself."

(Signed) MRS. T. FARNDEL."

This is a proof positive that Catarrhozone is a sure and speedy cure for the worst kind of Asthma. It is guaranteed to give satisfactory results, and your money will be refunded if it fails. All you need is a trial of this grand preparation to be quite satisfied and convinced that it is the best. Your druggist recommends and sells it. Price $1.00, small size 50 cents. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ontario.

MARS AND US

Prof. Pickering of Harvard, wants ten million dollars to buy a set of mirrors for the purpose of signalling to Mars. Bless another eminent astronomer, Camille Flammarion, and says it's too late. Mars was signalling to the earth for many centuries, but about a million years ago he became disgusted by our failure to respond, threw down his instruments in a pit and said that he would have no more to do with our unteachable planet. The Martians have now adopted a policy of self-assertion, the various Martian Provinces have been federated, the trans-Martian railway has been built, the natural resources of Mars developed, and Martian industry encouraged by a high protective tariff. Should we now invite Mars to a conference. Mars may decline, as Strathcona declined Detroit's invitation to talk on reciprocity.

It seems rather hard on us that we should be held responsible for the grouchy behavior of our ancestors a million years ago. We have only just got the various parts of our own planet in touch by means of railways, steamboats, telegraphs, missions and expansionist wars. Mars may have reached this stage a million years ago, while our forefathers were dwelling in caves or roosting in trees, and were probably scared to death by the friendly overture of our neighbor. Since that time, for all we know, Mars may have gone back while we went forward. To get into communication is a social problem as well as one taxing all the resources of physical science.

"Remember the Baker!"

In the courts of Venice when a prisoner is about to be condemned to death a tall and ghostly looking individual, dressed in a long black gown, walks majestically to the centre of the courtroom, bows solemnly to the judge and in a cavernous voice pronounces the words, "Remember the baker!" Then he bows again and walks away. Three hundred years ago a baker was executed in Venice for a crime of which he was not guilty. When his innocence was established the judges who condemned him gave a sum of money to the city the interest on which was to be devoted to the setting up and perpetual burning of a lamp, known as the "lamp of expiation," in the palace of the Doges.

Kitty Feels Guilty.

It was Kitty's first dinner party. As her dinner escort was presented to her she noticed that he was a relative of the new family who had recently moved across the street from her. During the meal Kitty changed to the subject of various kinds of matrimonial profiles. Wishing to say something complimentary to the shy debutante, Kitty's partner remarked: "If you will allow me to say so, your profile is very charming. I should think you would be tempted to spend a great deal of time standing before your mirror with a hand glass admiring the pretty curves."

To which Kitty, blushing scarlet, asked, "Are you joking, or have you really seen me do that?"

The Fishing Banks.

Newfoundland would be nothing without that great submarine plateau known as the banks," on which all the fishing is done. At a small station within the edges of the great bank that the cod loves so well the sea is quite smooth. It is usual for vessels fishing on the bank to inquire from those that have arrived from the open sea as to what sort of weather it is "abroad."

The Scot and His Game.

If the Scot who has stayed at home cannot play the game of curling as well as his sons who have settled in Canada, what he lacks in skill is made up by love of the sport. Curling is of the Scot. It is ingrained in his nature, deeper than his religion or his financial interests. It has been known to make a Scotsman break the Sabbath and a dollar bill

Evan Jones a Printer.

The Rev. Evan Jones, to give him his full title, although he prefers to be known as "Evan Jones," who has been elected president of the National Free Church Council, began life as a printer's apprentice. He worked at the "case" and machines for over six years.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will will cover the cost, and then is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never neglect your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and cure the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly empirem it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to use cough mixtures or preparations containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar [illegible]—a little is too much—Congress says "Put it on the label." It is poison say in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Remember this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough cure. Take no chances then, unfriendly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Belle, The Jessie, Yeager Canyon, Leonid, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Riebenbar, First Home, Hearietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Luna Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.82.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and is continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chiesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 65 feet deep, are from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense sheets already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the present of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously. It is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 25c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

WAHSATCH MINING COMPANY

Capital Stock 300,000 Shares ; Par $5 ; 20,000 10 per cent. Cumulative Preferred ; 280,000 Common Stock.

Property at Bingham City, Utah, on the main line of the Oregon Short Line Railroad.

This property is the result of twenty years of labor and the expenditure of $150,000 by its President, E. C. Baker, director of the Commercial National Bank of Ogden. It is opened in fourteen places; there is a complete equipment and full line of supplies on hand. The preferred stock, which has been up to this time in the treasury, is being sold to provide for the working capital which O. A. Palmer, Engineer of the Ontario Silver Company, with a record of $15,000,000 in dividends, says is necessary to make a dividend payer. Enough stock has been placed to assure the running of the property. President Baker reports that within three months from the date of starting the mill the mine can net $11,000 a month. This means 10 per cent. on the preferred and 7 per cent. on the common.

Wahsatch will be listed at once on the Boston Curb Market and later application will be made to the Boston Stock Exchange. After listing on the Boston Curb, all offers will be withdrawn. Not a share of the preferred will be sold for less than par and not a share of common for less than $1.00. Further, I stand ready to take any or all offers of stock at these prices.

Now you can buy this stock before listing and sell within two months at an advance. Your preferred stock will positively sell at $7.00 and the common at par within a short while. Furthermore, to each purchaser of a round lot I will agree to transport him or his representative to the mine. I have hold of a winner and shall use it as a clientele increaser.

O. A. Palmer, M.E., says, "To insure proper development and to get the best results in the shortest time, there should be a reserve fund created to draw on of at least $35,000 or $40,000 for the purpose, and from my examination of this particular section and long familiarity and experience with the mining districts and the largest producers of ore in the Wahsatch Range, there is no doubt that the Gold Hill Group of mines will, with this expenditure, be placed on a paying basis.

Summary of Natural Advantages.

Secures a Patent for Piano Attachment

Mr. R. C. Braund has recently taken out a patent for a piano attachment he has invented. While in its nature and idea it is very simple it nevertheless fills a long felt want, and will be of particular service to teachers. When young pupils are learning the pianoforte they cannot reach the pedals with their feet. The teacher has also, if she wishes to teach the pupils the use of the pedals to stretch her legs in an endeavor to reach them and thereby hampers the pupil. Even with older pupils it is not sufficient to allow the use of the pedals to their own judgment. When Mr. Braund's children were practising their mother would help them over difficult passages and he had noticed the trouble she had in using the pedals. It occurred to him that some simple contrivance could be worked out to avoid this and to arrange some device which would allow a second person to easily manipulate the pedals while some one was playing.

This is what Mr. Braund has invented. The teacher as a rule sits on the pupil's right hand side. Beneath the treble part of the key board is a little piece of mechanism which is worked by the hand in its general position it does not act but leaves the piano with the pedals up Moved to one side an inch or so and the result is the same as if the loud pedal were pushed down. Moved the same distance in the opposite direction and the soft pedal is used.

The invention has been placed in the New Scale Williams pianos, one of which arrived the other day at the J. M. Green Music Co.'s store, and may be seen there by any persons interested. The little key, it may be called, controls the action which is all inside the piano. The key is at the teacher's right hand and is easily moved when desired. At a casual glance it would never be noticed. Mr. Braund's idea has been worked out simply but most effectively and those who have seen it acknowledge its worth particularly to beginners and those who do not know when to use the pedals.

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize It at First Sight.

"Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when he was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Bittinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time.

"On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the sly some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out:

"'Who is it?'

"'Abe Lincoln,' was the reply. 'I've been looking for my house. Can you tell me where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two.'

"It was explained to him that during his absence Mrs. Lincoln had added another story. He laughed and went back to the strange house."

He used to tell the joke on himself many times, according to the major.—National Magazine.

CONTINUOUS SHOWS.

They Were Started by B. F. Keith in a Boston Store.

It was in the month of January, 1888, that Mr. B. F. Keith, who had been studying the show business with far-seeing eyes for many years, presented, in a store that he had leased in Boston, the first continuous show ever seen on any stage. He paid his performers $20 a week for a single turn and $40 for double and required them to give eight or nine turns a day. His "top liner" or chief attraction was a pound and a half baby. The doors of his playhouse were thrown open at noon, and from that time until half past 10 at night the performance went on without interruption.

Patrons were allowed to spend the entire day in the theater, and at first so many availed themselves of this opportunity to get a substantial filling of amusement at a small cost that Mr. Keith realized that he must either abandon the idea of a continuous entertainment or else invent some method by which the audience could be driven out of the building and place made for those outside who were waiting for admittance. Necessity is the mother of invention, especially when it is mated with sharp Yankee wit, and it was thus that what is known as "the chaser" came into the world.—James L. Ford in McClure's Magazine.

A Ghost in a Clock.

Basingstoke provides a remarkable story of a ghost in the form of a clock. At the approach of midnight each night the otherwise peaceful "grandfather" becomes inhabited by a spook. The ticking changes into a deep and peculiar thumping, the clock increases in stature, while a pair of gray feet protrude from beneath its base. Passing through transitional stages the thumping is replaced by a spasmodic breathing, and upon the stroke of 12 the pendulum door opens, revealing an enormous ashy gray hand with nail-shaped fingers. The clock face disappears, displaying a frightful gray head, large and round, with abnormally long, pale blue eyes. Beyond a quiet stroll, which causes weird tappings along the landings during the night, the apparition is inoffensive and is said to prove of great service in sending every one early to bed.—London Tit-Bits.

One View of Saving.

R. Marvel, author of the "Reveries of a Bachelor," was all his life opposed to the modern commercial spirit. A young disciple from the west once visited the aged writer in his New England home. The youth, a poet, said he thought he would put away his verses and write magazine love stories, so as to able to save money.

But Mr. Mitchell frowned and shook his head.

"Saving," he said, "is the manie for depriving yourself of things which you want now for fear you may not have things which you won't possibly want forty years hence."

Francs and Dollars.

We like to read French stories, but every time francs are mentioned we stop to turn them into dollars. "She had 17,000 francs per year in the funds," the story will say, whereupon we stop to divide seventeen by five—to turn the francs into dollars—and find out how much money the heroine had.

The Occasional Hero.

"He woke up one morning to find himself famous."

"Well?"

"But people had forgotten all about him by the time the 4 o'clock extras were out."

Worse Off.

"The bachelor is worse off than the married man? How do you make that out?"

"The married man is afraid of only one woman; the bachelor is afraid of all of them."

Didn't Get a Chance.

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

Get Saturated with Caffeine

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not that has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years was troubled with stomach trouble.

"I have been treated by many physicians, but all in vain. Everything failed to perfect a cure. I was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured on stomach.

"I finally concluded coffee was the cause of my troubles and stopped using it. I tried tea and then milk in its place, but neither agreed with me, then I commenced using Postum. I had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste.

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia.

"I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it I appreciate Postum."

HAPPY WOMEN PRAISE PE-RU-NA.

It Is Works, Not Words, That Has Made Pe-ru-na Famous Throughout The Land.

The miss and the matron alike praise Peruna. Girls and women have all discovered the value of Peruna. The Miss and the Mrs. have been ill, each in her own peculiar way, and have found relief by taking Peruna.

Fair girls and beautiful women, frail daughters and ailing mothers everywhere have taken Peruna and know its value in the relief of ailments peculiar to their sex. From the grandmother to the girl babe the gentler sex are under numerous obligations to Peruna.

All this being true when the woman does not hesitate to tell it, her words win the confidence of other women, and thus the fame of Peruna spreads from household to household until millions of homes acknowledge Peruna as their favorite and reliable family medicine.

Peruna is good for many minor ills. It can be relied upon to mitigate the many disagreeable effects of colds and irregularities so common among women. All the ailments of a catarrhal nature belong within the scope of Peruna's remedial action.

Internal Catarrh.

Mrs. Fred Webber, 19 Wellington St., Brantford, Ont., Second Vice President Woman's Industrial League, writes:

"Last fall I caught a severe cold, which caused inflammation of the internal organs. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse and worse until I gave up all hope.

"My attention was called to the wonderful cures produced by Peruna, and I made up my mind to try it for two months and see what it would do for me.

"Within one month I felt much better and at the close of the second I was like a new woman. I kept improving and finally was fully restored. I have advised many of my friends to try it, and all are pleased with the results."

Head, Stomach, Lungs.

Miss Olivine Perrault, 335 Davidson street, Boulevard St. Paul, Montreal, Can., writes:

"I write you a word to congratulate you on your famous remedy, Peruna. I tried other remedies, but my cold did not get any better, and I feared I was becoming consumptive.

"The condition of my head and stomach was very annoying. I had coughed day and night for three months, as the result of a cold which I had contracted from sudden change of temperature.

"My brother advised me to try Peruna, and I did so, for he was cured by Peruna. I took it regularly and improved steadily. I have now taken three bottles of it and am completely cured."

To Suffering Women.

"I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the good Peruna has done me.

"I was subject to internal weakness. For six years I suffered more or less.

"We consulted various doctors, who gave me relief, but no cure. I have suffered a great deal, and my husband had very large bills to pay.

"In my despair I decided to try Peruna, and the first bottle taken according to your directions gave me relief. I have had no backset since then.

"Since we have used Peruna, a doctor has seldom been in our house. It would take a book if I were to tell all the good Peruna has done in our family.

"Please accept my most sincere thanks.

"I have often recommended your medicine with good results, and if any suffering woman wishes to write to me or to call on me, I will give her my information in regard to Peruna at any time."—Mrs. Martha Fredrich, Central Park, L. I., N. Y.

One Woman's Experience.

"I was troubled with very serious internal weakness, which exhausted me so that I feared I would lose my mind.

"I suffered agony with my back, the pain extending down my left leg. The pain was so severe that I would have welcomed death as a relief.

"Peruna cured me of this trouble—no wonder I recommend it so highly. It will soon be two years since I found relief from the pain, and not a sign of it has returned.

"I am glad that there is a way in which I can speak of this, as many a sufferer may read my testimonial, and not only read, but believe."—Mrs. William Henderson, Craik, N. W. T., Canada.

Marsh Won Canadian Marathon Derby in Record Breaking Time

Bad Weather for the Runners—Small Crowd Witnessed the Race—Simpson was Fourth—Winners Time was 2.39-47—Sixteen Runners Faced the Starter but Many Fell by the Wayside Unable to Stand the Killing Pace

Toronto, May 1.—The big Canadian Marathon Derby was run off at the Island Saturday under conditions entirely unfavorable both to fast time and a large attendance, the day being a dismal one, rain threatening all afternoon, while at times a few showers sprinkled. Out of the original twenty starters, four scratches were announced they being Fabore of Montreal, Peter John, the Six Nation Indian; A. Windmill and Chas. Green. Of those going to the post the chances of Marsh, Wood and Coley looked the brightest.

Before the race started the 48th Highlanders Band discoursed music, which was enjoyed by the somewhat small crowd. The bleachers or baseball reserve seats were well filled up, but the reserved seat section was a little more than quarter filled at post time. There being about 2000 present.

STARTER'S PISTOL FIRED.

Controller Geary fired the startling pistol at 3.05 p.m., and for the first lap Booth set the pace, with the others in Indian file. Percy Sellen set the pace the second lap, with Marsh right at his heels, followed by Coley, Wood, Cumming and Simpson, and so they ran on the third lap, but on the fourth Marsh took the lead, with the others trailing. Marsh lapped Windmill shortly after passing the mile post. Time 5.21 2-5. Marsh and Sellen kept drawing away from the others, and at three laps on the second mile had gained 60 yards on Coley and company. Windmill was the first to quit, dropping out on the fourth lap of the first mile. Sellen took the lead on the fourth lap, and the second mile time was 10.58.

WEARING THEMSELVES OUT.

Both Sellen and Marsh were indulging in sprints and at the gait they were maintaining it was feared would never finish for a slice of the bacon. Marsh cut out a sprint on the last lap of the third mile, finishing in 16.32, with Sellen 20 yards behind, and Coley, Wood, Cummings and Simpson three-quarters of a lap behind. McNeill dropped by the wayside in the second mile. Marsh was setting a fierce pace and at the fourth mile had gained a lap on everyone but Sellen, while on some of the smaller fry he had gained two. Time four miles, Marsh, 22.09.

Marsh was not able to gain any more advantage on the fifth mile, finishing ahead in 27.56. Sellen, who had gradually crept up the last mile, passed Marsh just after the five mile post had been passed much to the joy of the crowd.

Marsh and Sellen stuck together the sixth mile, the time being 33.28, with Marsh in the lead. Both runners were running strong and were evidently out to kill off the others, who were flagging. Bennett being the furthest behind. A hail storm came up after this and it looked like an all afternoon storm. The positions were unchanged in the seventh mile. Time, Marsh 39.39.

The time for the eighth mile was 45.06, with Marsh still in the lead, and Sellen right behind. Simpson and Wood were a lap and a half behind. Red Hawk and Coley a lap and three-quarters. Dave Bennett, the old fellow in the race, cut a sprint in the ninth mile, much to the amusement of the crowd.

Sellen was in the lead when the tenth mile was passed and in the next lap cut a sprint, but was only able to gain 20 yards. Time, 9 miles, Sellen, 52.53.

These two by their sprints every now and then were making a race out of it. They both gained two laps on Coley. The time is breaking all records outside of the Longboat-Dorando runs at Buffalo.

Sellen made the ten mile post in 58.24, with Marsh a half lap behind. Sellen passed Red Hawk and Simpson on the next lap and had gained two laps on everyone but Wood.

The positions remained unchanged at the eleventh mile with Sellen leading in the fast time of 1.02.18, which beats all records. The running of Wood the Montreal man, was very encouraging to his supporters, while some bets were being made on Simpson to win, who was two laps behind Sellen.

At the finish of the 12th mile Sellen was still leading. Time 1.08.11

Cummings stopped to change his shoes in this mile, while the standing showed Marsh one lap behind Sellen and Woods two laps behind the leader. The others were strung out to Bennett and Barton, who were a mile behind.

The time for the 13th mile was; Sellen 1.14.11, with the positions unchanged, although Gaula and Redding were almost walking. Sellen made it three laps on Wood and Jackson or Red Hawk, after passing the 13th mile post.

SELLEN DROPS OUT.

Sellen gained four laps on Coley and Cummings in the 14th mile. Time, Sellen 1.20.18, and the 15th mile the time was, Sellen 1.26.26.

Sellen showed signs of weakness at this stage; Marsh and Wood began to draw away from him and gain some of their lost ground. Cummings quit in this mile, being a mile and half behind, while Sellen, after passing the 16th mile post, quit for good, the race now being reduced to 12 competitors, with Marsh and Woods looking the dangerous ones.

Time, 16 miles, Sellen 1.33.59.
Time, 17th mile, Marsh, 1.39.03.
18th mile, time 1.45.24.
19th mile, 1.52.25.

Meadows caught Simpson and was on even terms with him 20 mile Marsh 1.56.29.

Tom Eck, trainer for Simpson, tried the Flanagan-Longboat stunt by bringing out Simpson's wife into the track to encourage the Ojibway Indian Time for 21 miles, was Marsh 2.04.47 and for 22 miles was 2.11.14.

23 miles, Marsh 2.17.53.
24 miles, Marsh 2.24.40.

THE THINNING OUT.

Those still in the race are; Marsh, Wood, Meadows, Simpson, Coley, Red Hawk, Gaula, Bennett, Petch and Booth.

Marsh finished the last lap with a great sprint, the time for the full distance being 2.39.47, which beats all records so badly that one is lead to believe that the track must have been short. Wood finished second and Meadows third.

1. J. D. Marsh, Winnipeg.
Time 2.39.47. New record.
2. Alfie Wood, Montreal.
3. Fred Meadows, Toronto.

Marsh finished his 25th mile in 2.31.29, with Wood still one and three-quarter laps behind. The former looks an easy winner, although he is limping badly. Time, 26 miles, 2.38.24.

SELLEN'S TIME WAS GOOD.

Although Sellen dropped out after the 16th mile, his time was 1.26.26 at 15 miles, or only 14 seconds slower for the distance than Shrubb's time in the New York race last Saturday with St. Yves.

Peterborough's Experience with the Dual Telephone

After Three Years' Trial—A Good Lesson for the City of Brantford

Brantford is being boomed for a dual telephone service to be supplied by the Canadian Machine Telephone Co., according to recent articles in our esteemed contemporary the Brantford Expositor. To consider the experience of Peterborough's people in this identical connection it appears that Brantford might learn a useful lesson and if they heed it can save themselves a heavy annual expenditure and no end of trouble and inconvenience, which, once assumed, would be difficult to get rid of.

It was some 18 years ago that a large number of the most enterprising of the local business men organized a local telephone system to compete against the old and reliable Bell Telephone Co. In due time a plant was installed which, for those days, was recognized as first-class, but the enterprise was a failure for no other reason than the unmitigated nuisance of the double service, without a single compensating advantage. It was the business men of Peterborough, who organized the competing company and supplied the money. It was the same men who one year later admitted that they had made a mistake, and in their own interests, gladly abandoned the white elephant.

About three years ago the Canadian Machine Telephone Co. came along with a proposition and secured a franchise in Peterborough. At that time extravagant promises were made for an improved service, a large list of subscribers and universal connection with the surrounding districts. These same promises are now being held out before the people of Brantford. In Peterborough all these promises have failed to materialize.

The Machine Company's rates were fixed considerably lower than the Bell Co's, and in addition the new company agreed not to charge for the service until they had 300 subscribers' connected. Although the system has been installed for three years the 300 subscribers have not yet been secured and the machine phones are still given free. It is also safe to say that if the Machine Company did attempt to collect a rental the number of subscribers they have would soon be greatly decreased, if not wiped out altogether.

The chief reason for the failure of the Machine Company here is that the boasted advantages of the automatic service are not justified by experience. The machine is an attractive novelty, but after a three-year trial it is unanimously conceded that the automatic phone is not equal in speed, efficiency or reliability to the service of the Bell Company.

The Machine Company has no rural or long distant lines. The farmers and villagers around here all have the Bell connection and are well satisfied with it and the treatment they receive and therefore remain with the company which gives them a service over the whole country.

Since the Machine Company was established in Peterborough the Bell Company has doubled the number of its subscribers, and practically the whole of the local telephone business of this city is done by the Bell system.

Herein lies the lesson for Brantford people. Do not saddle yourselves with a nuisance and expense which you will regret as long as it continues, as will be the case with a dual telephone service. Peterborough's experience should stand Brantford in good stead.

Will An Independent Engineer be Engaged To Report on Bridge?

The New Smith Street Bridge By-law Will be Discussed by the Council at Tonight's Meeting.

The new concrete bridge for Smith street to replace the old wooden structure over the river will again be put before the people. The council have decided that a new structure at this point is very necessary. If it is not built great danger of serious damage attended by loss of life is taken. Either that or the bridge must be closed and an important part of the city isolated from the main section, either of which would be a serious matter to the city.

The aldermen have gone thoroughly into the question since the by-law was defeated last January. A lot of valuable information has been secured and the new proposition should meet with the approval of the public. The new bridge will be of concrete. The plans have been prepared by the city engineer and he has spent a great deal of time and energy upon them. He has secured the best of information from leading engineers and contractors, and has compiled these ideas into a bridge which will last forever and which will cost the minimum.

The aldermen are satisfied with the new plans and believe that they could not be improved upon. Still, it is understood, Ald. Turner will, at tonight's meeting of the council, ask that an independent engineer be employed to make a report on the city engineer's plans and upon the bridge question. This is for the sole purpose of more thoroughly convincing the ratepayers of the economy of the new bridge and the lasting qualities and superiority of a cement bridge over a bridge of any other material.

74th Anniversary of St. Paul's and St. Andrew's was Celebrated Yesterday

Services at St. Paul's Church Yesterday

In spite of the unfavorable conditions of the weather there were large congregations at St. Paul's church yesterday to celebrate the seventy-fourth anniversary of the congregation. In the morning the church was filled and those in attendance were given a beautiful message by Rev. Dr. Andrew T. Taylor, DD of Cook's church, Toronto. Dr. Taylor is a young man, but he is a very impressive speaker. His sermons are simple, but they are convincing.

The choir under the very able leadership of Mr. John Crane, rendered some excellent music. Their special program included a solo by Miss Helen Davies, "Jerusalem, those that killest the Prophets." Miss Davies was in splendid voice and sang with great feeling. A solo by Mr. Harold Lee "If with all your hearts," and the anthem "I Heard the voice of Jesus say." Mr. W. McElroy taking the solo part. In the evening Miss Davies sang as a solo, "Sun of my Soul." Miss Davies and Mr. Lee gave as a duet "Love Divine all Love Excelling," and the anthem was "Praise the Lord," the solos being taken by Miss McCaw and Mr. McElroy.

The subject of Rev. Dr. Taylor's sermon was Christ and His Church. He took his text from Matthew 16.18. "I say also unto thee Peter, I will build my church." This text was part of that famous dialogue between Peter and Christ upon the church's foundation. I will build my church. That little sentence contains a wonderful sermon. Emphasize each word separately and a new view is placed upon it, and it will help greatly in this particular line of thought.

The presence of "I" means that Christ Himself will be there; that he will be the power behind.

"Will Build." This is entirely different from will create. To create needs no material. To build mean that material must be used and Christ said he would use that material, and in the building of that church only two materials were used, the human element and the divine element.

"My church." This does not mean a church in the common use of the word. It was not a church for any one sect, country or people. It was a church to include the whole world and to represent Him.

By looking into these great truths more closely you will find first, Christ's purpose and His plans and the sublimity of them. One of these purposes was that his followers should be brought into a common fellowship and when they had gotten together in one fellowship they were to go abroad and propogate the Gospel in every country and to every person.

Then there was the performance of the purpose and plans. It was just as necessary to do Christ's work today as it ever was. His work is a sacrificial work. Christ was persecuted. It is no child's work. Still those who do not do it are missing a great blessing.

Historical Statement of St. Paul's Church

In connection with the anniversary services held in St. Paul's church yesterday the following interesting historical statement of the church has been issued;

In the summer of 1830 the Rev. John Morrice Roger, a minister of the Church of Scotland, from Aberdeen, came out to Peterborough to take the oversight of the Presbyterians living here. A small wooden building still standing on Aylmer street, was erected during that year, and on the 12th October, 1834, the congregation under the Presbytery of Kingston, proceeded to elect the first elders who were duly ordained on the 2nd November, 1835. This proceeding was sanctioned by the Presbytery in January, 1835. In 1837 the property now occupied by St. Andrew's church, was gifted to the trustees for the use of the Church of Scotland, and in the following year a substantial stone church was erected by the congregation.

In 1843 the disruption took place in Scotland and in 1844 the Presbyterian Church in Canada was formed. On the 6th of August of that year the minister, session and congregation unanimously agreed to form part of that body, the elders at the time being David Hamilton, James Hamilton, John Stothart, James Hall, Alexander Robertson and Robert Thompson.

The congregation continued to worship in the stone church until 1858, when the minister was served with a demand to deliver possession of the property to the representatives of the Church of Scotland. For about two years the congregation worshipped in the town hall and in a building belonging to the Methodist Church until their new church was completed on the site of the present building. In 1884 the building was enlarged and improved with the addition of the Sunday school, and was again opened for service on the first Sabbath of May, 1885.

In September 1875 the Rev. Mr. Roger tendered his resignation of his pastorate to the Presbytery after a continuous ministry of 42 years, and on the 2nd July, 1876, the Rev. E. F. Torrance was ordained and installed. The present pastorate dates from December 6th, 1907.

Services at St. Andrew's Church Yesterday

St. Andrew's church celebrated its anniversary with large congregations at both services. Rev. Principal Gandier, principal of Knox college, Toronto, was the speaker at the morning service, and Rev. Dr. Taylor of Cooke's Presbyterian church, Toronto, preached in the evening. St. Andrew's church is going ahead steadily under the pastorate of Rev. J. G. Potter and each anniversary marks the completion of a year that was more successful than the one that preceded it.

At the morning service, Principal Gandier preached an able sermon, setting forth the claims of Knox College as an institution worthy of the support of the Presbyterians of the province. The christian church, Principal Gandier, was the most complete embodiment of and gave the truest expression to the spirit of God. All through the ages since it had been founded the church had held this position, even in the darkest days.

The church wielded a tremendous influence upon society. It might be said that the church moulded society. Take the church out of the world and mankind would suffer the severest blow that it could be given.

Principal Gandier spoke of the great need that existed today in the church for leaders. Now, with the most perfect training it was possible to obtain were wanted for the ministry in these days of doubt and inquiry on the part of so many.

The Presbyterian Church of Canada wanted men, strong men, trained men for its ministry. The supply of men for the ministry was totally inadequate for the demand. The field was widening rapidly, especially in the west and north. In addition to the work at home the Presbyterians of Canada had been allotted the great work of evangelizing fourteen million people in the Orient. To do God's work men were wanted for the ministry who had the best education possible to obtain, the highest training, and with a strong grasp of the things unseen and eternal. Money was needed, but men were wanted more than money.

Principal Gandier told of the good work Knox College had done and was doing in the training of men for the Presbyterian ministry. The time had come when it was imperative that a new building must be had and arrangements had been made to dispose of the present building and site and to build a new on a site that had been secured in the confines of Toronto University. Three hundred thousand dollars would be required to erect the new college and of this amount the city of Toronto was going to contribute a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The Presbyterians of the province were expected to contribute the remainder of the amount required, and Principal Gandier trusted that Peterborough would do its share. It was a great work and it was worthy of the support and prayers of the people.

Rev. Dr. Taylor preached an eloquent sermon at the evening service.

PRESENTED WITH PIPE.

The ladies of the sewing circle of St. Peter's Cathedral, who have been meeting weekly in one of the rooms of the T.A.S., concluded the season's work Thursday. One of the surprises of the afternoon was the presentation of a handsome pipe with case to Mr. P. Kane, caretaker, for his many little kindnesses during the winter.

The Presbyterian Church of Canada wanted men, strong men, trained men for its ministry. The supply of men for the ministry was totally inadequate for the demand. The field was widening rapidly, especially in the west and north. In addition to the work at home the Presbyterians of Canada had been allotted the great work of evangelizing fourteen million people in the Orient. To do God's work men were wanted for the ministry who had the best education possible to obtain, the highest training, and with a strong grasp of the things unseen and eternal. Money was needed, but men were wanted more than money.

Principal Gandier told of the good work Knox College had done and was doing in the training of men for the Presbyterian ministry. The time had come when it was imperative that a new building must be had and arrangements had been made to dispose of the present building and site and to build a new on a site that had been secured in the confines of Toronto University. Three hundred thousand dollars would be required to erect the new college and of this amount the city of Toronto was going to contribute a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The Presbyterians of the province were expected to contribute the remainder of the amount required, and Principal Gandier trusted that Peterborough would do its share. It was a great work and it was worthy of the support and prayers of the people.

Rev. Dr. Taylor preached an eloquent sermon at the evening service.

PRESENTED WITH PIPE.

The ladies of the sewing circle of St. Peter's Cathedral, who have been meeting weekly in one of the rooms of the T.A.S., concluded the season's work Thursday. One of the surprises of the afternoon was the presentation of a handsome pipe with case to Mr. P. Kane, caretaker, for his many little kindnesses during the winter.

Aunties

They Belong to the Whole Neighborhood

That dear old neighbor we knew as "Aunty" and who lived down the street was no relation, of course, except that her tenderold heart made her "Aunty" to all the young people. And how she did love the young mothers!

One who remembers her says; "We could always depend on "Aunty" for good sound advice. She was particularly well informed on food and what to use for certain troubles.

"After having taught in the public schools for years my health became bad and I suffered frequently from indigestion. After my marriage I had indigestion so badly it became chronic.

"Owing to my condition my little baby did not get proper nourishment and was a very delicate child. I had about decided to put her on artificial food altogether when the advice of dear old 'Aunty' put baby and I on the right road.

"She insisted upon my trying Grape-Nuts food, declaring that it would help me and give baby more nourishment, so to please her I did, trying it for breakfast. The result was so marked and so quick that I ate it for luncheon too and I must say the change has been wonderful. I have good health now and baby is a strong active child.

"My mother says that Grape-Nuts helps her more and keeps her more cheerful and happy than anything else she has ever done. Truly pure, scientific food has great power."

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

Several Big Steamers Sink in Storm Which Swept the Great Lakes

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 1.—That the steamer reported sunk in Whitefish Bay is the Aurania, belonging to John Corrigan, Cleveland, is established this morning upon arrival of Capt. Robert S. Pringle and the crew of that vessel on the steamer J. H. Barlow, to which they had walked 31-2 miles across broken ice fields. The Barlow arrived in the Canadian canal at five o'clock this morning with the shipwrecked crew.

IGNORED DISTRESS SIGNAL.

That Capt. Pringle is incensed at the masters of a Canadian and two American steamers, in passing it mildly. He says that they ignored his distress signals, although he claims they must have seen them, and also that his boat was listed.

"Had the Barlow acted the way that these three steamers did, we would be eating pigeons on Parisian Island just now," is the way Capt. Pringle expressed himself this morning at the hotel.

In his story of the disaster, Capt. Pringle speaks in unstinted terms of the conduct of his crew. He says they behaved well to a man, and at no moment of great danger did one of them flinch. Engineer Cleveland, he said, was loth to leave his post at the ballast pumps, and the mate had to be sent below after him.

Many other vessels it is feared have been wrecked and great anxiety is felt for the crews.

Simpson to be His Own Boss

It is reported that Fred Simpson is going to pull away from the management of Tom Eck. It is time the Ojibway Thunderbolt was pulling away from some one. Fred had many warm supporters here but he has disappointed them so many times that he has lost a lot of prestige. If he goes out and wins a few races, however, he can regain his old position.

The Sister in the Home

Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, delivered the fourth and final sermon of his special series last night. This talk was particularly to young women, the subject being "The Sister in the Home." The text was taken from Exodus 2.4. "And His Sister stood afar off and wondered wit they would do unto him." During the course of his sermon he quoted several selections from noted poets. The reverend gentleman said that we should expect greater things things from the sisters. Their love and affection and admiration was something to be desired and esteemed. It was something that should inspire every man with the loftiest thoughts of life. The sister in the home was a priceless treasure.

Rev. Mr. Webb's sermon was very able and eloquent and was greatly enjoyed by the large congregation that was present.

ARE YOU DEAF?

Hundred of perfect recoveries are reported as a result of the use of Catarrhozone.

The result of actual experience proves that ninety cases in every hundred can be cured, and stay cured, of impaired hearing by the regular use of Catarrhozone.

Among the many prominent Canadians whose hearing has been restored by Catarrhozone, might be mentioned Mr. Geo. W. Warner of 328 Wellesley street, Toronto, and Mr. William Jones, contractor, of Halifax, N.S. Both these gentlemen have testified to the merits of Catarrhozone as a valuable cure for deafness, and their statements prove beyond all question that Catarrhozone cures impaired hearing and even total deafness.

The efficiency of Catarrhozone is placed beyond dispute by its long list of successful cures, and on the highest authority we can recommend it to our readers. It is a very simple remedy to use, and never causes confusion or gets out of order.

Catarrhozone Inhaler is beautifully polished and made of hard rubber. It is suitable to carry in the vest pocket, and can be used in the church, theatre, street car, at any time, in any place. The complete outfit costs but $1.00 and last two months. Tried size 25c. Sold by druggists or sent to any address if price is forwarded to F. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

WESTERN CROP OUTLOOK

The Winnipeg Commercial rejoices at the genial storm which visited Manitoba last Wednesday night. It says that a snowfall at seeding time is usually considered one of the best things that could happen, as it furnishes "much suitable moisture for the soil."

Her in the Commercial uneasy, because seeding is a little later than last year. Former seasons are recalled in which good crops were obtained from long-delayed planting. Last years' seeding was general by April 22, which was unusually early. In 1907 it was not until May 15 that all the farmers became busy. In 1906 seeding became general about April 25, and the country had one of its best crops.

The Commercial thinks that seeding operations this year will not be more than one week later than in 1906. Quite frequently in the past several days of May had gone by before all the farmers were sowing and good results were obtained under such conditions. The advent of warm weather this week in the West considerably improves the outlook.

The Fat For the Fire.

When Lord Charles Beresford was in China one of the best servants it was his lot to have was a certain Chinaman named Tom Fat. Unfortunately Tom Fat did not always devote his undoubted talents to worthy objects. He learned to imitate his master's handwriting so cleverly that he forged checks amounting to over $2,000 in two years. And on one occasion, when Lord Charles was practising a stroke of very broad letters across the backbone of all decent authors, one of his friends remarked to Beresford what he thought would be the ultimate fate of his Chinese servant. "Shanghai, Lord Charles," promptly replied, "that fat will certainly be in the fire!"

Severed Bread.

Many lovers of severed bows will fall with the conclusion that we need never worry about the wheat supply so long as there is the tie, says the London Chronicle. A correspondent tells us that South Wales finds a profitable sort of grass reserved on its coast. After being crushed it is boiled down and made up—generally with colonial fruits added and eaten with cream. It is called laver bread and is considered a great delicacy. So let us rejoice with our children on our summer holiday and gather the year's increase.

Hooked Lots of Shirts.

"Tramp" is the nickname which has been bestowed upon Admiral Sir Algernon Heneage, who recently celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday. The veteran admiral has always been noted for his immaculate attire, and the story goes that he used to send his handkerchief and shirts to a London laundress, no matter in what part of the globe his ship might be stationed.

Three Reigns a Lord.

Earl Beauchamp, the present "Father of the House of Lords," enjoys the distinction of being the only peer who has held his title in three reigns. He succeeded his father in 1863, when William IV. was King.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Time to Shave.

"Country Life" mentions an interesting example of one of those men who have become famous and gained it in the hobby and mode of life of almost primitive man. The subject is a gamekeeper in an outlying district, and has lived in the Berkshire woods for over twenty years; he is well known in the villages round about, and can very often be seen doing odd jobs in the gardens, for which he gets some food and a little money. He always takes his pocket-knife, which he calls his money, with him, full of clothing, tomatoes, etc. His mother, his children in the woods, also use a knife, and month all his things come. During a recent heavy snowstorm he woke up one morning and found he was covered with snow several inches deep, but he says he has never had a single day's illness in his life, and has nothing to worry him. When he goes to sleep he ties his pocket-knife to his leg or arm, covers himself over with clothes, and puts his head underneath up.

Big Oil Finds.

The most important development in the small business of oil production in Australia is recorded at present. North Queensland, even though the southern state geologists reported that he had been unable to find any indications of oil in that district. The drill of an oil company struck a huge volume of gas, which immediately ignited. The flame from the well burned furiously for a week, shooting 80 feet into the air with a roar and dazzling glare which caused the residents of Roma to consider evacuating the town. The day after the fire started oil began to exude in small quantities, and in a day or two the flow was considerable.

Got What They Wanted.

A curious strike recently occurred at Jajpore (India) jute mill. At the outset the men struck because a European assistant had wounded a boy with an air-gun. They demanded the dismissal of the European as a condition of resuming work. This was done, but within a week they wished the assistant to be reinstated. The management refused their demands, and a number of men went on strike again.

Nelson Document Sold.

"An officer desires to return thanks to Almighty God for his perfect recovery from a severe wound, and also for the many services bestowed upon him, Dec. 6, 1797. For most humbly." The paper with these words, said to be the first written by Nelson with his left hand, sold at Sotheby's London auction rooms recently for £700, part of the Victory's sails and a piece of the canopy of Nelson's funeral barge being included in the lot.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs want of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally recommended. Its success in leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific nerve wrong, as they also are.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop to the creation of that now very popular Stomach remedy, Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and stand fully behind it.

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Rochester, First Home, Henrietta, Dexter, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lone Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $15.2

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a fine fissure, is sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us each $500. for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 65 feet deep, are from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immediate shafts already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 15c cash or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

EARLY ADVERTISEMENTS.

England Took a Long Time to Realize the Value of Printing.

One of the first English printed advertisements was a handbill or poster got out by Caxton in 1480 and reading:

"Pyes . . . of Salisbury . . . good and cheepe . . . if it please any man spirituel or temporel to bye."

This was not a baker's advertisement, Caxton had printed "Pyes" or clerical rules telling how the clergy at Salisbury dealt with the changing date of Easter; and as the clergy could read he was bold enough to print advertisements of his "Pyes."

For two centuries after it was introduced, printing, which should have boomed advertising — if advertising depended primarily upon printing — had little or no effect upon it. The public had to be reached by the robes over the shop, the public criers in towns, and by boys in front of stalls calling, "What d'ye lack, master? What d'ye lack?"

Even the newspapers, when the civil wars in England in the seventeenth century brought them forth and they began to develop readers, had an extraordinarily small effect in developing advertising. Book notices, rewards for the arrest of runaway servants and quacks began to appear about 1652. And a little later the germ of modern advertising began to develop in the "Mercurius Politicus," "The Kingdom's Intelligencer," and the "Publick Advertiser" and others in an effort to introduce tea, coffee, and chocolate into England, thus:

Tea: "That excellent and by all Physitians approved China drink called by the Chineans Teha, by other Nations Tay, alias Tee."

Coffee: "The grain or berry called coffee, growing only upon little trees in the deserts of Arabia. Brought from thence and as drunk generally throughout all the Grand Seignor's dominions. It is a simple, innocent thing composed into a drink."

And chocolate: "An excellent West India drink called Chocolate."

The contrast between popular dependence upon advertising then and now cannot be better shown than by the experience after the great London fire. In 1666 London was practically wiped out by fire. The printer of The London Gazette, with almost prophetic acumen, offered his columns for notices of new locations of shops. But though practically every important shop in the city was moved, there was absolutely no response to this offer. The old locations had never been known through the newspapers, so why should anyone look there for the new?

Walking Over the Fire.

On the anniversary of the twentieth day after the death of Imam Hussain, which fell recently, the usual ceremony of walking over the fire, which is held annually at Mushirabad, a suburb of Hyderabad, took place in the presence of a crowd which was greater than in past years. "Walking over the fire," is a wonderful sight. Two or three cartloads of firewood are gathered in an open space in front of the "Ashoorkhana," and at midnight the wood is set on fire. This takes about two hours to burn, and the heat is so great that no one can stand within a distance of at least a dozen yards from the fire. After the fire has burnt out, the live charcoal is spread out evenly on the ground in the form of a circle. When everything is ready, two men jump barefooted into the fire and walk across the fiery carpet, not once, but at least a dozen times. The heat from the glowing embers is fiercer than when the wood was burning. The example of the two men is followed by several hundreds. The strangest feature of the ceremony is that not a single man receives any injury. Even children of all ages jump into the fire and run across it without the least hesitation, and all seem to be at home. The only effects after passing through the ordeal seems to be that one perspires profusely.

Marianne Farningham Dead.

Thousands reading in Canada have read at some time or other those novels which appeared in weekly form in The Christian World, and were afterwards reproduced in book form at the customary price of three shillings and sixpence, and have had a most extensive reading in the novel religious world only equalled by those of Miss Lyall and other authors of the serio-religious school which has found such a following among the religious readers of to-day. Miss Hearn, better known as Marianne Farningham to readers of religious papers for the last half century, died a few days ago in a boarding-house at Barmouth, to which she was taken a day or two ago before her death on her arrival from Northampton. She was 74 years old. Miss Farningham was editress of The Sunday School Times, and for 38 years she never missed a contribution either of prose or verse to the Christian World, for which she wrote her first poem in 1867. Many of her verses have become standard hymns, which are sung every Sunday in thousands of churches throughout the world.

Longshoreman George.

Lord George Hamilton is known by a few of his intimates as "Longshoreman George." The name is the sequel of an old joke. One night, many years ago, Lord George had to respond at a dinner to the toast of the Admiralty, but between the toast and his speech a well-known comic singer was called upon for a song. This genius chose "The Longshoreman," with its chorus, declaring that he "here ain't no sailor bold, and he never was upon the sea."

THE NILE'S GIANT DAM

BRITONS HAVE WORKED MIRACLES IN EGYPT.

Huge Engineering Works on Ancient River Have Made It Possible to Go In a Luxurious Steamer to Nearly 900 Miles From Cairo—Barrages Will Irrigate Thousands of Acres of Rich Lands.

There is no standing still nowadays in Egypt. A policy of well-ordered hustle prevails in the land of the Pharaohs, and one achievement for its improvement is no sooner accomplished than another is begun. Thus the completion only a year or two ago, of the great dam at Assouan, and of the important barrage at Assiout, marked the commencement of another big barrage at Esneh, which has been formally opened by the Khedive since 1909 came in. To understand what this means it is well to visualise the position of these three great dams in the Nile valley.

You can now, if it pleases you, leave Cairo in an American three-decked stern-wheeler which would do credit to the Mississippi or the Hudson. On this great house-boat, fitted with all the luxuries of civilisation, including concert and dancing halls, you can ascend the classic river for 347 miles until you come in sight of the lowest of the three works referred to at Assiout, the point where, in 1884, 800 rowing boats to carry the British Soudan expedition of that year, were put into the water.

The twenty-five years that have elapsed since then have made more difference in Assiout than the twenty-five centuries that went before. Railhead was there in 1884, on the very verge of deserts and of unknown regions stretching unbroken to the shores of the great Equatorial lakes. Now Assiout, a station on the Cairo-Khartoum line, which will ultimately form a part of the Cape to Cairo Railway, is a brisk manufacturing town, and a busy mart for the produce of the 200,000 acres of the Fayoum district fructified by the water impounded behind the Assiout barrage. That barrage is 980 yards long, and the regulated flow from its 180 sluices literally causes the desert to bloom like the rose. It was opened only seven years ago, and has already repaid its cost of about three-quarters of a million pounds sterling several times over.

From Assiout the steamer proceeds 240 miles further south, past the ruins of Thebes, to Esneh, where the latest barrage is situated. Its length is about the same as that at Assiout, but as creation has been a much tougher job from the engineering point of view. Its foundations were not begun until the very end of 1906, when an army of about 10,000 men was employed upon them because it was essential that they should be raised above high water level before the floods were due. This was accomplished under great difficulties owing to the presence of running sand, which could only be combatted by the use of cast-iron piles weighing almost a ton apiece, which had to be made in England and transported thence to the spot whilst the work was in progress. The beginning of the dry season of 1907 saw the foundation on either side complete save for a gap of about 400 yards between the two ends, through which the Nile flowed. This was reduced, by the same means as before, to about 200 yards; then the river was partially diverted, and the gap was brought down to 130 yards.

At this stage the final operation called for the highest kind of engineering skill and resource. The stream was in small volume, but its strength was concentrated in the narrow channel between the ends of the foundations and the whole of the river traffic was passing along this limited waterway. The traffic was disposed of by directing it through a lock which had been constructed alongside; then the river was tackled. Piles were driven into the bed above the gap, and to these boats were tied from which many thousands of bags filled with sand were thrown into the stream, so roped together that they caught upon other piles driven in lower down, and so checked the flow as to render it possible to insert two rows of piles close together, from between which the water was pumped out and a space obtained wherein to lay the desired foundations. Upon these the superstructure was raised to carry 120 sluices, and a roadway 20 feet wide; the whole work being accomplished in two months less than two years. From the flood of 1909 onwards the Esneh barrage will irrigate 250,000 acres of what has hitherto been desert, whilst Esneh itself, an important town from prehistoric times, will renew its long forgotten youth as the centre of a rich agricultural area. It is said to be the healthiest place in Egypt, owing to the dryness and salubrity of its air and its equable climate, so is likely enough also to become famous as a sanatorium.

One hundred miles further south, near the First Cataract and 583 miles from Cairo, the steamer reaches the Great Dam at Assouan, the most wonderful work constructed in Egypt since the pyramids were built. Behind its massive wall, 1 1-4 miles in length, one thousand million tons of water is impounded to supply over six million acres of rich soil, which, without it, would bear nothing save a few stunted plants. This Great Dam is a monument of British engineering genius and financial resource. When it was planned the Anglo-Egyptian authorities refused to let the contract for its construction except with the condition that nothing whatever was to be paid for it until after successful completion. British engineers and financiers were found to face the immense risks involved in this stipulation, and now the dam repays its first cost year after year to the Egyptian Government so successful has it been that works are now in progress to raise its height 17 feet by building a stone "apron" about six inches distant from its down-stream face, the old and new structures being pinned together by iron rods.

A RECORD PIKE.

Largest Ever Caught in England Landed a Few Days Ago.

A giant pike, which is for English and Scotch streams the record catch, was caught recently on the Hampshire Stour by the orthodox method of rod and line.

This fish turned the scale at 37 1-4 pounds. Its length is 45 inches and girth 24 inches. When first taken out of the water it was weighed with a spring balance and reached the figure of over 40 pounds, but in the intervening time it has shrunk to its present size. It has a wonder to all beholders, in the shop of Messrs. Milestone and Stanforth, Swallow Place, Oxford street, with the tiny reach with which it was caught still stuck fast in its gills.

The captor of this noble prize was interviewed by a representative of the press. "I caught her," he said, "on Sunday morning on Lord Wimborne's estate. The stream was in flood, and I was fishing with snap tackle in a very fast stream. I had an hour before caught and given away a 16-pound pike, which is probably the male fish. I dropped my bait into the run and it was carried by the swirl round the corner into a backwater which shelves gradually up towards the bank from the point of the island.

"The pike took me fairly quietly, for she was old and sluggish, and not for some time did I realize that I was fast in one of the biggest pike that have ever been caught in the British Isles. She fought me for nearly half an hour, and at last I managed to get her toward the shelving bank. My keeper, wild with excitement, plunged into the water, and we got her out somehow.

"She looked lovely on coming out of the water. The shading of her body was exquisite, and the pink spots which have since grown blurred and faded showed up splendidly. My chief reason, however, for congratulation is that she must have been one of the worst thieves in our duck decoy. There is no close season for pike on the Stour, otherwise she might long have survived as the terror of the wild ducklings which we rear there every summer, and have missed in large quantities."

A GRAVE STATEMENT.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Haldane Says Britain Cannot Take Chances.

Right Hon. R. B. Haldane, British Secretary for War, has just made the following pronouncement on the European situation:

"For three years past," he said, "I have been going up and down the country preaching from the text that if you wish to make war unlikely you must prepare yourself against being taken unawares.

"I hate war, and I wish to avert its horrors, but when the nations are piling up armaments it is not safe for us to shut our eyes to the risks. We must prepare while there is time to prepare.

"The fault of our country is that we do not look ahead. We are very practical, very energetic, but we do not make far-reaching plans or look to the possibilities of the future. We insure against risks in business and we ought to do it in our national life.

"There has been too little of that, and I desire to impress on the country that we must look ahead if we are to be sure.

"The people of this country should meditate on the fact that we are not merely the centre of a great Empire, but that we have to police, with what I may call a long-range professional army, our dominions across the seas.

"We want not only a great army, but a great navy with the command of the sea. Because we are an island we should be fools if we neglected the defence which the sea makes possible to us.

"During the last few days there has been awakened deep interest in the state of the navy. I will only say one word about that. The Government is determined to preserve the command of the sea.

"The command of the sea must be preserved from the point of view of the army as well as the navy itself.

"No man can say we are never likely to be invaded, and the more we are prepared the less likely is it to occur."

Is Lord Milner a German?

It may be remembered, apropos of the meteoric career of Lord Milner, who was fifty-five the other day, that when he got his peerage certain newspapers contended that he was a German alien, and, as such, could not sit in the House of Lords. As a matter of fact, Lord Milner, though educated in Germany, was born in England. His father, Dr. Milner, might perhaps have been described as "a German subject," since he was born in Germany. But Dr. Milner's father was English, and the son of an Englishman is always an Englishman too, wherever he may have been born. Lord Milner has been described as society's most incorrigible bachelor. His engagement has never even been rumored.

Didn't Startle Rossetti.

Among authors there are some who take but the slightest interest in social or political questions. So far as public questions are concerned, they are hardly better informed than Dante Gabriel Rossetti. During the French revolution one of his friends burst into Rossetti's studio with the incredible news, "Louis Philippe has landed in England." "Has he?" said Rossetti calmly. "What has he come for?"

Readily.

"Willie, did you put your money in the contribution box in Sunday School to-day?" "No, mamma; I asked Eddy Lake, the preacher's son, if I could keep it and spend it on candy, and he gave me permission."

Teacher Wanted to Know.

"How do you like your teacher, dear?" little Mary was asked, after her first day at school. "I like her," said Mary, "but I don't think she knows much, for she just keeps asking questions all the time."

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

CLEAN Up INSIDE

Blood and System Cleansing in the Spring Makes Good Health all Summer.

In spite of all your careful bathing it is safe to say that in the spring you feel pearly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pale or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely bilious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years, says W. S. Sangster of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite, suffered from indigestion and gas, had sores pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt despondent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They toned me quickly. In one week I felt like new. I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clean all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand tonic medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a perfect spring medicine, they destroy germs and poisons of every description and strength whereby the system relishes and the patient quickly enjoys the blessings of Perfect Health. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today—25c. For sale at all dealers.

What's What?

The question in the mind of Peterborough sports is can Simpson run, or is Tom Hair playing him for a Gump play so that he can corral a big bunch of Cobalt in one clean? Until the above is satisfactorily explained the sports are foolish to place any money on the best man in the race. The front man only wins when the manager tells him to. The public will get onto professional running the game as they have in the wrestling game.

Good Mines Get Credit

Veteran promoters of mining undertakings say that it is easier to get money for developing a mine than capitalists investors than ever before. Hundreds of the cobalt mines that are doing well today are financed by eastern and western business men who never looked on mining ventures with approval until they learned in recent years of the large profits that accrue from well-worked ground mines. Grasp the point. In the mining regions the flotation of sound small mining properties is easier than formerly, because of the ability of the principal members of mining machinery, and decision in supplies to lower miners of good standing but of small means with liberal credit.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM H. PORTER.

The death occurred on Friday morning, April 30th, at the residence of Chas. H. Mann, 182 Yonge street, Hamilton, of Mr. William H. Porter, aged 70 years. The deceased was a former resident of Smith township, having resided a number of years in Bridgenorth and Selwyn. Some four years ago he moved to Hamilton where he has since resided with Mr. Mann. The late Mr. Porter had been in ill health for some time although nothing serious was looked for and his death was quite unexpected. He was able to be up and around as usual on Friday morning. He went into the dining room and while there was suddenly seized with an attack upon the heart. He collapsed and fell to the floor. His fall attracted the attention of Mr. Mann and his sister, who found him helpless, and he passed away in their arms a few seconds later. The funeral will be held in Hamilton this morning at 10.30, and interment will take place in the Hamilton cemetery.

The late Mr. Porter was well known in Smith township, and his many friends will greatly regret to learn of his demise. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved relatives.

Only Drill Shed That Cost Nothing

An interesting fact was brought to light the other day when one of the leading officers of the 57th Regiment, in speaking of the burning of the old drill sheds, stated that the Peterborough sheds were the only ones that did not cost the country a lot of money when they were burned. The original armories scattered all over the country were all of frame and they were all burned down, and all of them contained quantities of arms, accoutrements, etc. The Peterborough sheds, however, were never on fire before and all the regiment's property had been removed before the blaze. This is also one of the very few, if not the last, of the remaining wooden drill sheds.

McMahon, who died last week. Mr. Carnegie enters upon his new duties today, at a salary of $2,250 a year.

Mr. Carnegie's resignation as a member of the local House has been accepted, and a writ for a new election issued. The nomination for the by-election will take place at Fenelon Falls, on Tuesday, May 18, and the election will be held one week later.

"Mr. Carnegie was an old and highly regretted member of the Legislature," said Sir James Whitney yesterday, after making the announcement. "His father was also a representative of one of the Peterboroughs for several years. He has always stood high in the estimation of his fellows. Since we came into power he has been chairman of the Public Accounts Committee."

Mr. Carnegie was one of the five oldest members of the Legislature. In 1894 he was returned to represent East Victoria with a majority of 72, and since that time no other name was mentioned at the conventions, and his majority rose to 1,160. MAC GREGOR SYNDICATE

This district promises better than Cobalt did—Cobalt has been heralded as the world's Greatest Silver Camp. Although in its infancy Cobalt has paid $11,600,000 in dividends. : : : :

GOW GANDA WILL SURPASS IT

Millions are made in Cobalt by small syndicates who purchased properties and did initial development. Hundreds invested in this way made tens of thousands. Such a chance is now offered at Gow Ganda.

THE MACGREGOR SYNDICATE

Now in Process of Formation. Here Are particulars:

SHARES $100.00 EACH

THE INVESTOR'S GREAT CHANCE

The MACGREGOR Syndicate is being formed for $20,000 with shares at $100 each, and will own 120 ACRES (3 claims: M. R. 3507 M. R. 3523, M. R. 3524) at the south end of GOW GANDA Lake, right in the midst of valuable discoveries.

Also G. G. 341 at Elkhorn Lake. The vendor reports and guarantees a rich discovery of native silver averaging 500 ozs. to the ton for full length of vein. This means $250 per ton, and is high grade shipping ore.

We consider this claim by itself to be worth, on its guaranteed silver showing, four times the entire capitalization of the Syndicate.

The Syndicate with its large holdings of valuable property will undoubtedly yield large profits to its members. The Syndicate will close within a few days as there is a lively demand for its shares.

When the Syndicate is closed it is proposed to form a company to take over, purchase and operate the three properties. The proposed capitalization of the company will be $2,000,000—a fair capitalization, for 120 acres, located as these properties are—the Syndicate will turn over the properties of the Company for, say, 1,200,000 shares of stock at $1 per share, par value, leaving 800,000 shares in the Treasury of the Company to be sold at 50 cents a share for the installation of the machinery and thoroughly working the properties. This plan would give each holder of shares in the Syndicate 6,000 shares in the company for each share held. It is proposed to place the stock of the Company on the market at 50c a share, and on this basis members of the Syndicate will be entitled to have their stock sold share for share with treasury stock. This would give members of the syndicate $3,000 in cash for each share held in the syndicate, less a brokerage of, say 5 per cent. for selling.

Another Electric Power Co. Wants to do Business Here

The following letter was received from the Seymour Power and Electric Co., Ltd. of Campbellford, and will be taken up by the Special Power Committee;—

Toronto, April 30, 1909.

S. B. Armstrong, Esq.,
City Clerk.
Peterborough, Ont.,

Dear Sir.—The Seymour Power and Electric Co., expects to complete the construction of a 4000 h.p. power house about the beginning of September in the present year, and to supplement this very shortly with a still larger installation on water powers already controlled by the company. We have been given to understand that the city of Peterborough is desirous of largely increasing the supply of power available for consumption in the city and its suburbs. If this information is correct we would be glad if you would inform us officially upon what terms and conditions our company would be permitted to do business in your city. We do not desire any special or exclusive privileges of any sort, or any contracts for the sale of power to the municipality, but wish to secure the same rights and privileges to do business which are extended to merchants handling any line of goods. As the construction of the transmission line to your city from our power house will require about four months time, and an expenditure of considerably more than $100,000. we would ask that this enquiry be given prompt attention in order that we may complete our constructions during the summer months, if satisfactory arrangements should be made.

(Signed) Seymour Power and Electric Co., Limited.

Per J. G. G. Kerry, president.

Thirty-four pupils of the Normal School left for the rural schools of the county yesterday, where they will act as teachers for the week. They will return on Friday and the students of another form at the school will instruct the rural classes next week. The members of Form II. are in charge of the work this week. This is in accordance with the departmental regulations concerning those who have entered the Normal School without having had any previous teaching experience.

The annual meeting of the City and County Sunday School Teachers was opened last night in St. John's school house. There were a large number of delegates present, both from the outside and the city schools. Clean Your Yards

The police authorities wish to remind owners of back yards that the 15th of May will soon be here, and, according to the law, all yards must be cleaned up by that date. Chief Rimmel will send his men out on a tour of inspection, and those who have been in the habit of using the "hook" will now have to make use of the rake. They will also be on the look out for dogs running at large without a tag.

Adopted the Daylight System at Collegiate

Peterborough Collegiate Institute yesterday adopted the daylight schedule. The students were called to their classes at 8.30 in the morning and were dismissed at 11.30. They were convened again at 1 o'clock, and were dismissed again at 3.30. Just a half hour's different. The boys and girls were pretty well on time and it is not anticipated that any inconvenience will be experienced, while the advantages are many. Peterborough is one of the first, if not the first school in Ontario to adopt the daylight system.

Big Excursion from Coldwater

It is expected that there will be an excursion from Coldwater to Peterborough on June the first, first, bringing about eight hundred people to the city. It will be the annual event of the Coldwater branch of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. They will arrive at ten o'clock in the morning and arrangements are under way to have the steamers take those of the excursion who wish, for a trip down the river.

The committee have communicated with Mr. Dennison, of the Hotel National in reference to the matter and if suitable arrangements can be made, the excursionists will come here.

The Colonial Weaving Co. Get More Concessions

Mr. R. R. Hall and Mr. Coulthart addressed the council in connection with the Colonial Weaving Co's proposition which has been reported in previous issues. Mr. Hall was heard. He read his subsequent letter in reply to the city's resolution. Reference to this letter will be found in another column.

Mr. Hall stated that if the council accepted their proposition they would start at once to call for tenders for the new building. They have ordered new machines which will give employment to 50 hands at the start. Inside of three years the company will be employing 60 hands. They will install new machines as their business increases and they know what kind of machines will be required. Nearly every style of label requires a different style of machine.

The plans and specifications are already prepared by Mr. Blackwell and he is only waiting for the bylaw to carry before he advertises for tenders.

It was moved by Aldermen Gillespie and Butler that the resolution passed at the last meeting be amended to read 50 hands for 10 months instead of 60 hands for 12 months or 60 hands for 10 months and that if the Colonial Weaving Co. went ahead with their buildings at once the city would refund the $200.—

U. S. Investors are Investing in Cobalt

The Mercantile and Financial Times, a New York publication, which is recognized as one of the best financial authorities on the continent, had an article in a recent issue on one of the silver mines of the wonderful Northern Ontario districts. This mine is known as the Pan-Silver mine with headquarters at Baileybury, Ont. Its property consists of 320 acres held under Crown grant from the government in the heart of the most productive section of the Cobalt mining district and immediately adjoining the Temiskaming mines. Mr. B. E. Cartwright, president of both the Pan-Silver Co., and the Temiskaming Co., states that he firmly believes the Pan-Silver property will be a greater and more profitable producer than is the Temiskaming, and everyone knows what kind of a dividend payer the Temiskaming mine is. In conclusion the Mercantile and Financial News states;—No wonder far-sighted investors are forsaking copper stocks and the shares of silver mining companies operating in the United States and Mexico, and investing their money in Cobalts. The Pan-Silver Mining Company's properties are most promising and its management is such as can be depended upon to safeguard the shareholders interests in every way. The Times also recommends investors to purchase Pan-Silver stock.

Routine Business Transacted at the Regular Session of Council

Engineer's Plans for Smith Street Bridge to be Reported on by an Independent Engineer—The Finance Committee Report—Many Communications were Received

The City Council had a very formal session last night. There was little more than routine business transacted. The fire works which have usually marked the conferences of the city fathers seemed to have been dampened by the heavy rains of the past month. There were a few pin wheels fired off at the end of the meeting but they were not spectacular and are therefore withheld from the public. As a matter of fact they were more or less of a private nature and quiet was restored before the adjournment.

The minutes of the previous meeting were taken as read.

Those present were; Mayor Rush, Aldermen Hobbs, Duffus, Duncan, Morgan, Butler, Bradburn, Gillespie, Turner, Mitchell, McIntyre, Morrow and Phelan.

A letter was received from Mr. Harper, secretary of the 57th Regiment Band, for the usual yearly grant. This was referred to the Finance Committee.

The request for privileges to erect boat houses on city property were granted under the usual conditions.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were received and dealt with;

From C. J. Schmidt in reference to the blocking of the Downie street creek, which has before caused sickness in the family and is now injuring his building.

The council was to have taken this matter up two years ago but failed to do so.

From the Seymour Power and Electric Co., Ltd. of Campbellford, re power. The company's letter will be found in another column.

From Mr. R. R. Hall for the Colonial Weaving Co., asking that they be required to employ only 50 hands for ten months of the year for three years, and that the city have the new bylaw confirmed by the legislature.

From Mr. E. F. Matthews asking for a refund of $10 paid for plumbing license for Jas. Findley, and which was not granted.

M. M. Callaghan and M. E. Smeaton applied for permission to build a boat house 350 feet north of the C.P.R. bridge.

From Dr. S. R. Poole drawing the attention of the council to the dangerous condition of the crossing at Sherbrooke and Stewart streets. He had a shaft broken at this place and wants the city to pay for it.

From the Ontario Metal Culvert Co., asking for a share of the city's business.

A petition for electric lights at the corner of Smith and Reid streets, and Reid and Victoria avenue, was received.

From R. F. McWilliams on behalf of Mr. Robert Baker, asking for the privilege to appear before the committee to explain the circumstances of his fall near the Cereal works.

From residents of Mark and James street asking that a hydrant be placed at the corner of those streets.

From the Board of Education asking that a ten-foot walk be constructed through Central park.

A further letter was received from Mr. Kennedy in reference to the fall.

From Park street Baptist church asking for a grant this walk in front of the new church and an extension of the wooden walk on the west side of Stewart street south to the corner of the new granolithic walk.

REPORTS.

Reports of committees were received from the Property Committee, Board of Works, Finance Committee, Fire, Water and Light Committee, Legal Committee, and Committee of the Whole.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT.

The Fire, Water & Light Committee moved that the reductions received from the hydrants be paid over to that committee. Ald. Bradburn objected to that clause. He moved that $100 be deducted and applied on the grant to the 57th Regiment's celebrations on May 24th. Ald. Morrow wanted to see the whole clause cut out but after due consideration Ald. Bradburn's motion was carried.

SMITH STREET BRIDGE.

Ald. Turner brought up the matter of the Smith street bridge. He said he was in accord with the plans of the city engineer. But the bylaw was defeated last time for lack of information. He would like therefore to have an independent engineer make a report on the bridge so that report could be used in educating the people. He asked that a clause be added to the report to that effect. Ald. Hobbs seconded it.

Ald. Phelan stated that he did not think such a move was necessary.

The report of the committee and Ald. Turner's motion was submitted afterward and was carried, and Mr. Francis was named and the chairman of the Board of Works will write him to secure his price for making said report.

It was moved by Ald. Phelan and Ald. Morrow that the city treasurer pay for gravel purchased by the Board of Works.

It was moved by Aldermen Butler and Hobbs that the city treasurer be authorized to issue a cheque for $580 to Mr. Anderson for a new team of fire hall horses, and also for Mr. Bull's commission for purchasing same.—Carried.

A bylaw authorizing the borrowing of $120,000 for the improvement of the water works system in the city was passed.

OTHER MATTERS.

Ald. Duncan brought to the attention of the council a hydrant at the Dordage Works which was leaking and should be fixed. Ald. Butler said it was being fixed.

Ald. Morgan brought to the notice of the council the fact that two motions had been passed last year to have the watering trough in Ashburnham connected with the sewer. This has never been done and he wanted to know why it was not done.

Ald. Duncan said that the market hall was not clean and that Market Clerk Ball made no attempt to keep it clean. He had been notified to clean it up but has not done so.

Ald. Duncan moved that Mr. Ball be instructed by the chairman to notify the market clerk to clean up the market at once or his services will be no longer required.

The chairman will see Mr. Ball today.

Ald. Morrow asked what was being done in reference to the report of Mr. Chipman on the south end sewer.

Ald. Phelan stated that he was taking the matter up with Mr. Chipman but that gentleman was out West.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The Finance Committee reported in part as follows;

We received a letter from the city solicitor regarding the request of A. P. Poussette made on behalf of Jas. Carmichael, asking that the license fee for peddling pop corn and peanuts be increased to 25% and recommend that no action be taken on the request.

In view of May 24th being a public holiday and of the 57th Regiment having arranged to have other regiments visit Peterborough on that day which will result in the people of Peterborough remaining at home on the holiday and in many visitors being attracted, we recommend that a grant of $100 be made to the 57th Regt. to assist in entertaining the visiting regiments.

Reorganization Meeting of Junior Baseball League

A meeting of the Junior Church Baseball League was held in the Y. M.C.A. last night for re-organization purposes. The meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. parlors, with President E. N. McWilliams in the church. In the absence of the secretary, Mr. E. Read, the minutes were read by Mr. Mont Johnston who acted as secretary pro tem. The treasurer's report was read and and adopted. It showed a surplus on hand of $5.30 which will help to start the new year.

It was with regret that the resignations of President E. N. McWilliams and Secretary Treasurer E. Read were received.

On the suggestion of President McWilliams a motion was passed authorizing the ministers of the various churches to sign the certificates of the players in their respective clubs. This will save the president considerable trouble in enquiring into the eligibility of the players.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Patrons and Patronesses—The ministers and their wives, of the various churches represented in the league;

Hon. President—T. S. Bradburn, M.P.P.

President—J. Pilling.
Vice-Pres.—H. R. Hassard.
Sec.-Treas.—C. Curtis.

The Executive Committee will consist of one representative from each club in the league.

The meeting was then adjourned to meet at the call of the new president. In the meantime an effort will be made to induce a number of other clubs to join the league so that a big season's fun may be had.

Hains' Mother on Stand, Last Witness for Defence

Flushing, N.Y., May 3.—With Major John P. Hains, the defendant's brother, on the witness stand, the third week of the trial of Captain Peter C. Hains, jr., for the killing of William E. Annis, opened in the Supreme Court here today. Major Hains was under direct examination by counsel for the defence, when court adjourned Saturday. Today John F. McIntyre, chief counsel for Capt. Hains, concluded the direct examination of the witness by having him identify the round trip tickets coupons which Thornton Hains testified he had bought for the defendant and himself the day they visited Bayside and Annis was shot. The witness said Thornton Hains had showed them to him several times after the tragedy.

According to present plans the defence will call Mrs. Virginia Hains, the mother of the defendant, as their last witness. She is expected to tell of the eccentricities of Capt. Hains as a child, tending to show that the boy was peculiar and of abnormal proclivities of mind in his early years.

District Attorney Dewitt began his cross-examination of Major Hains by

Barbers Ask for The Early Closing

A petition was received by the council from the barbers in city asking that a bylaw be passed requiring all shops in the city to be closed at eight o'clock ever night except Saturday and on the day before a holiday, and at 11 o'clock p.m. on those days. The petition was signed by twenty proprietors.

A second petition was received from the same source asking that bylaw No. 1146 be repealed.

The petition was received and a bylaw was passed granting the request, said bylaw to come into effect on May, 15th, 1909.

The Surprising Testimony of Miss Florence Kinrade at Inquest

(Special to The Times)

Hamilton, May 3.—A small sensation was created in the inquest here tonight into the murder of Miss Ethel Kinrade, when her mother, Mrs. Isabel Kinrade, collapsed and had to be carried out of court. Her examination had not been finished and until called upon again she was excused and Miss Florence Kinrade was put into the box.

When counsel for the Crown, Mr. George Tate Blackstock asked that Mrs. Isabel Kinrade be called. Mr. Lynch-Staunton, for the family said;

"I am obliged to ask on behalf of the family and the witness especially that this inquest be in camera, and exclude the public. There is no person on trial. It is a mere inquiry, and the coroner has the power to exclude all but the jury, the lawyers and the witnesses. In the United States, in special cases, the grand jury is sworn to secrecy, and none but them are allowed to hear the evidence. I think it would be most desirable to have such a law in this country.

"Out of consideration for everybody connected with the affair, I ask you, sir, to carry out the rest of the inquiry in camera.

"And I hope you will exercise on these grounds the authority vested in your office."

THE CORONER'S REPLY.

Coroner Anderson replied;

"Mr. Staunton—This is the first request of its kind made during the inquest. As you say, there have been some misrepresentations made, and it is for that reason that I cannot grant your request. I think it will be far better if further investigations will be corrected by public opinion."

MRS. KINRADE.

Mrs. Kinrade was called and questioned very closely in reference to her daughter's movements before she went away and afterwards, but the witness remembered very little. She said she did not take much interest in her daughter's whereabouts or doings as she was opposed to Florence going away. Mrs. Kinrade knew something of the bracelet Florence was supposed to have got from the Manchester Presbyterian church at least she had seen it once and had heard a little about it. Mrs. Kinrade swooned before her evidence was completed.

It was established that whereas Miss Florence had stated she had not corresponded with Jimmie Baum, the detectives had discovered that during the family's sojourn in Toronto, letters in the house, which established the fact that she had been corresponding with Baum until two weeks before the murder, which is the nearest to the fact that the family had admonished her for keeping up the correspondence with her former lover after her engagement with Montrose Wright, the Victoria College theological student.

When asked by Mr. Blackstock if she would admit the contents of the letters rather than have them read in court she said she would.

The witness could not give the name of the street, the name of the church, or of the pastor, nor the address of her residence. She wasn't sure whether the first church position she had was in Richmond, Virginia, or Virginia Beach.

"But," objected Mr. Blackstock, "that is 80 miles from Richmond."

"Did you receive your letters from the Manchester post office?"

"I don't think so." Latter she couldn't remember if she had or not.

Mr. Blackstock—"Now, Miss Kinrade, I'm instructed that for several weeks you called every other day for your mail and that you got it. Also that you left written instructions with the Manchester post office to forward your mail to Virginia Beach. Are these statements true?"

"They may be," she said.

Mr. Blackstock.—"I am instructed that in those days you came across from Richmond in a cab, and got out at the post office, went in and got your mail, got into the cab again and returned to Richmond the same way."

She answered, "No." Latter she said "I can't remember."

"Now, Miss Kinrade, I'm instructed that you never sang in any church in the South, and I will ask you now if you can name the church. I shall give you a chance to do so."

"I can't name it any more than I have done."

Mr. Blackstock then asked about the bracelet she was supposed to have received from the church choir at Manchester where she was alleged to have sung.

She said the bracelet was given her by the choir when leaving and it was inscribed accordingly.

When asked who made the presentation she said the choir master and when further asked who were present she could not remember.

"Was the pastor present?"

"I'm not sure," she said.

"Well, was there anyone there?"

"Yes, a lot of people, but I don't remember any of them."

"Did you procure that bracelet yourself and give instructions to put that inscription upon it?"

"No," she replied.

Mr. Blackstock.—"That inscription says it was the choir of the Manchester Presbyterian church. That is?"

"Yes, I think so."

"That wasn't true was it?"

"I understood it so. It was given to me by the choir leader."

"And you cannot name a single solitary person there?"

Mr. Lynch Staunton here interrupted, stating that these questions had no bearing upon the case and were asked for the purpose of casting aspersions upon the girl's character.

Mr. Blackstock answered, "So far as casting aspirations upon this young woman, nothing is further from my mind."

As to Ord. Warburton she could not remember his line of business or when she met him.

Mr. Blackstock produced letters which she identified as her own.

Pinkerton Detective Ponder then read a letter addressed "My Dear Caroline," which in part was as follows;—

"God help any poor mortal who has to live down here among the cotton, tobacco and coons. It's fierce. I see more little shacks and big fat soon women with about 10 small ——. The parson is an old bald headed soak, that reads his sermons. He needs a fire cracker after him, and his moustache shaved off and a number of other things. The tenor in the choir is of the white haired variety as most of them are."

The letter was a clangy one. She spoke of a visit, commenting thus;—"Aunt Mary takes me about for fair." Then an allusion to Aunt Marion, who is said to have laughed "like a gun-of-a-gun." She also said, "My Sunday work is a sinch."

The inquest adjourned at 11 o'clock until Monday night at seven o'clock. It is not known whether Mrs. and Miss Kinrade will be recalled as the coroner told them they were dismissed subject to being recalled. Jimmie Baum will likely be next.

BRONCHITIS

SCIENTIFICALLY TREATED.

The best authorities agree that Bronchitis is treated most scientifically by Catarrhozone, which goes right to the root of the trouble.

Bronchitis can be treated successfully only by a remedy carried direct to the affected parts along with the air breathed.

Catarrhozone is a vegetable antiseptic and is inhaled at the mouth, and afterpassing through all the air passages of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, is exhaled through the nose.

The healing vapor of Catarrhozone goes wherever the air you breathe goes, and reaches every part that is affected. No matter how deep-seated the bronchial irritation may be, Catarrhozone is sure to reach it.

Catarrhozone protects and heals the mucous membrane, stops the cough, heals up the sores, and is guaranteed to bring speedy relief and cure sure.

By means of the inhaler Catarrhozone treats the local symptoms of bronchial trouble very effectually. The poisons and impurities in the blood are driven off by Ferrozone, which is a wonderful tonic and stimulant for the entire system.

Ferrozone is a muscle and tissue builder, increases the appetite aids digestion and makes the body so healthy and strong that bronchitis goes away for good.

A prominent steamboat owner, well known throughout Eastern Ontario, Captain Dunlop of Kingston, was perfectly cured of Bronchitis by Catarrhozone. The Captain had suffered for more than 20 years, and says that Catarrhozone is the best cure for Bronchitis on the face of the globe.

Mr. A. J. Culhane, a prominent citizen of Neepawa, Manitoba, speaks very appreciatively of Catarrhozone as a specific for Bronchitis, and states that his wife could not get along without it.

Everyone that has used Catarrhozone is satisfied that it is superior to all other remedies. It is delightful to inhale, simple and convenient to use, and relieves from the first breath taken through the inhaler.

Better try Catarrhozone. All druggists sell and recommend it. Complete outfit, price $1.00; trial size 25c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

REGENERATION OF SOCIETY

We are told that struggle for wealth and fear of poverty cultivate selfishness, and that if this struggle should cease, the nobler qualities of human nature would triumph over the baser.

This, however, says a writer in the Humanitarian Review, is not a question of opinion, but of fact. There are many thousands of families who are placed beyond the necessity of toil and beyond all reasonable fear of want. What are the facts in their case?

Do we find such families as a class, with succeeding generations of inherited wealth, become less and less selfish, more and more devoted to the general good, shining examples of domestic virtue and of public spirit? Or do we find precisely the opposite?

There are beautiful exceptions—the more beautiful because so exceptional—but generally speaking wealth tends to luxury, and luxury fosters vice; and how often vice disrupts the family.

Abundance makes self-gratification easy; and selfishness of every form fattens on indulgence.

Selfishness did not come with the competitive system of organized industry, and will not go with it. It existed in the tribal and patriarchal organizations of society, and wrought wretchedness there as elsewhere. The patriarchal family still obtains in Asia, and the miseries of selfishness are far more intense and obvious in Asia, where the industrial revolution has not yet entered than in Christendom, where it originated.

If society is to be saved, we must apply the law of service to all human activities and relationships, and demand that all shall live unselfishly.

The Best Plaster

A piece of flannel with tapes attached for holding it in position, slightly dampened with Chamberlain's Liniment and bound on over the seat of pain is superior to any plaster.

Miss Sadie Kennedy has returned from Chicago, where she has spent the past three months attending her mother, who has been seriously ill. The friends of Mrs. Kennedy will be pleased to know that she is greatly improved in health.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Guessing.

Guessing has an extensive fashion in many countries. Sometimes the art is considered symbolic of good and sometimes of evil. Among the Jews it has always been regarded as an appropriate moment, such as the conclusion of a bargain, as propitious, and a belief still lingers in many parts of the country that the regular habit of guessing, particularly after meals, is conducive to longevity and a protection against fevers. The old English custom of saying "God bless you!" when a person sneezed, so as to avoid evil consequences, has its counterpart in many far distant parts of the globe. The early settlers in Brazil found the custom existed, with "God preserve you!" while in Fiji it was customary to retort, "May you live!" In superstitious Scotland there is a counting table—once a wish, twice a kiss, thrice a letter and four times a disappointment.—London Sphere.

The Water Clock.

The earliest application of the clepsydra principle to produce motion was by Tsiang Hung, A. D. 125, who made an "orrery" representing the apparent motion of the heavenly bodies around the earth, which was kept going by dropping water. In the sixth century of the Christian era an instrument was in use in China which indicated the course of time by the weight of water as it gradually came from the beak of a bird and was received in a vessel on a balance, every pound representing a one-hundredth part of the day of twenty-four hours. About this time mercury began to be employed in clepsydras instead of water.

Victim of Circumstances.

"That Englishman is a funny chap," remarked the hat salesman in the big hotel; "he hasn't been out of his room today."

"Ah, he is a victim of circumstances," confided the coffee salesman.

"Victim of circumstances?"

"Yes; he put his shoes outside his door last night, according to the English custom, and somebody threw them at a cat down the areaway."

Rebuke.

A chill, dark, autumnal morning. A breakfast table with an overcrowded tribe of clamorous children. A worried mother and an irritable father muttering something about "no decent elbow room." A small child uplifts solemn eyes from his plate and says, "Hadn't one of us better die?"—London Academy.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will will cover the cost. (And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defiance for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be cured by cure afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or ward off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are Ideal Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if your ache all over, think of Preventics. Preventics may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child. If there is feverishness, either or day. Heroin probably the Preventics' greatest adjutancy. Sold in 5 boxes for the pocket, also in the boxes of 25 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you Preventics.

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai, County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Belle, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Riebenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lume Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.88.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Stallion Bar claims, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposits are of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thinnest being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 85 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense shoots already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 10c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

JEM MACE "BROKE."

Veteran English Prizefighter Is Now Old and Poor.

"Jem" Mace, the old-time champion prize-fighter, who has applied for an old-age pension, was born at Beeston, near Norwich, on Good Friday, April 8, 1831.

A representative of the press inquiring for the veteran was referred to a tavern in Islington—that decaying remnant of disappearing Old London where the old traditions still flicker. There, in the sawdusted parlor of the Bisecost Boy, the old warrior may often be heard modestly recounting his exploits to a respectfully listening group.

Mace was not at the "Biscuit," however, as it is familiarly known, but plentiful information concerning his merits was to be obtained. A tall old gentleman of forcible manner in a silk hat introduced himself as "Jem's business manager." There was another friend, who had been middle-weight champion of England himself in days gone by, and another admirer who was able to claim the distinction of having hospitably entertained the veteran in recent emergencies.

The "Biscuit" was unanimously of opinion that, despite the number of his birthdays, it was not old age that the old fighting man was suffering from. It was the world that had grown old, and lost its youthful interest in fighting, and not "Jem" Mace.

Later on Mr. Mace himself was encountered. He had been taking his evening meal in the family circle of some professional friends in Clerkenwell, and was cleaning up his plate with what was left of the loaf of bread. A lithe, erect, handsome old man still, with fine eyes and wavy grey hair above a good forehead, and strong, well-formed features.

"Since I lost my wife," he said, "nothing has gone right. I always wanted a master," he added, "and since she died I have had nobody to tell me."

On the back of each hand below the wrist there is a big, bony swelling. Asked what caused that he said, "Punching did that—punching men."

"Punching which men?"

"Punching more than five hundred men. My memory is going, and I can't remember all their names. More than five hundred I have battled with and beat them all."

"And were you never beaten then?"

"Two of them beat me. Bob Brettle beat me and Tom King beat me, but they were accidents, and in other battles I beat both of them. I was a bit careless the day I fought Bob Brettle—took him to cheap, and he caught me with his right and smashed my jaw, knocked me clean out. But the next time I beat him, and beat him fair.

"They never gave me no think corn, none of them. I suffered more in my hands from punching them than from them punching me. I knew more than they did, had a better headpiece; but since my poor wife died I've had nobody to tell me.

"A quarter of a million pounds I have took out of the prize-ring, and all gone. Ten championship cups and four championship belts I have won, all silver with diamonds and precious stones, and they have all gone. I have got a heart of old Tom Sayers left, and I would let it go for a couple of sovereigns, for I have got nothing."

"You are my old friend, Bill, for fifty years," he said to his septuagenarian manager. "You've got a good business headpiece. You stick by me and I'll do whatever you tell me to, and I can bar three rounds with anybody as well as ever I could."

"I will, Jem," said the business manager, "I'll stick by you. I'm walking wonderful well this last day or two."

And the principal of seventy-seven with his manager of seventy odd went off hopefully together to look for a likely opponent and a sporting backer.

The Last H.

Sergeant Channell, who was in the habit of dropping his h's, and Sir Frederick Thesiger were once trying a case about a ship called the Helen. Every time the former mentioned the vessel he called it the Elen. Every time the other counsel mentioned her they called her the Helen. At last the judge, with a quaint gravity, said: "Stop." (a favorite word of his.) "Stop. What was the name of the ship? I have it on my notes the Elen and the Helen. Which is it?" And the Bar grinned.

"Oh, my lud," said Thesiger in his blandest and most fastidious manner, "the ship was christened the Helen, but she lost her 'h' in the chops of the channel."—London Spectator.

Daring Lady Explorers.

Probably no other lady has such a record of exploration as Mrs. French-Sheldon, who, amongst other claims to distinction, possesses that of having been the first woman elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. In addition to three journeys round the world, she has personally conducted more than one African expedition, and has traveled alone on the Congo. Mrs. Workman, too, has accomplished wonders among the Himalayas—where she and her husband, in 1903, attained an altitude of 23,394 feet—and Miss Gordon-Cumming has also climbed many of the almost inaccessible peaks among the mountains of Northern India and Thibet.

He Started Young.

"The Baby" is the nickname which has been bestowed upon Lord Winterton, because he was only a few months over twenty-one when he was returned as M.P. for Horsham. "The Baby" is one of the best shots in the House. He has just returned from a big game expedition in the Soudan.

Not an Infallible Method.

"I diagnose all my cases from the patient's eyes," said a doctor emphatically. "Now, your right eye tells me that your liver is affected." "Excuse, me, doctor," the patient remarked, "but my right eye is a glass one."

A pain prescription is printed upon each 25c. box of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. Ask your Doctor or Druggists if this formula is not complete. Pain means congestion, blood pressure. Head pains, womanly pains, pain anywhere get instant relief from a Pink Pain Tablet. Sold by all dealers.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

HE COMPROMISED.

A Story John B. Gough Told in His Temperance Lectures.

John B. Gough, the temperance lecturer, was noted as a story teller, and his stories were always well suited to his argument. W. A. Mowry in his "Recollections of a New England Educator" recalls one of them:

Compromise, compromise! What does compromise mean? I will tell you. A colored man met a friend one day and said:

"Sambo, Sambo, do you know dat yoder night I was sorely tempted? You know I used to steal. Well, since I j'ined de church I stopped stealing, but you know Mr. Jonsing's shoe store? Well, yoder night I was in dat shoe store, and I looked on de shelf and I see a pair of boots, jes' de nicest pair of boots—jes' my size, No. 14.

"Dere was de debil, and he say, 'Take 'em, take 'em.' Den de Lord say, 'Let 'em alone; dat's stealin'.' But I wanted dem boots; mine all out at de bottom and sides. Dere was de debil and me, and we both say, 'Take 'em.' But de Lord say, 'Don't you take 'em; dat's stealin'.' Now, dere was a clear majority of two against one.

"Jes' den Mr. Jonsing he leab de store, and he leab me all alone. Den de debil say, 'Take 'em quick and skedaddle.' I could take dem boots and chuck 'em under my coat and go right away an' Mr. Jonsing would neber know nottin' about it. But, bress de Lord, I 'stood de temptation! I compromised and took a pair of shoes instead."

HER LOST COAT.

The Sequel to a Ladies' Afternoon Card Party.

A number of women were putting on their wraps preparatory to going home from an afternoon card party in the upper residence district of New York one afternoon last winter when a valuable fur coat belonging to one of them could not be found. There was, however, another fur coat of inferior quality in the dressing room, which the hostess said had evidently been left by mistake by the woman who had taken the other garment. The available coat was taken away by the woman whose wrap was missing in the hope that the mistake would be rectified without much trouble.

Several days passed, and no claim was made for the coat the guest had worn away from the house, and the woman took it to a dealer, where her garment had been purchased, hoping that some mark on the substituted coat might be found by which the owner could be identified. The plan was successful, and, much to her amazement, she discovered that the inferior coat was the property of her card hostess.

The "lost" coat was found, and on its return the matter was to be hushed up, but the promise of silence was evidently poorly kept. No more invitations for afternoon card parties have been issued from the house where the "mistake" was made.

Maori Women.

Maori women of New Zealand know nothing about kissing. Nose rubbing is their form of salutation, and when two friends meet they hold each other by their hands, bend their heads until their noses touch and then rub them gently from side to side. This form of greeting is not confined to the women, but is practiced by the men. They seldom meet without rubbing noses. In times of lamentation the Maori women will sit for hours with their noses touching and moan for the loss of some chief whom they have in all probability never seen. The loss of a brother or friend is enough to start them off for days, all moaning and howling piteously. They are essentially a sympathetic race, and the sorrows of one are the sorrows of all.

Too Good to Waste.

A churchgoer and a backslider met on the hillside. The churchgoer was bound double quick for the church at the foot. The backslider, oddly enough, was going up.

"Hi! You're going the wrong way!" called the churchgoer.

The backslider yelled back, but his answer was lost.

"Say," he demanded of the churchgoer the next day, "did you hear what I said?"

"No."

"Well, it's too good to waste. You said I was going the wrong way. I said you seemed to be going downhill pretty fast yourself."

Gave Her Room.

A gentleman who had a very large nose while walking in a street in Leeds the other day was subject to a few remarks about it. The height of impudence, however, was reached when a woman stopped a few yards in front of him apparently to have a good look at it. The gentleman also stopped and, taking hold of his nose with his finger and thumb, pushed it on one side and calmly said:

"Now, then, mimum, can you pass now?"

She went on.—London Tit-Bits.

A Pair of Bulls.

ALFRED COONEY.

THE LANDLORD'S MISTAKE.

An American's Experience in an English Country Inn.

An American was journeying through England and encountered in a certain town a rather pretentious inn, at which he ordered turbot, a favorite dish in those parts.

The American had had a few days of dense fog, and his appearance and manner perhaps showed that he had become a little wheezy in consequence of the climate. He was indeed forced to have frequent recourse to his handkerchief.

When the turbot was brought the guest fancied, even before it reached his plate, that it was no longer fresh, and an attempt to eat it confirmed that impression. He called the proprietor, who at once sent a waiter for fresh turbot and removed the objectionable dish.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the innkeeper, "but we got the idea, sir, as you came in that you 'ad a bad cold in your 'ead, sir."

"And suppose I had? What could that have to do with my being served spoiled fish?" demanded the indignant traveler.

"Hevery think, sir. We 'as this rule in this 'ouse: Fish as is a leetle doubtful, like that 'ere, sir—them which 'as lost the flavor of youth, as I may say—them we serves to parties as appears to 'ave colds in their 'eads, sir, and we finds that, bein' as such parties can't smell nothink, they likes the fish just as well, sir, and hoften they prefers 'em."

LONG DELAYED PROPOSAL.

A Note In a Bouquet That Was For Years Unanswered.

One of the longest delayed proposals on record is related in a French story of a shy young subaltern who was ordered away to the wars. Not daring to speak, he sent a nosegay of yellow roses to the girl he loved, with a little note inside begging her if she returned his love to wear one of the flowers in her breast that night at the ball. She appeared without it, and he went away broken hearted.

Years afterward, when he was a lame old general, he again met his old love, now a white haired widow. One day his old sweetheart gently asked him why he had never married. "Madam," he answered somewhat sternly, "you ought to know best. If you had not refused to answer that note in the bouquet of yellow roses I might have been a happier man." "The note in the bouquet?" she repeated, growing pale.

She opened an old cabinet and took out from a drawer a shriveled bouquet of what had been yellow roses, among whose leafless stalks lurked a scrap of paper yellow with age. "See! I never had your note," she said, holding the bouquet up. "If I had, I would not have answered it as you fancied." "Then answer it now," said the gallant old soldier. And the long delayed proposal was accepted at last.—London Telegraph.

Where Widows Commit Suicide.

Old customs die very hard in China, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, and in several parts of the Celestial empire it is still considered a high act of virtue for a woman to commit suicide after the death of her husband. According to the law, the proceeding is actually legal in some provinces, and such is the state of public opinion that in districts where it is officially prohibited the authorities rarely interfere. These extraordinary voluntary sacrifices may frequently be seen, and I myself saw one take place. The widow herself, clad in white, the Chinese mourning color; the gallows erected for the occasion and the immense crowd gathered to witness the gruesome spectacle made a picture which I shall never forget.

Crushing a Snob.

There is an anecdote of the earlier years of King Edward VII. which gives an interesting side light on his loyalty to his friends. It was in the billiard room of a private house in London where the then Prince of Wales had been dining. The royal guest was about to help himself to a cigar from a buffet when a nouveau riche, pushing forward, extended his cigar case, saying, "Try one of mine, sir; they are much better." The prince replied, with his proverbial urbanity, "My dear, sir, if my host's dinner is good enough for me his cigars certainly are too."

Invite each person to bring some article which is undesirable to its owner. Have each article neatly wrapped and made as deceptive in appearance as possible. At a given signal each guest exchanges his article for one belonging to some one else. He takes it to a secluded corner and opens it. If he finds he does not want to keep it, he neatly wraps it again and exchanges it until he is satisfied. This makes lots of fun.—National Food Magazine.

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

DANGERS OF NEGLECTING A SORE.

Zam-Buk SAVED HIS HAND!

WHEN TORN BY TROLLEY ROPE.

Working men and women throughout the Dominion find that Zam-Buk is the greatest boon they can have as a healer of accidental cuts, burns, and bruises, as well as skin diseases. Mr. H. G. Purchase, conductor on the Toronto Street Railway, tells how this great herbal balm benefited him when he met with his accident.

The trolley pole of his car slipped off the live wire, and the rope was caught in the standard. Purchase held on to the rope until his hand was pulled up to the top of the car. There it was held, and the rope, pulled through his fingers by the force of the moving car, tore and lacerated to a shocking extent three fingers, tearing several pieces of flesh completely away. Zam-Buk was applied, and eased the pain very quickly. Writing in this effect, Mr. Purchase says:—

"I had previously had experience of the healing power of Zam-Buk, and the way it soothes cuts and injuries. I, therefore, bound the fingers in Zam-Buk, and it was most gratifying the way in which this balm soothed the pain. Two days after the accident the wounds were closed, and new skin was beginning to form over the top. Each day I dressed the wounds with Zam-Buk, and I am now back again at work with the hand as sound as ever. To look at it you would never know it had been so terribly torn and lacerated.

"I do not think there is anything to equal Zam-Buk as a healer of skin injuries and diseases."

WHAT YOU SHOULD USE ZAM-BUK FOR.

Zam-Buk cures pimples, skin-eruptions, bcils, cuts, piles, festered sores and wounds, blood-poisoning, rash, ringworm, scalp sores, ulcers, abscesses, bad legs, chapped hands, old wounds, eczema, and all skin diseases. asking him about the first interview he had with the defendant after the latter's return from the Philippines. The district attorney went into this conversation in detail again with the view of showing that each separate act of the defendant at that time was not necessarily irrational.

"Did your brother wear eyeglasses when you met him after his return from the Philippines?" asked Mr. Dewitt.

"As I remember he carried them, but did not have them on at the time," replied the witness.

"Was it his custom to wear them?"

"He wore them off and on."

"Do you know when he stopped wearing glasses?"

"I don't know that he has stopped wearing them," the major replied.

It is contended by the prosecution that Captain Hains' wearing glasses since the shooting, is because of his near-sightedness this would account in a manner for the peculiar stare in the defendant's eyes which has been referred to repeatedly by witnesses for the defense.

Penny Savings Banks May be Established in Peterborough

Mr. Angus McMurchy, K. C., of Toronto, and Mr. Mullholland, of Port Hope, Speak in Favor of the Move—Local Gentlemen Also Favor It—Good for Children

In all probability the penny savings bank will be established in connection with the Peterborough schools. The advantages of the bank in teaching thrift among the children were forcibly placed before the members of the Board of Education and the teaching staff by Mr. Angus McMurchy, K.C., of Toronto, and Mr. Mullholland of Port Hope, last night. Several local gentlemen spoke afterward and all were very strongly in favor of adopting the system. the addresses delivered on the question are given below;

Mr. McMurrich of Toronto, C.P.R. solicitor, expressed his appreciation at so large an attendance at the gathering which was in the interests of education of the young. Mr. Mullholland congratulated the city upon its splendid schools and congratulated the teachers in having such fine quarters in which to carry on their work. This subject of thrift has been dwelt with by many eminent men. The success of nations and the strength of character depends upon thrift. He asked if it was not a good thing to have the young children educated in thrift, a lesson which can only be learned when young or at great expense when older. In this city are found all the places for catching the pennies, nickles and dimes that are to be found in the larger cities, and the children are carried away and their money is gone, and the opportunity to purchase something useful is gone. There are today deposited in the savings banks no less than $110,000. This was started by two Peterborough men. The first was Mr. D. J. McDonald in 1877. The speaker paid a high tribute to the late Mr. McDonald. The first year the bank was started the deposits amounted to over $500. Many a home has been built through the savings of the children, who put their money in the penny bank. The second Peterborough gentleman to figure in this movement was Mr. Chas. E. Clarke, of Clarke & Clarke. He started the penny bank in three of Toronto's public schools. The career of the penny bank was traced and the rapidly growing success of the system was mentioned. It was in 1903 that the Penny Bank was given its charter. In Toronto they have not lost a dollar and they have had three-quarters of a million dollars' transactions, and they have today between $4000 and $5000 of a surplus. The penny bank is in all Public schools in Toronto, and in many other institutions. Banks are also started in seven or eight cities in Ontario. In Port Hope the bank has been opened for about two years, and they have about $1000 on deposit. This proposition is one worthy of the most serious consideration of all Ontario. It is backed by the banks and by the leading financial men.

Local bankers will tell you that there is an immense amount of money wasted. For instance the 5-cent show is cutting down the deposit in the Toronto schools, but the teachers are fighting it. The 5-cent theaters are taking an immense amount of money which should be saved. A fact that is worthy of consideration is that most of the 5-cent theaters are kept up by the class of people who can ill afford to spend it.

Teach the children to save money so that they may have it for their own necessities and masters of their own souls.

The speaker gave many instances of how the penny savings had worked great good among the individual boys in the Toronto schools. Then was taken up some of the objections that have been advanced against the system, and the next part taken up was the system of depositing the money each day.

Mr. Mullholland of Port Hope, expressed his appreciation at being present at this meeting, and he also expressed his appreciation of the entertainment they had received at the hands of the local Board of Education. He also referred to the splendid school buildings. They have the penny bank in Port Hope, and he gave a list of reasons why he thought it was a good thing for any town and for the children. The penny bank is a great benefit to the wage earner.

Mr. D. W. Dumble stated that he had every sympathy with the subject before the meeting. He said he had very decided ideas upon the training of children to bring their ideas up along the proper line. He spoke of several instances in his experience with boys and girls given to extravagance. He thought the penny banks would teach the children the habit of self-denial. All this town wants is the habit of self-denial. If the school does not teach the habits which is going to make happy the lives of the future men and women in their homes, the education is a failure. He was greatly in favor of the adoption of the system of helping the boys and girls to get together their little coins.

Rev. Father McColl said he had listened with a great deal of pleasure to the three addresses. We have not a thrifty class of people in this city. As a matter of fact we have an extravagant class. Our young people are not thrifty. Young men who are making big wages are spending it all. The habits formed in youth are very lasting. If the habit of thrift is formed when young it will be a great asset in the future.

Chairman L. M. Hayes, K.C., on behalf of himself and Board of Education, thanked the teachers of the Collegiate and Public schools for attending this meeting.

Mr. A Mowat favored the scheme, and stated on behalf of the teachers that if the board decided to establish the penny banks they would do their duty.

Mr. R. Blair spoke in favor of the scheme. He then moved that Messrs. McMurrich and Mullholland be thanked for their addresses and that this matter be referred to the Supervision Committee and act in conjunction with the Separate School Board and school inspector. Mr. H. E. seconded the motion.

The Kinrade Inquest is Completed, Verdict was Given Last Night

Ethel Kinrade Died of Bullet Wounds Caused by Some Person, Unknown Unknown to the Jury—"If You Can Catch That Man Who Chased That Girl from Portsmouth to Hamilton, You Have The Murderer," Said Jimmy Baum.

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, May 4.—"We the jury assembled to enquire into the death of Ethel Kinrade, hereby find that she met her death from shot wounds inflicted by some person or persons unknown to the jury. Owing to the unreliability of some of the evidence produced the Crown is especially requested to continue this investigation and we also desire to express our hearty appreciation of the able and courteous and kind manner in which this investigation has been conducted by Coroner Anderson and the counsel for the Crown."

The foregoing verdict was brought in brought at 11.30 after one and a half hour's deliberation, thus ending the inquest which was without parallel with respect to duration and the herculanean efforts put forth by the Crown to elucidate the mystery of the tragedy which caused the end of Ethel Kinrade at her home, 105 Herkimer street, on Feb. 25th last.

The courtroom was packed again when the enquiry was opened. Coroner Anderson was on the bench at 7.30, but neither the Crown nor the Kinrade family were represented. Mr. Lynch-Staunton arrived at 7.45, but owing to a conference between the Crown and the family counsel, it was 8.35 before the hearing was resumed.

JIMMY BAUM.

Jimmy Baum was called and he stepped nervously into the box.

"You Live in Virginia?"

"Yes. Portsmouth."

In the early stages of this unfortunate affair said Mr. Blackstock, your name was mentioned in connection therewith?"

"Yes."

As to his connection with the Orpheum Theater witness said he was engaged in 1908 to get plays on the stage. This was before Florence appeared on the scene. He was introduced to her by Mr. Butler about the middle of May, and was instructed to instruct her on stage manners. He was there two and a half months and saw Miss Kinrade every day and every night including Sunday. From May 15 to the end of July she was at Norfolk going there nearly every day.

"Was she singing in any church in Richmond or Manchester?" asked Mr. Blackstock.

"Not to my knowledge."

Asked if Florence had told him that she was a married woman, the witness replied, "Yes. She told me she had been forced to marry a man twice her age, and that she had been divorced. He could not say when this was, but said she came South to get away from him."

"Anything about her fearing him?"

"She said he was trying to get her to go back with him."

"Did she say anything about her feelings towards you?"

"Not just then, but she did a little later."

"Did you understand it as a joke?"

"No, I did not."

Miss Kinrade had imparted to witness that Ethel had said she got rid of one husband, but could no get rid of another, and that she had to marry Wright. She also told him that Ethel had nothing to do with the former marriage tha. it was the father and mother who were responsible.

Baum believed that the flowers sent to Miss Kinrade with a card on at the theater one night and which caused him considerable discomfort had been sent by her husband. Baum said Florence had used a revolver in one sketch. Florence always acted queerly and she shed bitter tears for no cause that he knew of. She told him her father was a judge in Toronto and later that he was a college professor in Hamilton.

Getting down to love affairs, Baum said he certainly thought he was engaged to her when she came home last December. They were to meet in New York in the spring and get married, and then go on the stage. She did not care for Wright, and witness did not think there was any joke about the affair.

In conclusion Jimmy said;

"If you jurymen think this girl committed the murder you are all wrong. If you can find the man who followed her from Portsmouth to Hamilton you will have the murderer of that little girl. If you can patch the party who chased her from Portsmouth to Hamilton, you will get the man who killed her sister by mistake. 'Taint that little girl!"

Detective Pandar described his investigations in Virginia, and Chas. Peebles also gave evidence.

In addressing the jury, Mr. Blackstock said he was never before engaged in any court that had been conducted with more dignity and fairness than had been this court. In this case the Crown had no theory. No person was on trial although the evidence would indicate that some person was liable to criminal proceedings.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents, large size 50 cents.

They had to pay Smith, their drain man the above sum which costs on an order from Judge Wedler. Messrs. MacGregor & Reid, now ask the Board to settle with them and save further proceedings.

HOW TO TELL

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore,—that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, color bleaches, spirits droop.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"When I was so stooped and back weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharp twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles, and joints lack of appetite, and loss of sleep, touch the same. Cure the kidneys. Use Dr Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands. 25c at all dealers.

Mr. Richard McCallum

A well known citizen of Stirling, Ont., cured of Chronic Catarrh and irritable throat by Catarrhozone.

A remarkable cure, exciting great interest in Stirling, which, if possible, adds to the popularity of Catarrhozone as a cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis and Throat Trouble.

Catarrh is one of the most disagreeable and at the same time hardest to cure diseases. This was been Mr. McCallum's experience:

"For many years" he writes, "I have suffered from Catarrh, and continually hawked and coughed, so that my throat was always in an inflamed irritable condition.

"Doctor's medicine did not help me in the least, and all other remedies I used were quite useless. In one case it was thought I was smelling powder up the nose; in another under a greasy statement, and so on. Not one of them was the least bit of good.

"I heard Catarrhozone favorably spoken of and tried a sample, and it really benefitted me more in a few hours than years of statement with doctors.

"Reading such immense benefit from the sample size, I got the complete outfit, large Hard Rubber Inhaler, etc., and but a few weeks of its use completely cured me of Catarrh and throat trouble.

"I recommend Catarrhozone as the most satisfactory Catarrh remedy on the market. Every word said about it is true.

(Signed) "Richard McCallum."

Now perhaps you need a remedy like Catarrhozone. It is the only treatment that is applied locally as well as constitutionally. The inhaler clears the air passages, stops hawking and spitting, and purifies the breath.

The Permanent Tablets, which are used in conjunction with Catarrhozone Inhaler, drive all the poisons from the blood and build up the system to a healthy, vigorous condition.

The complete outfit costs $1 at all druggists; trial size 25c., by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Buy Catarrhozone to-day.

YOUNG TURKS' VICTORY

The victory of the Young Turks over the reactionary Sultan is held up as an illustration of the superiority of force to reason. It is true that the friends of freedom have not been able to dispense with the sword, and will have to wield it for many years to come. At the same time the long reign of reaction and bloodshed in Turkey was due, not to the vagaries of advocates of peace and reason, but to the signal failure of the European powers to use their enormous armaments for any beneficent purpose.

The continent of Europe is the place in which the glories of militarism are most brilliantly displayed. Each nation is armed to the teeth against its neighbors. Concerted action by the gigantic armies of France, Germany and Austria would have made massacres and other atrocities as impossible in Turkey as they would be on Fleet street. But in this or any other case where the huge armies of Europe might conceivably be used to promote order, civilization, and humanity, they are absolutely useless. The European system of militarism stands condemned not only by what it does, but by what it fails to do. It does not govern Europe. Its drills are not order and good government, but anarchy and bloodshed.

Living in this European middle the Young Turks were, of course, obliged to resort to physical force, just as a sane man might have to do in a madhouse, or a den of thieves, or a jungle full of wild beasts. That fact does not mean that we should glorify the moralities of the jungle or the madhouse. It should rather be a stimulus to all those who are striving to bring about in international affairs those methods which protect peaceful and law-abiding people in civilized countries.

In Turkey a body of enthusiastic reformers have accomplished what the great European powers have signally failed to do. They used physical force, it is true, but their inspiration was not thirst for military glory, but enthusiasm for freedom and humanity. Only by that enthusiasm will the world make progress.

As long as the manner created by the military caste of Europe continues, even peace-loving nations must be armed and prepared. A condition, not a theory, confronts them, that they need never lose sight of the ideal for which they are striving—a world in which the military and naval forces of the world will be police forces, not fighting one another, but making common cause against the common enemies of mankind.

Lost or Damaged Freight

The Canadian Freight Association Seeking to Lessen the Evil.

To prevent the trouble and expense caused by freight being lost or damaged in transit the Canadian Freight Association is circulating amongst the freight agents of the different railways an illustrated booklet which shows why freight is lost or damaged, and how this source of loss can be avoided. In the brochure a strong point is made of the absolute necessity for having all freight shipped in proper shape and plainly addressed.

Amongst other things that freight men and shippers should remember the booklet makes the following points:—

"Shippers and consignees blame the carrier when a shipment of freight fails to reach destination or is delivered to consignee in a damaged condition. But a small number stop to think it is more their fault than the carrier's. In the beginning, the fundament rule of carriers in accepting merchandise was the requiring of each package to be plainly marked, showing full name of consignee and destination. From a willingness to oblige patrons this vital requirement has been so far "side-tracked," so to speak, that it is not unusual for boxes, bales, bundles and pieces to be accepted without any marks. Couple to the disappearance of full marks came the gradual decline in the strength of packages in which goods are shipped. Boxes and packs are made of thinner material, crates are substituted for boxes, and sacks are now being used by some shippers for articles which should not be shipped in them. To insure the prompt and safe delivery of goods it is necessary for the shipper to plainly mark each and every package, bundle or piece of an less carload shipment, showing this information; Consignee's name in full; bill of lading destination in full; state in which destination is located; if more than one station in same state of same name, full name of county must be shown; all previous shipping marks must be obliterated. The name of consignee and destination must be legibly written or stenciled, and as far away from any other writing or marks as possible. It is a great help to all when shipper's name and location are also shown, with the word "from" preceding them.

Every package, bundle or piece offered for shipment should be presented to carrier in condition to stand the wear and tear not only via all rail routes, but also the additional handling incidental to transportation via rail and water routes.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success in leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jennie, Yonger Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Bella, Savoy, Richenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lone Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $1928.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and what would cost them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 57 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chinsmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500. for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 65 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 300 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immediate shafts already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 15c cash or 1-6 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

NEW PRO-CONSULS.

King's New Viceroys in the Various Colonies of the Empire.

It has been officially stated that the King has made the following appointments: Sir William MacGregor, G.C.M.G., C.B., governor of Newfoundland, to the governor of Queensland in the place of Lord Chelmsford, K.C.M.G., who has been appointed governor of New South Wales, where he succeeds the popular Sir Harry Holdsworth Rawson. Sir Ralph Williams, K.C.M.G., governor of the Windward Islands, to be governor of Newfoundland in the place of Sir William MacGregor; Lieut.-Col. Sir James Hayes Sadler, K.C.M.G., C.B., governor of the East African Protectorate, to be governor of the Windward Islands; and Sir Gerald Strickland, K.C.M.G., governor of Tasmania to be governor of Western Australia in the place of Admiral Sir Frederick Bedford, G.C.B. These changes are not of a startling nature, and it may be safely said will not lead to any serious radical events in the colonies in which these British pro-consuls rule as wise and justly.

Sir William MacGregor, who is Scotch born, has had extensive experience of administrative work in the Pacific, and he has been a great success in Newfoundland for the last five years. More than 30 years have passed since he played a great part in the rescue of a hospital of Indian coolies near Fiji, a feat of heroism which gained him the Albert medal from Queen Victoria and the Clarke gold medal from Australia.

Sir Ralph Williams, who is coming to Newfoundland, has seen a good deal of the world in his fifty-odd years. He will be specially welcomed by newspapermen, as for years he was special correspondent for The London Standard, more especially in connection with the Bechuanaland Expedition led by that great (and still believed, in by many well advised circles) the now deposed Sir Charles Warren, who only lost Spion Kop by a fluke after the greatest naturally born attack in the South African war, and which, if he had won, would have cut down the South African war by at least one-half of the time and money expended.

Shackleton No Piedder.

Great rejoicing has been caused at Alleyn's College, Dulwich, England, about the success of Lieut. Shackleton, an old Alleynian, who went to the school in May, 1898, and left after three years of Dulwich life. Every boy subscribed a halfpenny towards a congratulatory telegram. A special half-holiday was given in Lieutenant Shackleton's honor.

The explorer's old form master, Mr. Escott, said: "He never rose high in the school, or applied himself seriously to his books, but his merits were always recognized as being out of all proportion to his place in form. He was considered rather delicate. He left too young, for he was not yet sixteen years old, to distinguish himself in athletics. He was, I think, in the Upper Third at the time.

"He was always full of energy, but never could put his nose to the grindstone—a rolling stone gathering no moss, but a lively and very pleasant fellow."

Lieutenant Shackleton was born in Ireland. At the age of seventeen he went to sea, and after several years in the mercantile service took part in the transhipment of the British troops to South Africa at the time of the war. He went with Captain Scott on the voyage of the Discovery, and on his return acted as secretary to the Royal Geographical Society of Scotland.

Veteran Peer Dead.

No less than four members of that institution much loved in some circles and most hated and execrated in others, viz., the House of Lords, have crossed the Rubicon. The peers whose deaths have to be recorded recently are Lord Gwydyr, for and away the oldest member of the House of Lords; Earl Egerton of Tatton, who for years did considerable hard work for the Conservative party in both Houses; the Earl of Howth, K.P., a grand specimen of the right type of Irish landlord and last but not least the Earl of Hardwicke, a member of the late Balfour administration who died in the full prime of his powers.

Lord Gwydyr, under which picturesque title Peter Robert Burrell has sat for so many years in the House of Lords, had the unique position of any peer in the Upper House, that of having served under and being present at the coronation of not less than four monarchs of the House of Hanover, viz., George IV., William IV., the late Queen Victoria and the present King. At the time of his death he was closely approaching on his hundredth year, having been born in 1810. He is succeeded by his only son, the Hon. Willoughby Merrik Campbell, who has already attained the fairly venerable age of 68.

Mr. Balfour's Mistake.

Mr. Balfour was once travelling down from the north of Scotland, and at a junction some little way from Aberdeen got out to walk up and down while awaiting the connection of the trains. The weather was bright and very cold, and stamping his feet and rubbing his hands to get warm, Mr. Balfour called out to a friend a little way off, "Isn't this invigorating?" "Na, sir," said a railway porter who was passing and heard the remark, "it's Inverarnay."

A Scottish Poet.

Mr. Alex. Anderson, librarian of Edinburgh University, is one of the most accomplished of living Scottish poets. Mr. Anderson is famous north of the Tweed as a writer over the signature of "Surfaceman." He chose this nom-de-plume because for many years he worked as a surfaceman on the railway. He is almost entirely self-educated, and has a knowledge of French, German and Italian literature which is quite remarkable.

That Not Again.

She—"Indeed?"

He—"Yes; so much happier than if I sat behind you."

THE EARTH'S MOTIONS

How We Are Whirling Around and Through Space.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE SUN.

Without Its Attraction That Draws the World Toward It in an Elliptical Course Our Globe Would Wander on Forever in a Straight Line.

There are those who think much of moving from one point to another of the earth—travel, they call it—and yet pay little heed to the wonderful journey of the earth itself. Many, again, go to seek a climate while the hurrying earth is bringing to them one climate after another in endless succession. Those who have not hitherto taken much notice of the earth's progress—who have not, so to speak, looked out of their carriage window as they are whirled along—might find a new interest in doing so. Look, for example, at the apparent size of the sun. Casual observation shows that it appears larger in the winter heavens. And exact measurements tell us that it is largest on Jan. 1 and smallest on July 2. The size of the sun thus marks the earth's nearest approach and greatest distance from the sun. Accurate astronomical measurement of the sun's diameter might even determine the day of the year, for the daily variation in the apparent size of the sun is some nine-fiftieths of a second of angular measurement. And astronomers profess to measure the second decimal of seconds.

There are three ways in which we are journeying with the earth. There is, first, the daily revolution, which carries us through a complete circle in twenty-four hours at a rate varying from rather more than a thousand miles an hour at the equator to nothing at the poles, where no one, by the way, has ever been. Then we are traveling around the sun once a year at the rate of eighteen miles a second. Thirdly, we are journeying through stellar space, for one of the most remarkable facts which modern astronomy has brought to light is that our solar system, the sun with all its planets, is on a journey toward the constellation Lyra at the rate of ten miles a second.

As we sit in a train and are whirled along it sometimes appears as if the scenery were flying past us rather than we past it. So the daily revolution of the earth—a thousand miles an hour at the equator—makes the sun rise and set, and our yearly journey makes the sun apparently travel through the constellations of the zodiac. If we move round any stationary object on the earth we see it with a constantly changing background—now a windmill, now a cottage, now a wood, now a church, etc. So as we travel round the sun we see it with an ever changing background of stars—now those of Aries, now of Taurus, now of Gemini, and so on. The position of the sun among the stars marks the stages of the earth's annual journey. And as the earth arrives at different points of its orbit the times of the risings of certain stars vary. These indications of the earth's progress have been taken as marks of the seasons. Thus when Sirius rose with the sun it was known that the dog days had began. Early astronomers watched carefully for the rising of the dog star. The Egyptian astronomers looked for the helical rising of Sothis to proclaim the new year.

It is the earth's yearly journey round the sun which enables us to determine the distances of the stars. The method is precisely that adopted by surveyors for determining the position of objects on earth. The direction of the object whose distance is to be found is observed from two points a known distance apart. The rest is mere calculation. In the case of the stars the directions are observed from two extreme points in the earth's orbit instead of from the two ends of a base line. The process is called triangulation when applied to earth measurements, and everybody understands what it means. When applied to the stars it is called parallax and remains a mystery to most people. Such is the obscuring power of a word.

The "little more" and the "little less" of Browning are forcibly illustrated in the direction of the earth's journey round the sun. An elliptic course differing very little from a circle, combined with a tilt of the axis, gives us the seasons. But if this difference and tilt did not exist there would be no seasons and one climate would rule the year. If, again, the course were more elliptic, then for the hemisphere whose winter occurred at the earth's greatest distance from the sun there might be a glacial period.

"The straight line," says Miss Helen Keller, "symbolizes duty. It is a dull thought drawn out endlessly." And this seems to be a reflection on what we had thought was the earth's path of duty round the sun, for this path is the curve known as the ellipse. Moreover, the thought makes the sun a tempter of the earth from the strict path of duty, for the earth, we learn from our Newton, if left to itself would wander on forever through space in a straight line. It is the sun which draws it from this dull course into the pleasant curve of subjection. Yet the sun's victory is only partial, the earth's actual path being a combination of its own straight line of inclination and obedience to the pull of the sun. And so instead of the "dull thought drawn out endlessly" we have the beautiful thought of the changing seasons, the flowers and fruits of the earth, with its ever varying weather, sunshine and storm, heat and cold.

Lease of Water Powers

Province of Quebec.

Notice is hereby given that the case of the two groups of water-powers below mentioned, will be offered for public auction in the sales' room of the department of Lands and Forests, in this city, on Tuesday, the 11th May next, at 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon.

The lease will be for seventy-five years on the terms below stipulated and on such other conditions as will be made known to the public on the day of the auction.

1. The "Kai-Kai-Ke" group (River des Quinze).

Description; —The water-powers created by the Kai-Kai-Ke rapid and the other rapids and falls situated above it as far as Lake des Quinze, in the county of Pontiac, at about 25 miles from the Indian Village of North Temiscamingue to which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains at Temiscamingue ascend; also four hundred acres of land in the vicinity of the said rapid and of the Kai-Kai-Ke portage, from the head of the said rapid to a line drawn across the river des Quinze, at nine hundred feet above the entry of the channel called "Bryson Creek," together with all the lands that may be flooded in consequence of the construction of the dams intended to submerge the rapids above that of Kai-Kai-Ke and to Lake des Quinze exclusively, without such dams causing any portion whatever of the waters of River des Quinze to overflow into some other stream.

Total head, 98 feet; absolute power at low water, 32,000 horse-power, without warranty of exact measurement.

The lessee shall be obliged to expend a sum of $250,000 on the development of the said water-powers within the three years following the passing of the lease, in default whereof the lease shall be cancelled and the payments made confiscated.

2. "Island Rapids," group (River des Quinze).

Description; — The water-powers formed by the rapids known under the name of "Big Pipe Stone," "Little Pipe Stone" and "Islands Rapids," in the same county, at about eight miles from North Temiscamingue, to which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains of Temiscamingue ascend, including; 1. The bed and the water-powers of the River des Quinze, properly so called from a line drawn across that river at nine hundred feet above the entry or head of "Bryson Creek," to the prolongation across the said river of the division line of ranges 7 and 8 of the township of Guigues; 2. The bed and the water powers of "Bryson Creek," channel or arm of the said river; 3. The large island between the river des Quinze, properly so called and the said "Bryson Creek," as well as all the islands and fore shores and all the islets and rocks in the said river and said "Bryson Creek," between the two lines above described; 4. A strip of land of 10 chains (660 feet) in width or depth (measured in a due north and south direction) along northern bank of the river des Quinze and of "Bryson Creek" and extending between the two lines above described; 5. Lastly, a strip of land also of 10 chains in width or depth, along the southern bank of the river des Quinze, between the two said lines drawn transversely to the river.

All these lands, bed of the river des Quinze, bed of Bryson Creek, islands, etc., covering a superficies of about 2000 acres.

The difference of level in the river des Quinze between the two lines above described is 95 feet in round numbers representing at low water, an absolute power of 32,000 horse-power, the whole without warranty of exact measurement.

The lessee shall be obliged to expend $300,000 on the development and working of these hydraulic powers within a delay of three years from the date of the passing of the lease under pain of resiliation of the lease and the confiscation of any payment made in the said delay.

The government binds itself to not sell for ten years from this any lands on the banks of the river des Quinze on a width or depth of at least fifteen chains (990 feet) beyond the lands above designated, from the foot of the rapids called "Island Rapids" to Lake des Quinze exclusively, so that the lessee may, at all points of the bank have free access to the river and that he may choose within that area the lands necessary for the full working of the said water-powers, which lands, whose superficies—including that of the lands mentioned in the above descriptions—shall not exceed 2500 acres for the "Island Rapids" group, and 2000 acres for the "Kai-Kai-Ke" group, shall also form part of the property leased.

The upset price shall be fixed on the day of the auction and each person desirous of becoming a bidder, must deposit at the Department of Lands and Forests before the sale, an accepted cheque for $10,000 which will be returned to him after the sale, unless he be the person to whom the property will be adjudged; to this person the paid sum of $10,000 will be refunded when he shall have given proof of complete compliance with the conditions prescribed as to the development of the said water-powers, which compliance must be effected within the six months following the date of the lease.

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

GOW GANDA Silver, Silver, Silver World's Richest Camp. GOW GANDA

MAC GREGOR SYNDICATE

This district promises better than Cobalt did—Cobalt has been heralded as the world's Greatest Silver Camp. Although in its infancy Cobalt has paid $11,600,000 in dividends. : : : :

GOW GANDA WILL SURPASS IT

Millions are made in Cobalt by small syndicates who purchased properties and did initial development. Hundreds invested in this way made tens of thousands. Such a chance is now offered at Gow Ganda.

THE MACGREGOR SYNDICATE

Now in Process of Formation. Here Are particulars :

SHARES $100.00 EACH

GOW GANDA

THE INVESTOR'S GREAT CHANCE

The MACGREGOR Syndicate is being formed for $20,000 with shares at $100 each, and will own 120 ACRES (3 claims: M. R 3507 M. R. 3523, M. R. 3524) at the south end of GOW GANDA Lake, right in the midst of valuable discoveries.

Also G. G. 341 at Elkhorn Lake. The vendor reports and guarantees a rich discovery of native silver averaging 500 ozs. to the ton for full length of vein. This means $250 per ton, and is high grade shipping ore.

We consider this claim by itself to be worth, on its guaranteed silver showing, four times the entire capitalization of the Syndicate.

The Syndicate with its large holdings of valuable property will undoubtedly yield large profits to its members. The Syndicate will close within a few days as there is a lively demand for its shares.

When the Syndicate is closed it is proposed to form a company to take over, purchase and operate the three properties. The proposed capitalization of the company will be $2,000,000—a fair capitalization, for 120 acres, located as these properties are—the Syndicate will turn over the properties of the Company for, say, 1,200,000 shares of stock at $1 per share, par value, leaving 800,000 shares in the Treasury of the Company to be sold at 50 cents a share for the installation of the machinery and thoroughly working the properties. This plan would give each holder of shares in the Syndicate 6,000 shares in the company for each share held. It is proposed to place the stock of the Company on the market at 50c a share, and on this basis members of the Syndicate will be entitled to have their stock sold share for share with treasury stock. This would give members of the syndicate $3,000 in cash for each share held in the syndicate, less a brokerage of, say 5 per cent. for selling.

SURFACE SILVER VEINS OF FABULOUS RICHNESS CHARACTERIZES GOW GANDA.

Forty-acre properties that six months ago could have been had for the staking have sold at prices ranging up to $350,000.

It is reasonable to expect that the MACGREGOR properties will be among the richest producers, and the chance of securing an interest should be taken advantage of.

SAFETY—Our confidence in the safety of the investment is expressed in the fact that we have taken shares in the Syndicate. We think it is a first-class investment, and we offer it to careful, conservative men as such, in our belief. We call it an unique opportunity for men of moderate means; that others appreciate it to be so is shown by the keen demand for shares. Send your remittance at once if you want to get in.

All moneys are deposited in the Bank to the credit of the "MacGregor Mines Syndicate" and cannot be withdrawn—only by authority of the Syndicate. Syndicate Shares are absolutely non assessable No personal liability.

THE AMADOR GOLD MINING COMPANY

(Amador Co., California.)

The company owns 220 acres on the famous Mother Lode of California. Has two developed mines adjoining the famous Plymouth mine, which has paid over $9,000,000 in dividends in ten years, millions of dollars' worth of ore blocked out and in sight.

The Company is only offering a moderate block of stock to raise sufficient money to erect a large mill, in order that they can handle 400 tons daily, instead of 40 tons daily—its present capacity.

When the 100 tpd mill is in operation extra dividends will be paid.

This is a proven mine, and you are not buying into a prospect, as dividends are assured for years to come.

This is a conservative and safe investment, investigate before buying.

A limited amount of Treasury stock is being offered for sale at 85 cents per share, and as soon as listed on the Curb will be selling very much higher.

Ald. Buller Advocates Purity Ware, Ltd., By-law The City's New Factory

In speaking of the new factory, the Purity Ware Limited of Peterborough, Ald. Buller last night told The Times that he finds the people are talking seriously about the proposition. He was asked the other day what the proposition was. The enquirer stated that he had heard several reports that were not favorable. Ald. Buller explained the by-law, which was given two readings by the council, and which was published in full in yesterday's Times, and which the people will vote on June 1st. In brief the conditions are as follows;

The city gives a free site of ten acres of land, which in this case cost only $2,000.

The city gives exemption from taxes for ten years, except school tax and local improvement taxes.

The city loans, not given as a few have thought, but loans $50,000 for 20 years at 4 per cent. interest. After the first ten years that loan is paid back in ten annual payments of $5,000 each.

In return for this the company erects a factory 200x100 feet at a cost of not less than $50,000. Machinery is to be installed valued (by an independent valuator) at $100,000 at least.

They will employ to start 100 hands for ten months the first year and 150 hands each year thereafter for 10 years.

They will give the city a first mortgage on the building and fixed machinery to cover the loan.

The company are backed by one of the strongest manufacturing companies in the United States. It is lending its name to the Peterborough Company which is a guarantee that the new factory will be a profitable enterprise.

The company will have a working capital of $100,000 fully subscribed and paid up before work is started so that from a financial point of view there can be no failure.

There are many other good features about this company and Ald. Buller states that he considers it one of the most substantial industries which have recently been organized and Peterborough gets it at comparatively little cost.

There is no more profitable reading than for citizens of Peterborough can find than the by-law and Purity Ware Limited, which is to be voted on next June 1st.

Purity Ware, Limited, are Opening Up Offices

The Purity Ware Limited of Peterborough, the new manufacturing company which is to locate here, have rented offices in the Opera House block. These offices are now being fitted up, and the management of the new concern are expected to arrive any day. The Purity Ware Ltd., is a firm which will manufacture enamel ware, and which will in a couple of years be one of the largest manufacturing establishments in the city.

Mr. Semmith is keenly alive to the best interests of his constituency and it will no doubt benefit accordingly and in no way more than the educational.

The Water High at Stony Lake

Mr. R. W. Grubbe who went up to his cottage at Eel's Creek, Stony Lake, on Saturday, states that the water at Stony Lake is higher this year than he has known for some time past and that considerable damage has been done by the unusual flooding of the islands. At Mount Julian a large gasoline launch, the owner of which is at present unknown, was washed out of a boathouse and was carried out into the lake. It was noticed by some of the residents and rescued, but had a large hole stove in the side and sunk near shore. At "Rockslands" the summer home of Mr. Roxborough of Norwood, a large sailing yacht, which had been turned up on shore for the winter, was carried off, and was drifting up the lake, when it was seen by some people of the Dummer side of the lake, who succeeded in bringing it back to "Rockslands." The water is flowing over the big wharf at Mount Julian and when the boat sailed there on Saturday high rubber boots were necessary to prevent wet feet.

Mr. Thompson of Mt. Julian, reports that during the wind storm of Tuesday a gasoline launch was blown on the shore and a hole knocked in the boat. It is thought that the launch drifted out of a boat house, owing to the high water. The owner of the launch is not known.

Jimmy Baum Met Miss Florence Kinrade and Her Father

Hamilton, May 5.—"God bless them. I'm glad I came up here now," said Jimmy Baum, when he learned the verdict of the inquest last night. He was not present when the coroner read the verdict, and it was about half an hour later when a reporter saw him at the Royal Hotel.

"What did they do," was his anxious enquiry.

"They returned an open verdict," he was told.

"What does that mean?" and when it was explained, he added, "Well, I'm powerful glad of it. God bless them."

Those who have been criticising Jimmy's coming to Hamilton from Virginia have a different opinion of him today. There was nothing the least theatrical about his manner, but the depth of his feeling was shown when he almost broke down at the end of his testimony. "I intend to say some more," he said, "but my voice choked up and I couldn't go on."

PLEASED THE AUDIENCE.

How pleased the audience were with his evidence was shown when something like applause was heard when he referred to Miss Kinrade.

Jimmy is anything but pleased with the bringing forward of the letters which passed between him and Florence Kinrade. He did not know they were in the possession of the detectives until he reached Buffalo, and when he was made aware of the fact he refused to cross the border until Detectives Rogers and Pender promised him that none of them would be read in court unless Miss Kinrade so desired.

"I don't know how they ever got hold of those letters," he said last night. "I certainly did not give them up, and I have an idea who is the responsible party. As soon as I get back home I am going to find out and—"

Here Jimmy stopped, and his usually smiling countenance assumed a stern expression.

"The letters were in a trunk," he said, "and I wouldn't have given them up for the world. I have an idea how Detective Pender secured them, and while I don't blame him a particle, I am going to find out if I can."

MET HER ON STREET.

Yesterday, while out for a stroll, Jimmy came across Florence Kinrade and her father not far from the Kinrade home. The three stopped. Miss Kinrade introduced Jimmy to her father, and they chatted together for some time.

"He certainly is a fine gentleman," was all Jimmy would say, when asked what happened.

Yesterday, also, Jimmy met C. Montrose Wright, Miss Kinrade's finance, and according to report some words passed.

Jimmy and Detective Pender left Hamilton on the ten o'clock train this morning. The detective will accompany him as far as New York, and the rest of the journey to Portsmouth he will travel alone.

"I have an eight-weeks' engagement in the new open-air theater," he said, "and I am glad to be able to go back. Next year I have booked with a vaudeville circuit, and unless present plans miscarry, I will play both here and in Toronto."

Jimmy leaves this country carrying with him the best of feelings for the people he met.

"I certainly do like this place," he said. "I done told them in a letter down home that I would like to live up here, but it's not old Virginia."

The Canadian General Mutual Benefit Society Held Annual At Home

There was a big crowd at the Opera House last night. The occasion was the third annual at home of the Canadian General Electric Company Mutual Benefit Society. This affair is one of the big events of the year for the employes of the Canadian General, and they always turn out in large numbers with their friends and thoroughly enjoy an evening together. The program is given by their own talent, and is then the more appreciated. The talent last night was good. The opening was a series of moving pictures, and other pictures were shown during the evening. The duet by Georgina and Prudence Long, "Do you remember me?" made a great hit. The two pretty little girls sang well and they are right at home on the stage. In the second part Miss Vera Simmons and Master Gordon Ball put on a comic sketch which was exceptionally clever. Both characters were Irish, and they gave Irish songs and Irish step dances. They were encored several times. Gordon Ball also appeared in a comic solo, and was loudly applauded. As a matter of fact he made one of the best Irish characters seen here for a long time. The program throughout was very enjoyable and encores were demanded of all the performers.

Build 23 Warships within Three Years

Victoria, B.C., May 5.—Columns of discussion are published in the Australian and New Zealand newspapers received by the steamer Miowera, regarding the proposals to give Dreadnoughts to Great Britain by New Zealand and some of the Australian States.

Prime Minister Fisher, in an announcement of the Australian government's policy, said that Australians intended to build and man twenty-three warships within three years as an Australian navy, four ocean destroyers and nineteen of the river class of destroyers. Although New South Wales and Victoria had combined to offer a Dreadnought and New Zealand had offered a battleship, the Federal Government did not propose to do so. He considered that Australian's defence was most necessary owing to the problems developing on the Pacific.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success in leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

BASEBALL.

The first baseball game of the season was pulled off yesterday afternoon at the Central school grounds, when the team from St. Peter's school defeated the Central boys by a score of 12 runs to 9. For this time of year the game was interesting and the boys did well. Mr. Wm. O'Brien, principal of St. Peter's school umpired. The return game will probably be played on Friday night on St. Peter's grounds.

Bad Leg for Sixty Years

Zam-Buk Works a Complete Cure.

Mrs. J. Minott, of 196 Thurbers avenue, Providence, Rhode Island, has been cured by Zam-Buk of a bad leg, which had defied all remedies for sixty long years. She says: — "When a child of eight, I was bitten on the leg by a dog. A doctor cauterised the place, but it never healed up soundly, and I have suffered with an ulcerated leg for over sixty years. This occurred in England, and many English doctors tried in vain to heal the sore. At one time I was an in-patient at the East Suffolk Hospital for a long period, and for three years I was in and out of hospitals. I was continually in pain, and the sore would not heal, but continued to discharge. Twelve months ago I came out here to my daughter, and during the voyage I had to keep in my bed. The ship's doctor examined my leg, and gave me a plaster, which I had to take off again, as it made the pain so intense. When I reached my daughter's house, she sent for a medical man, who said nothing could ever do it any good, and although I tried other American doctors, they did me no good. They said my leg would never be well.

"One day my youngest daughter brought home a box of Zam-Buk, and induced me to try it. With the first application I seemed to find ease, and further treatment with Zam-Buk did me so much good that I sent for a proper supply. I kept on with the Zam-Buk treatment, and soon saw that the wound was getting better. The discharge was reduced, and the pain was eased. I persevered with the Zam-Buk, and, to cut a long story short, it effected a cure. It is marvellous to think that, after suffering for sixty years, Zam-Buk has been able to make my leg perfectly sound."

Zam-Buk is a combination of power and purity. Purely herbal, it is superior to all known remedies for chronic sores and wounds, eczema, salt-rheum, ringworm, eruptions, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, skin diseases. It also cures piles. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c. a box, or post-free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Three boxes for $1.25.

Boat to Patrol Trent Waterway

Within the next week or ten days the Provincial Government will put the steamer "Maya" in the Trent waters to protect the fish by preventing illegal methods in fishing.

Capt. Hunter of Belleville, was in the city yesterday in connection with the matter and from the information gained, the "Maya" will make a fine addition to the Trent fleet. It will patrol the whole Trent waterway from Healey's Falls to Lake Simcoe. It is a sixty footer, trim and fast and has been doing duty on the Bay of Quinte. It will be placed on flat cars at one of the lake shore towns and brought to Peterborough.

Town of Wesley, B.C., Wiped Off the Map by Fierce Conflagration

Nelson, May 5.—Fire yesterday almost completely wiped out the little town of Wesley, twenty-five miles west of here, on the boundary.

Only two buildings were left, office and bookhouse belonging to the Yale Columbia Lumber Co. The company's mill, valued at $50,000, a stock of lumber valued at $50,000 more, as well as all the employes' houses and other buildings belonging to the firm, were completely destroyed.

The fire started from a refuse heap, the high wind carrying sparks to the dry sawdust, and spreading to the mill and lumber yards. It broke out at noon hour and reached the engine room before being discovered, rendering the pumps useless.

Has Wiped Out Over 200,000 Lives

Mombasa, British East Africa, May 4.—The Sleeping Sickness Commission is hoping that Theodore Roosevelt will pay a visit to the expedition's camp at Sesse, Uganda, where Sir David and Lady Bruce are in charge of the segregation hospitals.

The governments of Germany, Belgium and France, as well as the government of the United Kingdom, are loyally working together endeavoring to find a cure or preventative for the sleeping sickness. Altogether seven European doctors have succumbed to the fatal disease since the determined attempts to cope with the evil were commenced. Governor Sir Hesketh Bell says;

"It is generally accepted that a variety of the tsetse fly, the Glossina palpalis, is the principal if not the only agent for the transmission of the disease. This fly exists in enormous numbers on the shores of the Victoria Nyanza, and also on the borders of some other lakes and rivers of Uganda. Its habitat, however, is restricted to a narrow belt of forest growth adjoining water, and a width of two miles is believed to be the limit of the infested zones. Out of some 300,000 souls inhabiting the shores of Victoria Nyanza and the islands in the Great Lake, over 200,000 have already been swept out of existence, and it remains to be seen whether the remainder can still be saved.

Princess Chrysanthemum Successfully Presented

The Princess Chrysanthemum was again staged last night at the Conservatory of Music Hall by a clever company under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, who conducted the musical end of it throughout. The operetta was put on under the auspices of the Men's Association of All Saints' church, and it will be repeated this evening again.

The Princess Chrysanthemum is a very successful Japanese operetta by King Proctor. It is pretty and tuneful and gives lots of scope for picturesque effect, while the costumes were attractive and varied. The song hits in it are, "Whether you like it or not," "Tulip," and "The Kitten's Tale." The production was well presented, and Mr. Gliddon deserves much credit for the able manner in which he conducted it.

Appetite Gone—Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter sorely tired her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Waimere, P.O., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headache. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfected. For a good cleaning, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength of every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Insurance Inspectors are Re-arranging the Rates

Peterborough's key rate is to be reduced by the Fire Underwriters' Association. This is the joyful piece of news which was furnished The Times by Chief Hayward of the local fire department last night.

Some time ago the Fire, Water & Light Commission interviewed Mr. John Robinson, secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, and asked that, in view of the improvements made to the city's fire fighting appliances, the key rate for the city be reduced. Mr. Robinson promised then that he would send several inspectors to the city early in June to rearrange the rate. city would get a 5c. reduction.

Three inspectors, Messrs. Perkins, Noble and Boyd arrived in the city Tuesday night and started work in the city yesterday morning. It is up to the business men to give these inspectors a cordial reception as their report means money to Peterborough people.

It is said that the city may get a greater reduction and in individual cases where the improved electric wiring has been adopted, and the fire walls are such as to warrant it, a still further reduction will be made. A reduction of any kind will be gladly received and the more the better.

Keene News

Mrs. Cunningham of Toronto, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Dr. Harrison.

Miss Mabel McCaan of St. Michael's Hospital, was in the village for a couple of days.

Mr. Harry McLachlan was in Peterborough on Monday on business.

Miss Jennie McGregor of Peterborough, was the guest of her sisters on Friday.

Mrs. John Soucie of Peterborough, is having her house in the village lowered about a half story. This will add greatly to the appearance of the property. Mr. R. J. McCarron has the contract of the carpenter work, and Mr. A. Rennie is looking after the stone work.

Mr. Wedlock's yacht was the first steam craft to tie up at our dock this spring. The water is rising steadily and if it continues will soon be up above the highest water mark.

Mrs. Jas. McFarlane has added greatly to the appearance of his property by the erection of a fine stable and drive house combined.

Mr. Duncan McFarlane purchased a fine Karn piano last week. It is doubtful if there are a dozen houses in Keene without pianos in them.

MONEY NO OBJECT

When People are Seeking Health or RELIEF from any DISEASE the Price Never Questions

It is a fact that not less than a million is spent every year by people seeking a satisfactory cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably the best and most highly recommended preparation is Catarrhozone which heads the list of remedies sold for the relief, through inhalation, of these troubles. The poisons in the blood are driven out by Ferrozone, which also tones after each dose. They promote digestion, aid assimilation, and make the blood rich and pure, so that it will nourish all parts of the body.

This combined local and constitutional treatment in catarrhal diseases has met with wonderful success and can be relied upon to cure every time. The inhaler stops sneezing, coughing, dropping in the throat, and brings quick relief and cure to all the disagreeable symptoms of catarrh.

The following testimonials from well-known Canadians furnish abundant proof what Catarrhozone accomplishes in stubborn cases.

Mrs. James Tweedie, of Jay Bridge, says: "For years my daughter doctored unsuccessfully for Catarrh. She had droppings in the throat, hawkings, nausea, and could not sleep at night. The first day's use of Catarrhozone benefitted and ultimately cured my daughter so that Catarrh has never returned. I can recommend Catarrhozone as a grand remedy for Catarrh."

Thousands of strong letters could be given like the above if necessary, but all this is required to prove the merit of Catarrhozone is a trial. It is sure as death to cure and if it fails your money will be refunded. Catarrhozone cured lots of cases worse than yours and can do it again.

IMMIGRATION OF DOMESTICS

Though immigration keeps up, it affords little relief to Canada's overworked housewives. Among the newcomers the women are possibly as numerous as the men, but each of the former so are apt to have the care of homes of their own seem generally to have preferences or qualifications for other than domestic works. Factories and restaurants and like places of employment have an increasing volume of women labor to draw upon, and even in business offices vacancies are being competed for to an increasing extent by young women and girls from abroad. The thousands of Ontario homes where good places and liberal wages await women competent to do housework remain unfilled.

ROD AND GUN FOR MAY

Variety is the dominating feature of the May number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont., in accord with the season there are some good fishing stories, while hunting receives much a full share of attention that moose, deer, bear, wolves and wild geese all have particular stories given up to them. Two fine exploration papers—an illustrated view of Mr. Tyrrell's book, "Through the Sub-Arctics of Canada," and one by Mr. Dickson describing a personal trip through Northern Ontario—give us some little idea of how much remains to be done in exploration work in Canada. Mr. Clapham has another fine dog article, "the Beagle for Sport," which all dog-lovers will peruse with interest. The decision of the Ontario Government to have elected, which is noted and the ery de-dentist dealing with the spotter printed in full. Mr. Oy. Warman's paper on Wild Life appeals to every lover of the outdoors and cannot fail to have some effect in the direction the author wishes. This number completes the tenth volume and attention is drawn to the work of the magazine in Forest, Fish and Game Protection and the manner in which the movement in its favor has spread throughout Canada. The position achieved by the magazine is dwelt upon with pride and credit given to all those who have assisted Canada's sporting magazine to reach its present high position. If future numbers are as good as this birthday issue—and we are assured that not only will the high standard be kept up but efforts made to improve upon it—there can be no doubt at all as to the future of Rod and Gun. The magazine has now secured for itself a position not easily to be shaken.

Discarding Old British Warships.

Another clean sweep of obsolete warships has been decided upon by the British navy authorities. No fewer than ten are to be brought under the hammer during the next few months.

The vessels ordered to be sold, says a London press correspondent, are the first-class battleship Resolution of 10,600 tons, once famous for the huge 111-ton guns which she carried; the Hero, Collingwood and Rodney, of 10,300 tons; the second-class battleships Edinburgh, 6,000 tons, and [illegible], 7,000 tons, and some old training ships of less importance.

The vessels mentioned date from 1882, 1884 and 1888, although the Thunderer was built as far back as 1872. They have long been familiar names in the British fleet and have done a good deal of service. They are hopelessly out of date now, their open gun decks being perhaps their weakest feature.

When this batch has been got rid of some of the ships in what is known as the Special Reserve will be sold, with the proviso that they must be broken up in the United Kingdom.

Protection From Rabbits.

Large orders for wire netting have been placed with a Norwich, England, firm, by Australia, the total running to 1,100 miles' length of this protection against the rabbit pest. The netting is made 48 inches wide, with 1 1-4 inch mesh at the bottom and 1 1-2 inch mesh at top, this weave of netting being a patent held by this firm. The order now in hand is for 200 miles of this netting for the Queensland Government, which follows on a similar order for the Victorian Government, and the firm has also despatched 200 miles of wire netting to New South Wales. In each case the Government is the initial purchaser, and then retails the netting to the settlers, who fix it round their holdings and thus keep out the rabbits, without which their crops would be devastated.

At Last.

Diogenes, lantern in hand, entered the village drug store. "Say, have you anything that will cure a cold?" he asked.

"No, sir, I have not," answered the pill compiler.

"Give me your hand!"—continued Diogenes, dropping his lantern. "I have at last found an honest man."

The Election Protest Case

Toronto, May 3.—The West Peterborough election trial will take place on Monday, Sept. 27th, before Mr. Justice MacMahon and Mr. Justice Magee.

The examination for discovery of J. B. Stratton, M.P., will be held before Mr. Johnston, barrister, at ot Peterborough when the Ottawa session closes.

When J. H. Jones, acting for the petitioner, asked the election judges today to fix the date, they were compelled to indulge in some calculating. One date would be suggested, and only Mr. Justice Magee would be available. Then another date would be mentioned, and Mr. Justice MacMahon would be engaged. Finally, the month of June was abandoned, and on July and August being vacation months. September was the next best.

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the prediction.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Silver, Richenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lunn Lead Works, Deming, N.Mx., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.88.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar vein, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, is enripbide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chesemith, Mayer Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, it is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 60 feet deep, are from the surface, we will sink this shaft 600 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense sheets already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to stay in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profits through the floatation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 25c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance of 30, 60 and 90 days.

PLUCKING RATS.

A French Industry That Is Linked With the Restaurants.

"I plucked rats in Paris once at 4 francs a day," said a sailor. "Rats hibernate in the winter. What I mean to say is that they fall into a kind of dragged sleep. In this here sleep, clingin' together in big, black, soft bunches, they hang from the roofs of caves or the inside of chimbleys. Seein' I was down on my luck—I was studyin' art in them days—a restaurateur over in the Latin quarter, or Cart-ehay, as we used to say, gev me a job of bat pluckin'.

"He showed me the ropes the first day. I soon got on to it. It was dead easy. Just go into a cave, you know, locate a bunch of 'em and then pluck 'em one at a time like grapes and drop 'em in your buring bag. All that winter I'd set out from the Cart-ehay with my big bag in the morning, and on warm night you'd see me staggerin' back along the Bull Mouch, as we called the Boulevard Michel, loaded down with hibernatin' rats.

"You don't find them in your cilantelo, Jacques?' I said to the boss one night.

"'Maybe—oh, yes,' said he. 'They always figure in our farmaned one franc dinner.'

"I gave him a reproachful look.

"'Rat's meat is excellent,' he says. 'The meat is pink and very fine. Fried in butter with a parsley sauce, the gourmets in the Cafe Anglais could never, never tell it from venison.'

"'You wouldn't catch me eatin' it,' says I.

"He chuckled and nudged me in the ribs.

"'No?' says he. 'No? And yet, mon vieux, the rat is only figured in our excellent five cent ragouth that you so dearly love.'"

LINCOLN'S IRONY.

His Reply to a Petition For a Dishonest Boy's Pardon.

The Hon. Alexander H. Rice once paid a visit to President Lincoln on behalf of a Boston boy who had been imprisoned for robbing his employer's letters. After reading the petition, signed by many citizens of Boston, the president stretched himself in his chair and asked Mr. Rice if he had met a man going downstairs.

"Yes, Mr. President," replied Mr. Rice."

"His errand," said the president, "was to get a man pardoned out of the penitentiary, and now you have come to get a boy out of jail." Then, with characteristic humor, Mr. Lincoln continued: "I'll tell you what it is, we must abolish these depts or they will be the death of us. I thought it bad enough that they put so many men in the penitentiary for me to get out, but if they have now begun on the boys and the jails and have roped you into the delivery let's offer them!

"They deserve the worst fate," he went on, "because, according to the evidence that comes to me, they pick out the very best men and send them to the penitentiary, and this present petition shows they are playing the same game on the boys and sending them all to jail. The man that you met on the stairs affirmed that his friend in the penitentiary is a most exemplary citizen, and Massachusetts must be a happy state if her boys out of jail are as virtuous as this one appears to be who is in.

"Yes, down with the courts and deliverance to their victims, and then we can have some peace!"

The French Schoolboy's Hard Days.

French children are often on their way to school a little after 7 o'clock in the morning. If they have completed their lessons by 5 o'clock in the evening it is only by dint of great application. Young men studying for the higher professions have appointments with their tutors at 5 o'clock in the morning in summer time; otherwise they cannot accomplish the mountain of work that lies before them. In all branches of art the labor of the lyre is immense. At the conservatory the strenuous life is carried to a point which provokes the astonishment even of laborious German students.—Pall Mall Gazette.

How High a Tiger Can Jump.

For the benefit of the prospective big game hunters a correspondent finally disposes of the theory that a tiger is unable to jump to any height from all fours. He records that he took refuge in a tree from a particular tiger. The beast, however, jumped up to him, "like an India rubber ball, a good seven feet," and it was only "by letting go with my right and supporting both barrels down his mouth that I did not have a very bad time of it."

The moral evidently is that when avoiding a tiger it is necessary to find a tree with its lowest branch at least sixteen feet from the ground.—India Field.

Compensation.

"I must have an iron bedstead," declared a tourist at an inn.

"Sir," answered Boniface, "I am sorry there ain't a single iron bedstead in the 'ouse. But you will find the mattresses very nice and 'ard, sir!"—London Tit-Bits.

A Concession.

She—You don't allow me to do anything I want! If it goes on much longer I shall go home to mamma.

He—That I will allow you to do.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

NOT RELIGION.

It Was Something Very Different That Animated Eliza.

Mrs. S. of New Orleans has for many years been faithfully served by two negro women who, although bound by the tie of common devotion to their mistress, yet detest each other cordially, so that the kitchen is the scene of continuous battle.

Martha, the cook, is a leading light in the church. At revival meetings she was always the first to occupy the mourners' bench, the first to shout "Hallelujah!" and to fall into those contortions of body and outflinging of limbs that to the African mean "getting religion." Eliza, the maid of all work, on the other hand, had always been an unregenerate heathen, scoffing at religion, jeering at Martha and declaring no power on earth could induce her to go inside a church. Great, therefore, was Mrs. S.'s surprise on the occasion of the last revival to find that it was Eliza and not Martha who was attending the meetings.

"Why, Martha," she exclaimed, "aren't you going to church?"

"No'm," answered Martha sullenly.

"Why?"

"'Cause dat Liza she goes now."

"But isn't there room for both of you?"

"No'm, dey ain't."

All Martha's pent-up indignation emphasized the answer.

"'Cause, Miss Mary, dat Liza she jes' goes 'cause spite me. No sooner I gits up to go to de mo'ners' bench dan Liza she follers me and sets down close beside me, and befo' I has a chance 'at git 'ligion Liza she begins 'at girate around and shout 'Glory hallelujah!' and she out wid her fists and hits me bim in de jaw, and she out wid her footses and kicks me spang in de shin. But, I tell you, 'tain't 'ligion Liza's got, Miss Mary; hit's debility."

MONTAGNAIS INDIANS.

They Are Hunters In the Strictest Sense of the Word.

During nine months of the year—fall, winter and spring—the Montagnais Indians of Canada spend their lives in the "bush," hunting and trapping for pelts and meats. Then in June they rendezvous at the particular Hudson Bay company post where they belong, trade off their hunt and settle down for rest and recreation until the middle of August, when they are off again for the winter. They have absolutely nothing to do with the cultivated of the soil, being hunters in the strictest sense of the word. The Indians who hunt about Lake Mistassini form a subtribe by themselves, having the same name as the lake, and their summer rendezvous is at the Hudson Bay company post on the lake. Those who hunt south of Mistassini on the shores and tributaries of the Ashuapmoochouan river bear the name of that stream. Those on the Nekouba river bear its name, and those who hunt nearer Lake St. John are known by the Indian name of that lake, Pikouagami. All of these bands rendezvous on the west shore of Lake St. John, at Pointe Bleue, where the government has set aside a reserve and attempts to colonize the hunters and teach them to become farmers. East of Lake St. John is the Chicoutimi band, now much reduced, and southeast of them the Tadousac band, both of which are to be found distributed over the French Canadian districts of the same names. There are several other bands farther down toward the gulf of St. Lawrence.—Scottish Workman.

Bridled Brides.

Western brides have an easier time than their Abyssinian sisters. On the occasion of her marriage an Abyssinian bride has to change her skin. From ebony she has to become cafe au lait. To accomplish this the expectant bride is shut up in a room for three months. She is covered with woolen stuff, with the exception of her head; then they burn certain green and fragrant branches. The fumes which they produce destroy the original skin, and in its place comes the new skin, soft and clear as a baby's. The elders of the family feed the young woman with nutritive forcemeat balls.—Cape Colony Argus.

Dangerous Eggs.

A certain well known actor is always ready to assert that there are many untoward possibilities in his profession. "Really the public doesn't appreciate the vicissitudes of an actor's life," he said recently. "Now, there was Wisham Brown, who went touring in South Africa. I met Wisham's cousin recently. 'Well, how is Wish?' said I. 'Wish? said the cousin. 'Why, man, Wisham's dead!' 'Dead!' I cried. 'How did he die?' 'Pelted to death with eggs at Cape Town,' the cousin answered. 'But eggs don't kill,' said I. He smiled sadly and murmured, 'Ostrich eggs do.'"

Financial.

"Mother, how big must I grow to be in a bank, like uncle?" asked the small boy.

"Not very much," said his father, "for I have often seen in the papers that cashiers are short."

Useless.

"Mildred," murmured a fashionable young man, sinking on one knee, "for your birthday gift I offer—myself."

"Thank you," was the cold reply, "but I only accept useful presents!"

Vigor is contagious, and whatever makes us think or feel strongly adds to our power and enlarges our field of action.—Emerson.

Lease of Water Powers

Province of Quebec.

Notice is hereby given that the sale of the two groups of water-powers below mentioned, will be offered at public auction in the sales' room of the department of Lands and Forests, in this city, on Tuesday, the 11th May next, at 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon.

The lease will be for seventy-five years on the terms below stipulated and on such other conditions as will be made known to the public on the day of the auction.

1. The "Kai-Kai-Ke" group (Riviere des Quinze).

Description; —The water-powers created by the Kai-Kai-Ke rapid and the other rapids and falls situated above it as far as Lake des Quinze, in the county of Pontiac, at about 2 miles from the Indian Village of North Temiscamingue to which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains, at Temiscamingue ascend; also four hundred acres of land in the vicinity of the said rapid and of the Kai-Kai-Ke portage, from the head of the said rapid to a line drawn across the river des Quinze, at nine hundred feet above the entry of the channel called "Bryson Creek," together with all the lands that may be flooded in consequence of the construction of the dams intended to submerge the rapids above that of Kai-Kai-Ke and to Lake des Quinze exclusively, without such dams causing any portion whatever of the waters of River des Quinze go overflow into some other stream.

Total head, 98 feet; absolute power at low water, 32,900 horse-power, without warranty of exact measurement.

The lessee shall be obliged to expend a sum of $250,000 on the development of the said water-powers within the three years following the passing of the lease, in default whereof the lease shall be cancelled and the payments made confiscated.

2. "Island Rapids," group (River des Quinze).

Description; — The water-powers formed by the rapids known under the name of "Big Pipe Stone," "Little Pipe Stone" and "Islands Rapids," in the same county, at about eight miles from North Temiscamingue, on which the steamboats connecting with the C.P.R. trains of Temiscamingue ascend, including; 1. The bed and the water-powers of the River des Quinze, properly so called from a line drawn across that river at nine hundred feet above the entry or head of "Bryson Creek," to the prolongation across the said river of the division line of ranges 7 and 8 of the township of Guigues; 2. The bed and the water powers of "Bryson Creek" channel or arm of the said river; 3. The large island between the river des Quinze, properly so called and the said "Bryson Creek," as well as all the islands and fore shores and all the islets and rocks in the said river and said "Bryson Creek," between the two lines above described; 4. A strip of land of 10 chains (660 feet) in width or depth (measured in a due north and south direction) along northern bank of the river des Quinze and of "Bryson Creek" and extending between the two lines above described; 5. Lastly, a strip of land also of 10 chains in width or depth, along the southern bank of the river des Quinze, between the two said lines drawn transversely to the river.

All these lands, bed of the river des Quinze, bed of Bryson Creek, islands, etc., covering a superficies of about 2000 acres.

The difference of level in the river des Quinze between the two lines above described is 95 feet in round numbers representing at low water, an absolute power of 32,000 horse-power, the whole without warranty of exact measurement.

The lessee shall be obliged to expend $300,000 on the development and working of these hydraulic powers within a delay of three years from the date of the passing of the lease under pain of resiliation of the lease and the confiscation of any payment made in the said delay.

The government binds itself to not sell for ten years from this any lands on the banks of the river des Quinze on a width or depth of at least fifteen chains (990 feet) beyond the lands above designated, from the foot of the rapids called "Island Rapids" to Lake des Quinze exclusively, so that the lessee may, at all points of the bank have free access to the river and that he may choose within that area the lands necessary for the full working of the said water-powers, which lands, whose superficies—including that of the lands mentioned in the above descriptions—shall not exceed 3560 acres for the "Island Rapids" group, and 2000 acres for the "Kai-Kai-Ke" group, shall also form part of the property leased.

The upset price shall be fixed by the day of the auction and each person desirous of becoming a bidder, must deposit at the Department of Lands and Forests before the sale, an accepted cheque for $10,000 which will be returned to him after the sale, unless he be the person to whom the property will be adjudged; to this person the said sum of $10,000 will be refunded when he shall have given proof of complete compliance with the conditions prescribed as to the development of the said water-powers, which compliance must be effected within the six months following the date of the lease.

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

EDITORIAL DIFFICULTIES.

In Outlying Parts of Empire They Are Sometimes Very Great.

The editorial chair in some of the smaller Outposts of Empire must at times be anything but an easy one. We arrive at this generalisation after perusing a journal from the Gold Coast, the district correspondents of which appear to have modelled their contributions on Ruskin's famous three-page sentence, or Dr. Guinness Rogers' 300 word peroration. One correspondent has a sentence which begins: "Now leaving that subject as has been apparently exercitiated by Mr. Moo, the world-renowned espying, and plunging with profound meditation into the depths of creation," and runs on for 253 words without a break. Another runs on for 212 words, and another, writing from Calabar, says: "Competitive examination is indeed a useful step for the Government to see to, to prevent rogues and undesirable individuals who promptly rush into offices, flattering themselves to be what they are flatly not and in the course of a short time becoming troublesome pests in the different offices: we think it is not enough to turn a man full scholar simply because he has 4 inches collar on and a fine tie. It is a competitive examination that will prove what he is able to do, and by this means blunders and unpleasantness in offices will be put a stop to. Mark you this." Then from Abeokuta we learn that "the Twin Rivers are not under proper management now. The Omanhin instead of engaging a man who is better qualified to supervise the Twin Rivers has chosen his son for the work, wishing to fill all the departments with his relatives and so the work lacks much fairness. No proper receipt is given to the passengers, which makes sometimes a passenger pay double fare. The passengers should also be hurried in good instead of wasting their valuable time."—Standard of Empire.

Oldest Parish Clerk.

Amongst England's centenarians, one of the most interesting is James Carne, who lives in the village of St. Columb Minor, Cornwall, and who is looking forward to celebrating his 103rd birthday on May 3rd next. For over half a century Carne has carried out the duties of verger and parish clerk, and during that time has only missed one Sunday's services. What is more curious still is that his grandfather as well as father acted in a similar capacity in the old church of St. Columb Minor. The former was verger for fifty years, and the latter served for fifty-four. Thus the Carne family have a record of over 150 years' service for the one church.

Carne has the reputation amongst the villagers of being a veritable prayer-book. In the earlier days of his parish clerkship it was customary for him to walk up and down the aisle playing his flute, and so lead the village choir. This instrumental accompaniment was the forerunner of a church band which was considered quite a grand feature, and consisted of a flute, a clarionet, and a bass viol, with the later addition of a concertina. The bandsmen practised in the quaint old parlor of the village "pub," hard by.

In spite of his advanced age the old verger's health still keeps good, and it is only in the last five or six years that he has worn glasses. He spends much of his time working in his garden. He is a non-smoker and practically a teetotaller, and was originally apprenticed to the tailoring business, but his father took him away from it "on account of his being delicate." However, the outdoor life of a postman may have helped to build up his constitution, for Carne was the parish mail-carrier for more than 21 years and never missed his duties a single day.

The old worn-out cells are rebuilt slowly but surely when the change is made from Coffee to

POSTUM

Nature requires time to rebuild. This cannot be done instantly.
But each day progress can be seen.

The change to Postum is not hard because the flavour of well-boiled Postum is similar to that of mild Java and it quickly wins its own way.

The aches and ills (caused from coffee) cease and the pure food elements of Postum bring out the glow-of-health in place of the muddy coffee complexion.

The change is worth while.

Increased Capacity for Mental Labor Since Leaving off Coffee.

Many former coffee drinkers who have mental work to perform, day after day, have found a better capacity and greater endurance by using Postum instead of ordinary coffee.

An Ill. woman writes:

"I had drank coffee for about twenty years, and finally had what the doctor called "coffee heart." I was nervous and extremely despondent; had little mental or physical strength left, had kidney trouble and constipation.

"The first noticeable benefit derived from the change from coffee to Postum was the natural action of the kidney and bowels. In two weeks my heart action was greatly improved and my nerves steady.

"Then I became less despondent, and the desire to be active again, showed proof of renewed physical and mental strength.

"I am steadily gaining in physical strength and brain power. I formerly did mental work and had to give it up on account of coffee, but since using Postum I am doing hard mental labor with less fatigue than ever before."

What the $50,000 Loan to The Purity Ware, Ltd., Means, by Ald. Gillespie

"As chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council, and as a citizen and business man I strongly recommend to the citizens of Peterborough the acceptance of the Purity Ware Limited proposition," said Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie to The Times yesterday. "I have followed the matter very closely from the beginning and the more I think of it, and the more thoroughly I investigate it, the more convinced I am that the city is getting an exceptionally good thing. I would like the people to go into this thing carefully. In the first place what is it costing the city in actual cash? There is the site of ten acres for $2000, a mere bagatell. It's the cheapest piece of property which has been purchased around this city yearly. Then there is that loan of $50,000. Here is the beauty of that portion of the agreement. The company pays 4 per cent. interest on that loan from the start. The city can at the present time sell its debentures at 4 1-2 per cent. par. That leaves only one-half of one per cent. for the city to pay, or in cash $250 per year. As the summer advances and the time draws near for debentures to be sold, there is every reason to believe that they will be successfully floated at 4 per cent. In which case the city does not pay a dollar, and it leaves only the cost of the site, $2,000, for the city to put up. Can anyone ask for a better proposition, so far as the city is concerned?

"I understand the promoters have already got practically all their stock, $100,000 worth, sold. Peterborough people will not be asked to subscribe for one share. Then the company furnishes their own fire protection, waterworks and sewerage. It will cost the city nothing for these. So you might say that all Peterborough is really doing is furnishing a free site and making a loan, or which in this case is practically guaranteeing the bonds. It arrives at the same result.

"I would like to see this by-law carry unanimously. It is a good thing. Now let us push it along."

Another Sensational Report in Connection with Kinrade Murder

Was the Mysterious Miss Elliott in Toronto to see the Kinrade Family—The Crown Authorities are Investigating

Toronto, May 6.—Was the mysterious "Miss Elliott," Elizabeth Marion, or Marion Elizabeth, alias Mrs. Caille etc., etc., in Toronto, and in daily communication with the Kinrades during the first half of April, three weeks ago?

This is the latest and one of the most startling reports that the Crown has heard since the day of the murder, and the new clue is being diligently followed up.

The information came to the Crown in a strange way, but the case is full of strange happenings. It was supplied by a person who recognized the picture published in the News on Tuesday evening.

This picture was a facsimile of the one shown to Miss Florence Kinrade by Mr. George Tate Blackstock, when she was in the witness box on Tuesday evening and which was printed on the front page of a Detroit paper.

Mr. Blackstock had handed it to her with the question; "Is that the Miss Elliott, the Aunt Marion, of whom you speak?"

Miss Kinrade leaned over with contracted brows, but, as usual, evinced no surprise, and replied after a careful scrutiny; "No, I don't think that is Miss Elliott."

INVESTIGATING THE THREAD.

The Crown does not accept the answer of the girl, and is carefully investigating the new thread in an effort to follow it up and get on the trail of Miss Elliott.

The statement made to the Attorney-General's Department was that the original of the picture stopped at a downtown hotel for nearly two weeks.

She came alone and she went alone.

While at the hotel she kept to herself and had no visitors. But she was out most of each day and often returned late at night.

The Crown's theory is that she was in consultation with the Kinrades during this period.

This would be quite simple, for during the whole of this time they were at the Abberley, on Sherbourne street, and had been since March 25, six days after the first inquest had adjourned.

SUPPORT FOR THE THEORY.

This theory is supported by information in possession of the Crown that the family immediately after the first mention of the name by Florence Kinrade in her evidence became quite anxious to discover Mrs. Caille, or "Miss Elliott," as she is believed to have been. It is learned that inquiries were made in Detroit at the time under instructions from the family, and an effort made to discover the whereabouts of Mrs. Caille, whom Florence Kinrade in her last examination admitted meeting at Goderich. It was this inquiry for the former Detroit woman which led a paper of that city to publish her photograph which the News reproduced on Tuesday, thus leading to the discovery of Miss Elliott's presence in Toronto.

Why she came here can only be surmised.

At the time that Mr. Montrose Wright was absent from the city a week or so before the inquest it was rumored that he was making inquiries after "Miss Elliott" in Richmond, Virginia.

MISS KINRADE AS MIS BELL.

It is not generally known that throughout the Kinrade inquest, just concluded, Miss Florence Kinrade has been traveling under the name of Miss Bell—for possibly it would be nearer the truth to say that the whole family, including Clair Montrose Wright, have been traveling under cover of that abbreviated cognomen. This fact has just leaked out.

Miss Kinrade's trunk bears the name "Miss Bell," in large and prominent lettering on the top. So noticeable is it, in fact, that it at once attracts attention merely on account of its size, and causes people to look twice at the owner, with the expectation of seeing some actress of rising fame, or some new star in the theatrical firmament.

That Miss Kinrade has been and is traveling under an alias, the following fact shows. On Sunday night, when the Kinrades left for Hamilton, a taxicab, by a coincidence, was ordered for 29 Homewood avenue, about 9 o'clock. The taxicab office expressed some surprise. "Why," said the man in charge, "there are two ordered for 28 Homewood avenue at 10.45." He looked up his book and added; "Bell is the name." These proved to be the taxicabs which took the Kinrades to the station.

The mistress of the boarding house at 28 Homewood avenue, states that she does not know whether the Kinrades are coming back or not. They took all their trunks and suitcases with them when they left to go to Hamilton. It is stated that Mr. Kinrade is negotiating for the lease of a house in Toronto, and that when they come back, they will come here to live.

Jail for Evelyn Thaw if She Does Not Pay Fine

New York, May 6.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will have to go to the Ludlow street jail unless she pays within five days a penalty of $250 imposed several days ago by Justice McAvoy for contempt of court. The fine resulted from her failure to appear in supplementary proceedings on a judgment of $758 secured against her by Elsie Hartwig, a milliner. The ruling of Justice McAvoy was appealed, but the justices of the Appellate Division today refused a stay of the proceedings in the city court to enforce the payment of the penalty.

Roseneath Cheese Factory is Running After Two Years Rest

The Roseneath cheese factory started running yesterday in their new premises and under a new management. This factory was burned down two years ago when everything was lost. Since then a new company was organized and a fine new building was erected. This building is thoroughly up-to-date. It has cement floors, all new and modern machinery, including three 8000 pound vats, two 12-hoop presses and a 15-horse power boiler, besides the other necessary apparatus for making the highest grade cheese and butter. The plant was installed by Messrs. White & Gillespie, and Mr Gillespie was at the factory on Wednesday when it started running.

He saw the first cheese put through and everything was running very satisfactorily. He met the directors of the company and they were well pleased and expect to sell him a lot of the best cheese he ever brought.

Indicates That Hains was Unbalanced by Conduct of His Wife

New York, May 6.—Mrs. Hains proved a remarkable witness on behalf of [illegible]. Captain Peter Hains. Although weak and hysterical, she made a desperate fight to tell her story, unrestrained by the legal barriers which are thrown around witnesses, and she succeeded. She argued with Judge Garretson, who at first kindly advised her but finally censured her, and she fiercely rebuked District Attorney DeWitt when he interposed objections. She insisted on telling things in her own way, despite what judge or attorney said, and by her persistence and determination to aid her accused son amazed everyone who listened to her. She rode roughshod over the rules of evidence and gave to the jury a vivid picture of her son's despair, meantime showing that she was the victim of a terrible grief.

"He looked worn and haggard," she said, turning to the jury and speaking quickly, of her son's condition after hearing his wife's confession. He hardly recognized me, but I put my arms around him and kissed him. His only words were, 'My God, isn't it terrible! My home is ruined! My children disgraced!' I wept over him. He was not himself. The poor boy, how he suffered; he loved her so!"

Mr. DeWitt, plainly affected by the woman's grief and determination to aid her son if it lay within her power, stood back and let Mrs. Hains continue. Judge Garretson told Mrs. Hains in a kindly way she must conform to reasonable rules of evidence.

"Well, what can I say?" asked Mrs. Hains, appealingly. "I am only telling the truth. I am telling how my poor boy acted when he received this awful shock, and every time I start I am interrupted. How can you say anything if you are constantly interrupted? I want to tell what I know."

After the lawyers and the judge had conferred for a few minutes as to the best course to be followed with the witness, the direct examination was renewed.

"What did you say on this first day?"

"Oh, let's forget it! Oh, let's forget it!" he would shout. Then he would cry. 'Oh, how happy it is to be married!' One day he saw a picture of 'The Vampire'—a woman bending over a man who had been stabbed to the heart, and he began reciting, 'A fool there was and a maiden fair.'"

Mr. DeWitt, whereupon she looked at him severely and said;

"I see the district attorney has succeeded in muddling me again."

She repeated three verses of Kipling's "The Vampire," and told the jurors her son said he was the one who had been stabbed to the heart. For this she was reproved by the court. Mr. McIntyre made a fight to have Mrs. Hains tell her story in her own way, but Judge Garretson declared firmly that he would not permit the rules of evidence to be overridden.

"My boy's face was drawn when I saw him," the witness continued. "He showed plainly he was undergoing terrible mental suffering. He said we must travel—must go abroad. I told him we could not do that, and he said we would have to. His eyes glared. He threw himself back in a chair. He talked incoherently. I had already been told that he was crazy, but his actions them convinced me of it."

Again Mrs. Hains was interrupted by the judge and District Attorney, whereupon she turned to the jury and in a hysterical manner said;

"You know how he acted even if I'm not permitted to tell."

"Did he talk much?" Mrs. Hains was asked.

"He had spells when he would do nothing but stare into vacancy. I never disturbed him, because it drove him into a sort of frenzy. If he were opposed in anything he became frantic."

Will Bore for Gas and Oil Near Lindsay

Lindsay, May 6.—In conversation with Mr. R. H. Leary who is interested with Mr. Dettman of Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, in boring for gas and oil in Victoria and Peterborough counties, Mr. Leary stated that the reason the company had not started operations in Peterborough, was because of the fact that they were awaiting the arrival of an expert and a boring machine which was being used in the western oil fields.

He further stated that everything was in good shape and that the company meant business. Just as soon as they make a test near Peterborough they would investigate conditions at Lindsay, and if the oil was secured at Peterborough and not at Lindsay it would be piped here, or vice versa.

Mr. Leary further stated that they had no trouble in finally securing the block of land required at Peterborough, and even the farmers are now anxious to see the work commenced. He did not think they would have any difficulty in securing the land around Lindsay.

Seymour Power Co. to Meet Power Committee

There is a probability of a third power company doing business in Peterborough. The Seymour Electric Power Co. of Campbellford, wrote to the council and the Power Committee last night decided to have a representative of the company come to Peterborough, and meet the committee when the matter will be talked over.

Chairman Ald McIntyre opened the meeting by reading the letter from the Seymour Electric Power Co., which asked for the privilege of doing business in this city. The company is now erecting a 400 h.p. house and want to start the construction of their lines to the city.

Ald. Bradburn said that in his opinion the first thing to decide was whether it would be advisable to give the company a franchise to use the city streets. To have them build a conduit would cost far too much money and they could not do it. He thought it would be better to have them sell their power to some other company in the city. If the city was to give them a franchise to use the streets upon what terms could it be granted.

Ald. Gillespie asked if anything had been done yet towards bringing in other powers by the city. As far as the pole line was concerned the city would have to have a pole line.

Ald. Hicks stated that as it appeared to him the best thing to do was for the chairman to see the company and arrange with them what price they would sell power at and how much power they could supply.

It was moved by Ald. Hicks that the Water Commissioners be asked to meet this committee as to how much power can be developed at the waterworks dam and delivered to the city and at what price on the switch board and to the consumer.

Moved by Ald. Bradburn that the chairman write the Seymour Electric Power Co. of Campbellford, to send a representative here to discuss the question with the committee. This was seconded by Ald. Phelan and carried.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success in leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Board of Trade and Purity Ware

A special meeting of the Board of Trade will be held on Tuesday night at eight o'clock in the Council Chambers. The subject for discussion is the Purity Ware Limited of Peterborough, the new factory which is locating here. This is a most important question, and everyone should make it a point to be present to learn and to teach others the desirability of carrying this by-law on June 1st. Ald. Gillespie, president of the Board of Trade, and chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, will preside, and he will be one of the speakers. Several other gentlemen who are well posted will also speak, and anyone who is not just clear on all the provisions will be gladly answered.

Must Pay for the Sewer Connection

Magistrate Edmison yesterday morning gave judgment against Mr. N. T. LaPlante, who must also pay the costs of the case which he entered at the last Division Court sittings. He claimed that he was not liable for $25 flat rate for connection with the outfall sewer passing his residence at the corner of Lock and Romaine streets.

A by-law was passed in the City Council stating that those who were not paying a frontage tax on the sewers should pay a flat rate of $25. This was all they were expected to pay towards the construction of the sewer. Mr. LaPlante contested this demand and as it was a test case a great deal of interest has been centered in it. Mr. LaPlante must pay the twenty-five dollars and the costs of the case.

More Aldermen to Buy Motor Cars

The automobile fever has struck the aldermen hard this year. Since Ald. Duffus the baby member of the council got his and since he has been burning around the streets leaving a nasty smell behind, the other city fathers have been scratching their heads and thinking hard. Ald. Gillespie fancies the auto car and thinks it would be a great thing to travel around to the cheese factories in. Ald. Hicks has an idea that he could deliver coal and wood much faster in the auto than by team and he is looking around. Ald. Bradburn also has a hankering after the power horse. He was telling the Power Committee last night about several big trips he has made this week in autos. The only reason he does not buy one is that he has a horror of stopping in the middle of the road and crawling under the car while he has his good clothes on and no water handy to wash his hands afterwards. Then Ald. Phelan positively refuses to crawl under any car and states he will stay with the hoss for a while.

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and is so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual.

Lacrosse Match Here on Victoria Day

One of the features of the 24th of May amusements will be the lacrosse match between St. Catharines and Peterborough. The St. Kits boys will come down with the 19th Regiment and they will bring a strong aggregation with them. The local boys have a bunch of good men and they will put up a great game. The attendance will no doubt be large.

Visitors in town are invited to see our souvenirs before buying hand painted views on china. Prices start at 10 cents each. Times Bookstore.

Tight tickling or distressing coughs, quickly yield to the soothing, soothing action of this splendid prescription—Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so safe and good for children, as well. Containing no opium, chloroform, or other harmful drugs, mothers should in safety always demand Dr. Shoop's. If other remedies are offered, tell them No! Be your own judge! Sold by all dealers.

Visit of Regiments on Victoria Day

The preliminary arrangements for the opening of the new armories are now being prepared and from the information already gained the occasion will be one of the most important in the history of the city. Colonel Campbell, Major MacCordick and Major Burleigh of the 19 Regiment of St. Catharines, arrived in the city Wednesday night at ten o'clock, and yesterday morning Col. Ashton, Major Genet and Major Robertson of the 38th Dufferin Rifles of Brantford, arrived in the city. They met a number of the officers of the local regiment with reference to the plans for their arrival and the outline of the manner in which they will spend the two days in Peterborough.

The St. Kitts Regiment will arrive on the G.T.R. and Brantford's soldiers will come in on the C.P.R. They will reach Peterborough early Sunday morning, probably about five or six o'clock. They will go into camp on Central Park. The Dufferin Rifles will have bell tents and their fellow soldiers from St. Catharines will camp in the large tent. The plans of the events has not been prepared, but a few items are already known.

CHURCH PARADE.

There will be a church parade on Sunday morning, the massed regiments going to St. Paul's church. On Monday afternoon there will be sacred band concerts and also in the evening.

The people of Peterborough will have an opportunity of hearing plenty of music and of comparing their own crack band and regiment with the visitors. On Monday there will be a parade and review and in the afternoon the formal opening of the armories will take place. Hon. Wm. Pugsley, minister of public works, will formally open the new building. The event will be a great one, to use a popular term, and Peterborough should see a great crowd in the city for this important occasion.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents, large size 50 cents.

Slowly Dying

Thousands are slowly dying from catarrh, but don't know their danger.

A CASE IN POINT.

Mr. Ulric Berault, a young gentleman who has lived for years in Sweetsburg, Quebec, inherited Catarrh from his mother. The disease spread through his system till he was a physical wreck.

"As a child," said Mr. Berault, "I was prone to an ulceration of the mucous lining of the throat and nasal passages.

"I grew pale and emaciated, lost all desire for food, and got into such a dreadful condition that my friends said that Catarrh was fairly eating me up.

"Every organ of my body seemed affected and the doctor said it was the first stage of consumption. He advised Catarrhozone, and I inhaled it ten minutes at a time every few hours, and was rewarded in a few days by a wonderful improvement.

"Catarrhozone pleased me, and the doctor so well that I used it enthusiastically, and took Ferrozone Tablets after each meal to build up my strength. In about three weeks I was quite recovered, and the doctor says no remedy but Catarrhozone could work such a miracle.

"Every one in town knows I was just about dead with Catarrh, and my cure is an evidence of what Catarrhozone can do. It is a pleasure to recommend Catarrhozone."

(Signed) Ulric Berault."

Catarrhozone beyond question is the proper remedy for catarrhal and bronchial troubles. The medicated air goes all through the air passages of the head, throat and lungs. It kills the germs, heals the sore spots, allays irritation and keeps the breath pure.

Headache, tired feeling across the eyes, nausea, all these well-known disagreeable symptoms are overcome by the medicated air of Catarrhozone.

Ferrozone Tablets which are used in conjunction with Catarrhozone Inhaler drive all the poisonous secretions of catarrh from the blood. One taken after each meal creates new appetite and digestion, strengthens the stomach, revitalizes and invigorates the entire system.

Catarrhozone is quite unsurpassed as a cure for Catarrh in any part of the system. It is highly recommended for Bronchitis and Asthma, and for coughs and colds has no equal.

Complete outfit, sufficient for two months' treatment, price $1.00; trial size 25 cents. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

CANADA AND THE EMPIRE

There is no disguising the fact that on the part of a large proportion of the population of the Dominion there is a keen disappointment that when the subject of Imperial defence was under discussion recently they Canadian Parliament did not make a positive declaration of readiness to do something tangible to ease the financial burden so long and so cheerfully borne by the mother country. It is undeniable that the people are chafing under the prolongation of mere negotiations to find a strictly businesslike solution of the problem presented, and that popular sentiment would favor a display of liberality on the part of the Canadian people, pending the result of negotiations for a permanent arrangement. There need be no fear that Canada would be giving something for nothing, because our obligation to the mother country is so great that there is no possibility of overstepping it.

"What Great Britain has done for Canada," is the text of a thoughtful article contributed not long ago by Mr. J. Castell Hopkins to the press, and since reprinted in leaflet form. As the writer points out, when Canada was in its birth-pains of United States revolution, invasion, and attempted conquest, Great Britain was unstinted in her supply of blood and men and money; when our youthful nation, that was then, needed soldiers to support its growth and maintain its interests and hold its territory, British troops and fortifications were maintained here at an expenditure of $200,000,000 during the 19th century; when our growing commerce became a matter of international concern, as our vast, unbroken territories had so long been an object of international cupidity, they rested securely within the scope of Britain's naval supremacy; when British dignity and Canadian feeling were shamed by the Trent affair, 10,000 British soldiers came to Canada "in that as ships could bring them here; when the Fenian invasion illustrated the helplessness of a country like ours lying alongside the territory of a great Power, Britain paid the damages rather than risk war with a country stirred to fever-heat by passions of the moment, which have now happily disappeared.

A Ghost in a Clock.

Rumanian provides a remarkable story of a ghost in the form of a clock. At the approach of midnight each night the otherwise peaceful "grandfather" becomes inhabited by a spook. The ticking changes into a deep and prolonged throbbing, the clock becomes in motion, while a pair of gray feet protrude from beneath its base. Passing through transitional stages the thumping is replaced by a spasmodic breathing, and upon the stroke of 12 the pendulum door opens, revealing an enormous ashy gray hand with nail-shaped fingers. The clock face disappears, displaying a frightful grey head, large and round, with abnormally long, pale blue eyes. Beyond a quiet stroll, which causes veiled tappings along the landings during the night, the apparition is inoffensive and is said to prove of great service in sending every one early to bed.—London Tit-Bits.

One View of Saving.

H. Marvel, author of the "Reveries of a Bachelor," was all his life opposed to the modern commercial spirit. A young disciple from the west once visited the aged writer in his New England home. The youth, a poet, said he thought he would put away his verses and write magazine love stories, so as to able to save money.

But Mr. Mitchell frowned and shook his head.

"Saving," he said, "is the means for depriving yourself of things which you want now for fear you may not have things which you won't possibly want forty years hence."

Francs and Dollars.

We like to read French stories, but every time francs are mentioned we stop to turn them into dollars. "She had 17,000 francs per year in the funds," the story will say, whereupon we stop to divide seventeen by five—to turn the francs into dollars and find out how much money the heroine had.

The Occasional Hero.

"He woke up one morning to find himself famous."

"Well?"

"But people had forgotten all about him by the time the 4 o'clock extras were out."

Worse Off.

"The bachelor is worse off than the married man? How do you make that out?"

"The married man is afraid of only one woman; the bachelor is afraid of all of them."

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more, governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have those same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to the weak and wasting nerves centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen those nerves — re-establish them as needed, with

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jamie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Silver, Rochester, First Home, Henriette, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lume Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $1982.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 36 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chasmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same lodge, and are now 65 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense plants already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 15c each, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

SUCCESS IN LIFE.

What the World Owes a Man and What a Man Owes the World.

The supposed indebtedness of the world to a man has not often been reduced to specific terms, but many a man has had the feeling that his failure was the world's fault, not his own, and that the world somehow, somewhere, ought to be compelled to pay for its callous indifference to his personal welfare. Some men spend a good deal of time wondering or discussing whether life is worth living. Other men are so busy living that they don't care to take time out for the discussion of the question. It is not the workers, the men who carry forward the world's business, who indulge in speculation as to the extent of the world's indebtedness to themselves. It is the men who have no business but sedulous speculation, like the endless day dreaming of the Indian faber, which comes out of the same door as that by which it entered.

If the man has something to sell which is of market value the world will buy it from him and pay him for it. It is a perfectly fair and straight business transaction. A man has no more right to expect the world to purchase from him what it does not want than he has to expect an individual customer to purchase an unnecessary article. No self respecting man, unless sheer necessity compels him, will demand that the world shall mingle charity with business and pay him for something it cannot use.

THE VALENTINE MYTH.

One Theory as to the Origin of the Variety Stage.

It is not easy to trace the variety stage back to its earliest beginnings, for the scent begins to grow faint in antebellum days, and the trail loses itself beyond recall in the early forties, about which period we encounter traces of what may be called the "Bill Valentine Myth." This I will relate as it was imparted to me by Mr. Valentine himself in the small Coney Island pavilion that he conducted during his later years.

Mr. Valentine's story is that many years before the civil war, probably in the early forties, he opened a small place of amusement somewhere on the east side of New York city. (It must have been small indeed, for there is no record of it in T. Allston Brown's "History of the New York Stage.") Uncertain what to call his place of entertainment, he applied to a friend for a fitting name.

"What sort of an entertainment are you going to give?" said the friend.

"Well, I'm going to give a variety of things," said Mr. Valentine.

"Then why not call it a variety show?" suggested the other.

And thereupon, according to this myth, the term "variety show" came into use.—James L. Ford in McClure's Magazine.

Locating Her Car.

A hearty laugh at the pointed query of an interesting four-year-old girl was enjoyed a few days ago by a number of persons waiting on a platform at Broad street station for the departure of a westbound accommodation train. The little lady had been gazing intently at a Pullman observation coach and after a brief mental contrast of the more pretentious car with the ordinary passenger coach which she was about to take asked of her mother, "Mamma, what kind of a car is that one with the beautiful windows and pretty plush covered chairs?" "That is a parlor car, my dear," was the reply. "Well, I guess ours must be a kitchen car, then, isn't it?" was the very suggestive question, which as yet has not been answered to the child's satisfaction.

Silence.

Silence is a language understood in every country.

Were silence to be enforced on all of us for a single day the fools would go mad. The wise would talk less thereafter.

Silence in the shallow man means that he is out of breath.

A man is known by the silence he keeps.

A silent man may not be thinking, but the burden of proof is not on him.

To be silent in company is to invite the suspicion that "you have something on your mind." The reason is obvious.—Life.

The Sun a Star?

The sun is one of a stream of stars moving in the same direction and with equal velocities. Thus says Professor Kobold of the observatory of Kiel, who has become convinced by his studies of star currents that the sun does actually form part of such a current, which is moving toward a point on the edge of the Milky way. Kapteyn of Groningen has come to the conclusion that the stars drift in two directions. This conclusion is based on the examination of 2,200 stars observed repeatedly.

Discouraging.

Mother—Why, Ethel, you mustn't be sad on your birthday. What is it? Ethel—Well, Tommy'll be eight next month, and then he'll be a year older than me again, and I've tried so hard to catch him up.—London Punch.

Serious.

"She says there is only a platonic friendship."

"Then why has she begun to take cooking lessons?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Charity, like a flower, looks best in seclusion. Bring it into the glare of publicity and it loses color.—Exchange.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

PLAYING GYPSY.

Titled English Couple, Who Emulate the Professional Wanderers.

Owing to the recent death of the four-year-old son of the Duke of Westminster the latter's uncle, Lord Arthur Grosvenor, has become heir presumptive to the most valuable landed estates in the world. This property includes 680 acres of the choicest portions of London's best residential section, a $5,000,000 palatial country mansion surrounded by 6,000 acres, 20,000 acres in Flintshire and Cheshire and 40,000 acres in South Africa. The estimated income from this vast property is $3,000,000.

By the law of primogeniture title to all land in England is vested in the eldest son. Now that the present Duke of Westminster has no male heir the title to the property passes to the duke's uncle, Lord Arthur. The latter, being a younger son, did not share in the estate when his brother, the father of the present duke, succeeded to the title and property. He consequently turned to a military career and won distinction during the Boer war. Since then he has been living quietly in the country.

Lady Arthur Grosvenor, however, though her husband did not inherit any portion of the Westminster estate, possessed considerable wealth in her own right, being the daughter of Sir Richard Sheffield. Lady Arthur Grosvenor is anything but "retiring" in disposition, and is one of the best known all 'round sportswomen in England. She has an abhorrence of conventional life, and gave ample evidence of this fact three years ago by buying two gypsy wagons and literally going about with them through the country. She assumed the name of "Sarah Lee," which she painted upon the caravan and went through the formality of taking out a hawker's license so as not to be molested by the country police as she went from place to place.

The adventures of Lady Arthur, who was accompanied by her husband, made her the talk of England for some little time, and quite a number of her society friends cut her because of her strange whim. She went all over England, however, and seldom took the trouble to explain her identity. On one or two occasions she found it necessary to extricate herself from an embarrassing position by letting it be known that she was a titled lady simply enjoying an outing. As a rule, English farmers are not at all partial to nomads of the tramp persuasion, as Lady Arthur Grosvenor often found to her great inconvenience.

While out on these journeys Lady Arthur does all her own cooking over a regular camp fire. She rises every morning at 5 o'clock and has breakfast ready "in the open" at 6. A tent is always carried along and usually one of the wagons is loaded with a stock of household necessities, such as brooms, mats and wickerware, and she enjoys the experience of going into the farmers' cottages and disposing of her goods. For several months each year she has stuck to this gypsy mode of life.

Her example has given rise to a "fad" among the upper ten in England. A month or two out of the year many of them attempt to practice the "simple life" by camping out on the lawns of their country mansions, walking barefooted on the grass, and limiting themselves to farinaceous diet. There are not many, however, who have the hardihood to go in for the "real thing" to the extent indulged in by Lady Arthur Grosvenor. The Grosvenor heirs to the Duke of Westminster have one son and two daughters.

Agreement With Portugal.

The exact terms of the new agreement between the Transvaal and the Portuguese authorities regarding Delagoa Bay are not settled, but the general principles have been agreed upon, and the final draft will be ready for signing at the end of the month. The agreement will follow the main lines of the present modus vivendi, the chief fresh feature being a clause allocating to Delagoa Bay half at least of the Transvaal traffic. This will not involve joint management of the wharf at Delagoa Bay by a board of control, but there will, of course, be perfect understanding between the two administrations regarding the methods of handling trade. The principle of free trade for the products of the Transvaal in Mosambique will be maintained, and the agreement will cover all points between the two Governments, but apart from the definite allocation of a minimum of 50 per cent. of railway traffic, it is understood that there are no new features of importance.

Women Form Military Companies.

There is a company of young women at Brunn, Moravia, who evidently believe that they will some day be called upon to defend their country, for they parade every Sunday in a dashing uniform and carry rifles. Their marksmanship and soldierly bearing have won the admiration of the citizen, says an Austrian paper, and the officers of the Amazon organization say: "We feel proud of our men." In Servia women have also formed military organizations, but these are not only for target practice and exhibition drills, but for home defence. A picture recently received in this country shows a non-commissioned officer drilling a squad of women, composed of housemaids, shopgirls and factory employes. They stand at attention, the firearms in strange contrast with skirts, aprons and plumed hats.

The Climate of Arabia.

Of Arabia's climate a writer says: "The desert air is extremely dry and clear, always invigorating, and even the great heat in summer is not as insupportable as in a damper climate where the thermometer is probably lower. Climate has without doubt a great effect on the human character and intellect, and the narcotic, high-strung temperament of the Arab is to a great extent the creation of his environment of desert, with its splendid mirages to fire the imagination and sparkling air to keep the nerves always alert."

WANTED THEM SAVED.

Lincoln Stuck to His Selection of a Hospital Chaplain.

The nomination of a Mr. Shrigley of Philadelphia, a Universalist, for the position of chaplain for the hospital was not met with favor on all sides, and a delegation of protestants went to Washington to see President Lincoln on the subject. The following interview was the result:

"We have called, Mr. President, to confer with you regarding the appointment of Mr. Shrigley of Philadelphia as hospital chaplain."

"Oh, yes," replied the president. "I have sent his name to the senate, and he will no doubt be confirmed at an early date."

One of the young men replied, "We have not come to ask for the appointment, but to solicit you to withdraw the nomination."

"Ah," said Lincoln, "that alters the case. But on what grounds do you wish the nomination withdrawn?"

The answer was, "Mr. Shrigley is not sound in his theological opinions."

The president inquired, "On what questions is the gentleman unsound?"

"He does not believe in endless punishment. Not only so, sir, but he believes that even the rebels themselves will be finally saved," was the reply.

"Is that so?" inquired the president. The members of the committee responded, "Yes, sir."

"Well, gentlemen, if that is so and there is any way under heaven whereby the rebels can be saved, then, for God's sake and their sakes, let the man be appointed."

Mr. Shrigley was appointed and served until the end of the war.

THE GREAT BOMBARDMENT.

A Constant Rain of Missiles Upon the World's Atmosphere.

The regions of space beyond our planet are filled with flying fragments. Some meet the earth in its onward rush; others, having attained inconceivable velocity, overtake and crash into the whirling sphere with loud detonation and ominous glare, finding destruction in its molecular armor or perhaps ricochetting from it again into the unknown. Some come singly, vagrant fragments from the infinity of space; others fall in showers, like golden rain, all constituting a bombardment appalling in its magnitude.

It has been estimated that every twenty-four hours the earth or its atmosphere is struck by 400,000,000 missiles of iron or stone, ranging from an ounce up to tons in weight. Every month there rush upon the flying globe at least 12,000,000,000 iron and stone fragments, which, with lurid accompaniment, crash into the circumambient atmosphere.

Owing to the resistance offered by the air few of these solid shots strike the earth. They move out of space with a possible velocity of thirty or forty miles per second and, like moths, plunge into the revolving globe, lured to their destruction by its fatal attraction. The moment they enter our atmosphere they ignite, and the air is piled up and compressed ahead of them with inconceivable force, the resultant friction producing an immediate rise in temperature, and the shooting star, the meteor of popular parlance, is the result.

A Subtle Hint.

A representative in congress, who is the father of several bright girls, tells a story whereof one daughter is the main figure.

"For a long time," says the representative, "I had the bad habit of hanging about the lower floor when the girls had men callers. One evening I had settled in an easy chair in the reception room just off the drawing room when one of my girls, who was talking to a bright chap from our own state, called out:

"'Dad!'

"'What is it, daughter?'

"'It's 9 o'clock, the hour when Tom and I usually go into committee.'"

When an Ostrich Kicks.

"The only safe place in the neighborhood of a kicking ostrich is just behind it," said a zoo keeper. "An ostrich can kick a mule to death, but its kicks are delivered at an angle of 45 degrees. Within those 45 degrees, right abaft the 'pope's nose' of the bird, there is absolute safety. On the ostrich farms of California, when the herds are being driven, you will always see the ostrich boys holding on to the tails of bad kickers. The kickers tear along, and their scaly legs shoot out like piston rods, but the boys in the shelter of the pope's nose are safe."

Condemnation.

"What do you think of members of European aristocracy as sons-in-law?" asked the old time friend.

"Well," answered Mr. Cumrox, "the way their relatives boss them around indicates that they ought to make easy husbands."

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

Weary, Worn Out, Tired

M, You Feel Poorly this Spring this Article is worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health. If the nerves are weak, if the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys, fail to work properly, healthy, surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health—the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Burton of Lewistown. "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depressions, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned of the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvellous. I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr Hamilton's Pills. 25c. at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

Lindsay's Factory Gone

Lindsay, May 6.—It is understood that the proposition to start a graphite industry in Lindsay has fallen through. The promoters were anxious to secure four or five gentlemen who would subscribe seven thousand dollars each, but were unsuccessful. It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state read what J. W. Jervell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed. Late and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills—They possess mystic powers surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

Burleigh Falls Power Again before Council

An emergency meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council was called last night at the request of Mr. J. A. Culverwell, of the Central Ontario Power Company, Limited, who desired to place before the city a proposition whereby the city would purchase Burleigh Falls power and have a good supply of electric energy for all time to come. Mr. Culverwell was accompanied by the solicitor for the company, Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., of Lindsay and Toronto, who is also a prominent shareholder.

These two gentlemen placed their proposition before the council. They want the city to purchase Burleigh Falls power and develop it themselves or to purchase it developed from the company. They said they are having a report by a prominent engineer prepared now and that it would be ready about the end of next week. As soon as it was they would give it to the council as the company is very anxious to do business with the city.

It is a well known fact that the city would like to purchase the Burleigh Falls power and have been for several years. From the discussion which took place last night however, it seems more than likely that something definite will result very shortly.

After hearing the representatives of the company and after discussing the matter the committee passed the following resolution;

Moved by Ald. Bradburn and seconded by Ald. Buller, that the Central Ontario Power Co., be asked if they wish to sell Burleigh Falls to the city, and if so will they give the city an option, and the offer will be given serious and prompt consideration by the council, as the council is desirous of having this power property purchased by the city.

One Hundred Years Old on Monday Joseph Mantell in Good Health

Resident of Peterborough who Remembers the Battle of Waterloo—He Tells Many Very Interesting Stories of the Early Days in Canada—People were Happy and Contented—

In striking contrast does Mr. Joseph Mantell stand out in comparison with the men of the present generation. Mr. Mantell will on Monday celebrate his 100th birthday. He was born in England on May 10th, 1809, and he has had a most remarkable career. Born as he was in the days when travel was practically unknown; when a babe was born and died on the same farm and knew not the country 20 miles away from him; when schools for the poor were a curiosity; when the man without means knew little of anything except hardship; he has seen a wonderful transformation, the greatness of which only men who have witnessed it can realize as he does.

Mr. Mantell is now residing with his grandson, Mr. J. C. Edwards, 492 Charlotte street. Mr. Edwards is connected with A. W. Creasman & Co., and has resided in the city for the past two years.

The subject of this sketch sailed from England in August, 1837, and arrived at Quebec on June 14, being on the ocean six weeks and three days. From Quebec he went to Montreal and from there to Prescott by boat, which was drawn by oxen and horses. This last trip took three eight days and during that time they experienced several storms. The boat was tied up every night and it afforded no shelter whatever, so that during the storms the only thing for them to do was to lie on the beach and take it. It was an experience which few men of today could stand, or would care to face. The trip was continued to Toronto which had only been created a city some two years previously.

When Mr. Mantell arrived at Toronto he was just in time to take part in the rebellion. He was also appointed by the government, along with a Mr. Wilson, to make an inventory of the property left by the discontents. They went as far as Capt. Gibson's property, but as very little of value was found they abandoned their commission.

The subject of the sketch was a shoemaker by trade, and he worked on the bench for about 67 years, although that time was broken by a venture at farming and at butchering. While a younger man he travelled about the country considerably and worked in many towns, including a year in Cobourg about 71 years ago. He was a shoemaker while at Timoonburg, and worked at the trade until two years ago, when he moved to Peterborough with Mr. and Mrs. Edwards.

Mr. Mantell was married about 1837 but his wife predeceased him several years. He has two sons, George and James living in Timoonburg, and one daughter, Mrs. Colquhoun, living in London.

Some 50 years ago he joined the Masonic Order, and has been an enthusiastic member of the craft ever since. Last St. John's night, Mr. Mantell paid a visit to Corinthian and Peterborough lodges, and took part in the celebration. As a result of that visit the Masonic Sun, the official organ, made a lengthy reference. Mr. Mantell is, probably the oldest Mason in Canada. His membership is with King Hiram Lodge, Timmonburg.

Mr. Joseph Mantell was seen by a Times representative yesterday, and the old gentleman was found in the best of health and spirits, and did not look nearly as old as one would expect. As a matter of fact one would guess he was not more than 80. The knee he is a little stooped, and is a little hard of hearing, but he can see to read without glasses. In fact he very seldom uses glasses, while his voice is as clear and penetrating as a young man's. During the past winter he was confined to the house pretty well because the snow and ice disappeared, he goes out every day, and on Thursday was digging in the garden. He said his back pained him a little but that would come alright as soon as he did a little more work. He is delighted with the fine weather and is longing for the days when he can get out for his walks and spend hours in the garden.

Mr. Mantell has in his possession several coins of much value. One is an English penny of 1812, which he brought out from the old country with him. Another is a copper issued by Rutherford Bros. of New Foundland, in 1846. He has another penny of 1813, and an American quarter of 1821. This coin he has had for over fifty years. All of them are well preserved, he having kept them in paper in a little bag which he always carries.

Four Young Ladies Graduate as Nurses from Nicholls Hospital

Young Ladies were Buried in Flowers sent by Admiring Friends —Splendid Addresses, Talented Artists, and a Clever Valedictory Made Up the Programme

Four more nurses have graduated from Nicholls Hospital, and last night received their diplomas and medals. The exercises were held in the Assembly Hall in the College Institute, and that handsome hall was well filled with a greatly interested audience. The friends of the nurses and the friends of the hospital were out in force, and warmly applauded the charming young ladies who have given up their lives and talents to the nursing profession, and who have spent the past three years in hard training in order that they might take their position in the world with a greater degree of efficiency.

The graduating exercises of the nurses are always looked forward to with much interest and pleasure, and this year was no exception. This was, however, the first year that it has been possible to admit any large number of the public, as a suitable hall was not available before, but the collegiate hall is specially well adapted for functions of this nature.

Besides the four young ladies in the graduating class, the full nursing staff of the hospital was present, including the superintendent and her assistants, and they occupied the front row of seats. On the platform were the board of directors of the hospital, and Mr. Reb. Hall the chairman of the board, and of the Nicholls estate, along with Dr. Scott and Dr. Cameron, who took part in the program.

The program was of an exceptionally interesting nature. The addresses were good, and the musical numbers were greatly appreciated. The graduates, after they had received their diplomas and medals were were literally buried in flowers. Large numbers of friends sent beautiful bouquets of roses, carnations, lily-of-the-valley and other fragrant blossoms so that the girls were obliged to pile them on chairs after their arms were filled. The floral contributions were an eloquent tribute to the young ladies whose attentive services in the hospital have won for them a warm spot in the hearts of many.

Chairman Richard Hall in opening the exercises, stated that he thoroughly appreciated the large attendance. It showed the growing interest in the hospital work. Since the training school for nurses was opened 70 young ladies had graduated and today many of those are holding prominent positions in Canada and the United States. The staff this year consists of 17 nurses, while the medical staff is excellent. Last year 500 patients were treated and only 20 deaths occurred. The city is particularly fortunate in having such an institution. The Nicholls Hospital will compare very favorably with any other hospital in Canada or for that matter in America.

REV. DR. LANGFELDT.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt stated that everyone was no doubt delighted to be present to pay their respects to those young ladies, who have, by their studious labors, succeeded in reaching the goal of their ambitions. These young ladies will now start out in the world to follow their chosen profession, which is assisting their fellow beings. The reverend doctor paid a tribute to the staff and the hospital, and referred in very warm terms to the late Mrs. Nicholls who endowed the institution and who has provided in a large measure for its maintenance. He appealed to the citizens of Peterborough to accept their share in forwarding the interests of Nicholls Hospital so that in future it will be even better than at the present time although Nicholls Hospital will now compare very favorably with any other. At the present time an enlargement of the hospital is needed and is very necessary. It will, in fact, have to be constructed very shortly. The speaker then paid a high tribute to the nursing profession which he styled as the greatest profession for alleviating the sufferings of humanity. He gave to the graduating class a motto, "For as much as ye have done it unto one of Mine, etc." and in conclusion he pointed out to the graduates the danger of allowing the profession to degenerate into a mercenary consideration, a state of affairs, which, would be much regretted. He paid a high tribute to the doctors on the staff, and he said he would like to see a house surgeon engaged in the hospital. He complimented the nurses and the graduates of the Nicholls Hospital, and appealed to those who were graduating this year to always be loyal to their alma mater.

DR. CAMERON.

Dr. Cameron as representative of the staff expressed his great pleasure at being allowed the privilege of this addressing the graduates on this occasion. He said that in future he would like to see more money available for the carrying on of the hospital work; for enlarging the hospital and the engaging of a house surgeon. He expressed his appreciation of the nursing staff, who had always been of great assistance to the doctors, and who had been of even more assistance to the patients. In reference to nursing as a profession he said that it was the greatest of all labors in which a woman can indulge. He suggested to the nurses to set up for themselves a high ideal and to labor to realize that ideal. He gave the history of Florence Nightingale, one of the noblest women in history. The hospital is the outgrowth of the introduction of christianity and the nurses are the women of the church, and it has been continuously growing side by side with christianity. He said to the graduating nurses that they might take Florence Nightingale as a model to go by and to always remember that a nurse must be thorough. One who is not is worthless. She should also always be ready for service, no matter what the conditions are, whether in a poor home or a rich one.

The presentation of diplomas and medals was one of the most interesting features of the evening. The graduating nurses, Miss Laura G. Elliott, Miss Clara E. Elliott, Miss Reta M. De LaMatter and Miss Isabel J. Smith, advanced to the platform where Dr. W. D. Scott gave them the solemn declaration. Following this Mr. Richard Hall presented the young ladies with their diplomas, and Mr. John McClelland presented the medals which were pinned on by Miss M. E. De Le Matter, the superintendent of the hospital.

Dr. Scott then presented Miss Smith with the prize for the bandaging contest, and congratulated her upon her success which, he said, was an additional distinction as all the class had done exceptionally well.

THE VALEDICTORY.

Miss Laura G. Elliott, the young lady who headed the class at the examinations, read the valedictory address, an honor which is the highest in the gift of the board, and which is keenly sought for by the candidates. Miss Elliott's address was cleverely prepared and well read. In it she displayed considerable literary talent and proved herself worthy of the honor conferred upon her.

Those who assisted in the musical part of the program, and who added considerably to the pleasure of the audience and the success of the evening were;—Mr. Frank Bemrose, tenor, of Toronto; Miss Helen Davies, soprano; Miss Carrie Reesor, soprano; Mr. John Crane, tenor, and Miss Meldrum, pianist.

Farmer Fell on Wire, Body Burning for Hours

Hamilton, May 7.—Robert Richards, 68 years of age, a farmer residing three miles south of Beamsville, was instantly killed early this morning on the line of the Toronto and Niagara Power Company, and his body is slowly burning to a crisp, while those around are unable to rescue the corpse. It has been across the wires now for several hours.

The wire fences, ground and trees, a short distance from Richards' home, appeared to be alive with electricity, early this morning, making a spectacular display. The farmer went out to locate the cause of the trouble. When he did not return neighbors made a search and were horrified to see his body lying across one of the high tension wires which had fallen during the night.

Sparks were flying from the body and the odor of burning flesh was sickening.

Several of those who made an attempt to get near him received severe shocks. A doctor was called from Beamsville, and while he did not examine the body, he said death must have been instantaneous. Everything for a considerable distance around was charged with electricity. An urgent message was sent to the company's offices at Niagara Falls, asking that the power be turned off for a time.

The electrical storm last night between here and Niagara was unusually violent, and a number of barns were burned.

Peterborough Canoe Co. Desire to Enlarge

The Peterborough Canoe Company has been growing so rapidly the past few years that they can no longer handle the amount of business necessary in their present premises. They are preparing to greatly increase their capacity and to do so necessitates the erection of more buildings. The company now occupy all the land they possess and more land is required. To overcome their difficulty they have applied to the City Council for that piece of property lying between their factory and the C.P.R. They also desire to have a spur from the C.P.R. run into their premises.

Last night Mr. C. Rogers and Mr. E. A. Peck appeared before the Committee of the Whole Council and placed their proposition before the aldermen. Besides the land the company asked for a fixed assessment of $6000.

They are now employing 65 men and will employ many more when they have increased their capacity.

The council heard their proposition and referred it to the Manufacturers' Committee, who will take the matter up at an early date.

May be a Charge in the Kinrade Case

Toronto, May 7.—The written report of Mr. George Tate Blackstock, K.C., on the Kinrade case is now in the hands of the attorney-general, and it is understood he has also received that of Dr. Bruce Smith and Dr. Clarke.

This latter is expected to contain a finding as the result of their observations in the court room, which may prove to be rather startling. It is understood that the two reports will be taken up within a day or two and action by the Crown may follow early week.

WHY WAS CONFERENCE HELD?

It was rumored today that the sudden conference held on Tuesday evening between Mr. Blackstock and Mr. Washington, the Crown Attorney, on the one hand, counsel for the Kinrades on the other, had something to do with the views of the alienists. It is certain that the coroner and jury were surprised at the cutting short of the evidence that night. It is known that the Crown had several other witnesses who had been subpoenaed to attend, including Mr. Kinrade and Florence, and some from Hamilton, but the plans about calling them were suddenly altered.

WAS THERE AN UNDERSTANDING

It was also noticeable that there appeared to be an understanding between the Crown and Mr. Lynch-Staunton, and that only once did the latter object to a question, and this was in the case, not of "Jimmy" Baum, but of Detective Pender, who was balled at the request of the jury, and not at the instance of Mr. Blackstock.

There was, in many respects, an intimation that for both sides the torial character, and appeared to have become of little value.

If such was the case, it would be not difficult to surmise what lay behind.

CHARGE MUST BE LAID.

In the event of such a report being received from the doctors as would support a theory of mental weakness in the part of any one connected with the case, it would be difficult for the Crown to take any direct step. It would still be necessary for a formal charge to be laid, and a formal trial began.

LUNG TROUBLE

PROMPTLY RELIEVED AND PERMANENTLY CURED BY INHALING CATARRHOZONE.

Mrs. Hay Brown, of Tuscarora, N. S., was cured by Catarrhozone of lung trouble and Catarrh after hundreds of other remedies failed.

If your lungs are weak; if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is so readily adapted for these diseases and cures every time.

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an inhaler, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices and numerous other remedies, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so close, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler the local symptoms such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Fortunate indeed, which are taken after each meal, purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

They are Mr. M. J. Butler, deputy minister of railways and canals; Mr. D. Pottinger, present general manager of the road; Mr. Tiffin, traffic manager, and Mr. Brady, who has had extensive experience as a superintendent in the C.P.R. service. Mr. Butler is recognized as an an eminently capable man, and his appointment will be hailed with pleasure; Mr. Pottinger and Mr. Tiffin have thorough knowledge of the road and its business. Mr. Brady should bring the needed capacity to the work before him. It has been the custom for those interested in maintaining the present disastrous conditions on the Government railway, says the Montreal Gazette, to represent that it was built for political purposes and through an inferior country. Those who have read Sir Sanford Fleming's report on the location of the line know that there were commercial as well as military grounds for choosing the northern route. Anyone who takes the trouble to look at a time-table and note the number of thriving business centres along the line of the Intercolonial from Montreal to Sydney, will appreciate that for such a length of line there are few better situated railway properties in Canada. The Intercolonial has been a business failure because its management has been political and not commercial, and because things have been done with a far object at elections instead of out of regard for its finances. Thanks to the wise railway policy of the Laurier Government with reference to the Intercolonial there will be no more such mismanagement and the road will soon be on a sound and prospering financial basis.

LOGAN—HAMILTON.

A quiet wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. W. C. Taylor, 178 London St., when Miss Margaret Stella Hamilton, daughter of the late William Hamilton, was united in marriage to Mr. John B. Logan, son of Mr. John Logan, Charbrooke street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Bishop, and was witnessed by a number of the immediate friends of both parties, the bride and groom being unattended.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself at home. I want to relieve your burden. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will permit me.

All you need do is to write for a free test of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this is how you came to read this—it has done for others. If so, I shall be happy that you will be saved, for it (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. B. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

The "Lonely" Bishop.

Bishop Le Roy, Bishop of Zanzibar—in whose diocese Livingstone died—is now visiting Paris. He is a remarkable man, and has succeeded in doing what no other Bishop of Central Africa did—secured the confidence of the natives. Many boys whom he governed for "children of the happiest years of my life," he says, without his personality in no way to be found in his environment, wept. For instance, he thinks that there is nothing like a ride in a tramcar to get into touch with people, and there is the story of the Bishop who, on his first visit to the Mission, found the natives in the act of burning witches at the stake. He put a stop to it, and when the other Bishops, who, I think, you're "lonely." "That's what I am," adds the dean, "I'm lonely."

Sorry Instead.

By the death, just announced, of the fifth Baron Howth without issue, the title becomes extinct. The late lord had attained the ripe age of 80 years, and had never married. He was not at all fond of society, and lived a very secluded life, with the exception of a few years in the station, when he was Aide Decamp to the Earls of Carlisle and Kimberley respectively during their vice-royalty of Ireland. During the half-dozen years he was Aide Decamp to Lord Howth Castle is a most peculiar-looking old tree, which would certainly have fallen to pieces many years ago but for the aid of many props and iron hoops, which gave it the appearance of being in a cage. The story goes that it has been prophesied that when this tree went the family would become extinct. There is no question about it that the tree is practically gone, and has been up for many years. For the last twenty years the late lord had been a great invalid, and spent all of his time either at Pau or Bournemouth.

To Grab Land.

According to advices from Auckland (N.Z.), Colonel W. E. Goldgrun, resident Commissioner at Rarotonga, is proceeding to the disturbed Cook Islands on board the cruiser Cambrian, with full powers to deal with the difficulties that have arisen in Mangaia and Rakahanga, which are stated to be due to local jealousy. The natives of Rakahanga hauled down the British flag on July 1 last, and after ejecting the island council appointed their own Government, judges and police. The ringleaders of the movement was a dismissed teacher of the London Missionary Society.

Wanted No Queen.

A strange incident occurred at Gorey, Wexford, Ireland, recently, on the arrival of the Lord Abbot of the Order of St. Benedict, in connection with the removal of Father Sweetman, the local superintendent, and the installation of Father Cunliffe, an Englishman, in his place. Hundreds of excited people met the train, and as the abbot's consecration declared that they would have no Englishmen, and that there would be trouble if he was brought. Eventually the abbot consented to stay the removal for the present, and the crowd dispersed cheering.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, that one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden, tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more compelling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have their own controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds. It strengthens. It does real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen those Nerves — re-establish them as needed, with

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 16 claims 245 acres in Yavapai, County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savey, Richenbar, First Home, Bearietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Luna Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $1942.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one. It does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chasmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 65 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense sheets already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entanglings alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000. are selling stock at 25c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

WILD MEN OF AUSTRALIA.

Northern Part of Island Contains Many Degenerate Whites.

The wild white men of the vast "Never Never Land," of Northern Australia, to whom Rev. T. Major is conducting a mission, are known to our colonial cousins as "white blackfellows," an expression that, while involving a certain contradiction in terms, nevertheless fits them to a nicety.

Some of these voluntary outcasts from their kind are present-day fugitives from justice. Others are the descendants of runaway convicts who "took to the bush" in the bad old days of transportation. They live amongst the aborigines, aping their manners and customs, and subsisting on the same always scanty and frequently loathsome food. According to Mr. Major, they are exceedingly shy and difficult to approach, fleeing at the first sign of a "tame" white man.

The mere idea of individuals of our race and color sinking to this low level is revolting. Yet the Australian white blackfellow has his counterpart in other quarters of the globe, notably in the Guiana hinterland, where whole colonies of white savages are known to be interspersed amongst the bush negroes, than whom no more degraded race exists anywhere on earth. Like the wild whites of the Never Never Land, too, these unhappy people are descended from runaway convicts, mostly French.

Then, again, there are the small isolated communities of white Indians, so-called, which recent research has revealed living at various points near the head-waters of the Amazon. Ethnologists have been completely puzzled as to their origin. They possess the Caucasian features, and in the dialects they speak can be traced many more or less archaic Spanish words and phrases.

This has led to the theory being broached that they are the descendants of some of the followers of Orellana, the discoverer of the Amazon, some hundreds of whom are known to have deserted their leader and wandered aside into the pathless forests during the first stage of his arduous and ever-memorable journey.

First Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. Reginald McKenna, who is very much in the limelight just now on account of the navy discussion, has a genius for figures, and more than once has swamped his critics with an avalanche of hard facts and figures when they were speaking in generalities. He is one of the younger members of the Cabinet, being now in his forty-fifth year. Before he entered Parliament he practiced as a barrister. He is one of the athletes of the Commons, rowing bow in the Cambridge University eight of 1887, and winning the Grand and Stewards' Cups at Henley. It was in this race, by the way, that the celebrated Oxford oarsman, Mr. D. H. McLean, broke his oar when the Dark Blues were gaining ground as the result of a spurt.

It may be remembered that Mr. McKenna was married last year, a fact which recalls rather an amusing incident. Mr. McKenna was arguing in the House of Commons one night in favor of the Government's Old-Age Pension scheme of 5s. for people living alone and 3s. 6d. for old couples living together. "It is relatively cheaper," he said, "for two persons living together than for one." The House began to chuckle, for it was only a fortnight since that Mr. McKenna was married. "Well, you ought to know by this time," commented the burly Labor man, Mr. Will Thorne, in stentorian tones. The House roared. Mr. McKenna blushed.

Got Hubby's Job.

A Hull couple's wedding has just been postponed owing to the bride, who is a typist, having obtained her intended husband's employment. This singular sequel was the result of an arrangement between the parties, made at the bride's request, that she might help in swelling the household income for a few months. She was already in employment, but an advertisement offering a bigger salary for a typist tempted her to write for the situation. She was successful in obtaining the appointment. A few days later her fiance told her that the wedding must be postponed because he had lost his employment. It then transpired that she had obtained his work at a reduced salary. The bride was sorely perplexed, but in the circumstances, she could but accept the inevitable, and the preparations for the wedding were countermanded. The bride had cherished the anticipation that she would have been able to accompany her husband as he would have been but for this contretemps, to and from work.

Didn't Believe the Duke.

Stories of amusing situations caused by the Duke of Norfolk's negligence in dress are still going the rounds. A short time ago he observed that some members of a party of excursionists had damaged some of the foliage on his estate, so, going up to the strangers, he began to remonstrate with them. "Ain't the duke got any keepers," exclaimed one of the men, sullenly, "that a little chap like you should interfere?" The duke smilingly replied that he happened to be the duke himself. But the tripper wouldn't believe it. "Go on!" he said, laughing heartily. "Why, the duke goes to dine at Marlborough House, and they'd never have a little man like you even in the servants' hall."

"It Never Too Late to Learn."

It is not very often that a man starts learning a foreign language when he has reached the 'seventies. Lord Brassey, however, who has been giving his views on the naval problem, is a firm believer in the saying, "It's never too late to learn." Two or three weeks ago he celebrated his 73rd birthday, and it was only last year that he started to learn German in order to read Prince Hohenlohe's "Memoirs." He adopted the system that when he did not know a word he put a number over it and in the margin, and looked it up in the dictionary. When he began the book he had to look up twenty-five words of a page, and slowly got down to five.

WAHSATCH MINING COMPANY

Capital Stock 300,000 Shares ; Par $5 ; 20,000 10 per cent. Cumulative Preferred ; 280,000 Common Stock.

Property at Bingham City, Utah, on the main line of the Oregon Short Line Railroad.

This property is the result of twenty years of labor and the expenditure of $150,000 by its President, B. C. Baker, director of the Commercial National Bank of Ogden. It is opened in fourteen places; there is a complete equipment and full line of supplies on hand. The preferred stock, which has been up to this time in the treasury, is being sold to provide for the working capital which O. A. Palmer, Engineer of the Ontario Silver Company, with a record of $15,000,000 in dividends, says is necessary to make a dividend payer. Enough stock has been placed to assure the running of the property. President Baker reports that within three months from the date of starting the mill the mine can net $11,000 a month. This means 10 per cent. on the preferred and 7 per cent. on the common.

Wahsatch will be listed at once on the Boston Curb Market and later application will be made to the Boston Stock Exchange. After listing on the Boston Curb, all offers will be withdrawn. Not a share of the preferred will be sold for less than par and not a share of common for less than $1.00. Further, I stand ready to take any or all offers of stock at these prices.

Now you can buy this stock before listing and sell within two months at an advance. Your preferred stock will positively sell at $7.00 and the common at par within a short while. Furthermore, to each purchaser of a round lot I will agree to transport him or his representative to the mine. I have sold of a winner and shall use it as a clientele increaser.

O. A. Palmer, M.E., says, "To insure proper development and to get the best results in the shortest time, there should be a reserve fund created to draw on of at least $35,000 or $40,000 for the purpose, and from my examination of this particular section and long familiarity and experience with the mining districts and the largest producers of ore in the Wahsatch Range, there is no doubt that the Gold Hill Group of mines will, with this expenditure, be placed on a paying basis.

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

Will Build an Addition

The accommodation at Mount St. Joseph is becoming too inadequate and a large addition to the building will probably be made. Definite arrangements to have the addition built have not been made yet, but it is simply a matter of time when the increased accommodation will have to be provided. It is expected that the operations in connection with the new wing will be commenced this summer.

Interior Work at Armouries

Tenders are called for interior fittings of the armouries, the notice of which may be found in another column. As far as can be learned this is largely the company lockers and other wooden work. Each company has its own room, and these have to be fitted up for the volunteers' "digs." The fittings of the band room have also to be done, and work of a similar nature in other rooms.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Sheop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will well cover the cost. (And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Sheop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Sheop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Sheop's Restorative is so universally recommended. Its success is making druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

One Hundred Years Old

very interesting stories to tell. He remembers the Battle of Waterloo, which was 98 years ago. There were bon fires and processions, and a great time generally in England when the news arrived. He started to work when only ten years of age, and speaks of that period in English history, as the dark age. The wealthy persons kept rooks which it was a crime to shoot, and his first job was to chase these rooks from the farmers' grain fields. He had to be on the job at daybreak and remain until sundown, or about 16 hours. The cruelty exercised by the people of those days would not be tolerated for a minute in any part of the civilized world today.

In Canada Mr. Mantell had great experiences. He arrived here in the days of hardships, when the people knew nor looked for anything else. While he was farming he tells of the trips to market. They got up at two o'clock in the morning, and prepared their load which took until daylight. Then they had several streams to cross which meant unloading and loading several times, and then when they arrived at Port Stanly, the nearest grist mill they often found a mile of teams ahead of them. Everyone had to line up and take their turn. This meant that they got home next day. In these days they only got 40 cents a bushel for wheat and that was considered a big price. But everything was cheaper then. Beef was one and one and a half cents per pound; butter 6c a pound; potatoes 12c a bushel, eggs 6c a dozen, etc. As a butcher he bought hundreds of sheep at $1 each, and some times as low as 65c each.

But with all their hardships, long hours, and the scarcity of money Mr. Mantell says the people were happier then and more contented. All were on the same footing. One man had no more than another.

Disease of The Kidneys Brought on By Catarrh.

Pe-ru-na Made a Well Man of Me.

I Cannot Speak Too Highly of It.

Mr. George King, 403 St. Denis Ste. Montreal, Canada, a well-known business man of that city, writes:

"Peruna cured me from what the doctors were afraid would turn into Bright's disease, and after you have gone through the suffering that I have with catarrh of the bladder and kidney trouble, and have been cured you are pretty apt to remember the medicine that did the work.

"Peruna is a blessing to a sick man. Eight bottles made me well and were worth more than a thousand dollars to me. I cannot speak too highly of it. It is now four years since I was troubled, and I have enjoyed perfect health since. Every spring and fall I take a bottle of it and it keeps me well."

MR. GEORGE KING

CATARRH of the kidneys is a very much neglected disease.

It is not until the disease has a firm hold upon the kidneys that the patient begins to realize that there is some derangement of these organs.

The slight backaches, the feelings of lassitude, and other warning symptoms of kidney disease are overlooked.

They are not serious enough to detain the patient from his regular work.

Even when he discovers that the kidneys are affected, he does not recognize the difficulty as being caused catarrh.

INTERNAL CATARRH ATTACKS THE KIDNEYS.

PE-RU-NA AN INTERNAL CATARRH REMEDY.

Catarrh is sometimes so very gradual in its approach and its earlier symptoms cause such slight discomfort that it is not noticed.

Moreover, when it is once firmly seated in the kidneys it becomes a difficult disease to exterminate.

Indeed, catarrh of the kidneys is more serious than catarrh affecting some of the other organs of the body.

In the kidneys it is liable to terminate in Bright's disease or diabetes, both of which are recognized as very serious ailments, if not fatal.

The thing to be done, when catarrh of the kidneys is discovered, is to take some internal, systemic catarrh remedy, one that reaches the very source of the catarrh and removes the cause of the difficulty.

Such a remedy has been found in Peruna. It reaches catarrh, no matter where it may be located in the body—whether in the more exposed membranes of the nose and throat, or whether in the remotest part of the kidneys.

That Peruna is at once the safest and most reliable remedy for catarrh of the kidneys is proven by the many testimonials written by those who have experienced its benefits.

The testimonials given here are only specimens of the many testimonials on our records, pertaining to the relief afforded by Peruna in severe cases of kidney trouble.

Kidney Disease of Long Standing.

Mr. Samuel A. Paxton, 1118 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo., member I. O. O. F. and National Annuity Association, writes:

"I am a well man to-day, thanks to your splendid medicine, Peruna. I was troubled with catarrh and kidney disease of long standing when I first began using Peruna. I soon found I was getting better and continued taking it for four months. It cleaned out the system, leaving me well and strong and feeling better than I have in years."

St. Yves Again Captures The New York Marathon---Shrubb Wins From Tom Longboat

Marsh Leads at the End of the First Mile—Unable to Stand the Fast Pace—St. Yves Finished in Easy Fashion—Objibway Indian Gets Fourth Money

New York, May 8.—At 4 o'clock this afternoon the crack of a pistol in the hands of Hon. Timothy D. Sullivan, sent thirteen sinew-limbed athletes of 26 miles 385 yards for premier honors in the $20,000 international Marathon.

BETTING UNDER COVER

There is some betting going on, but it is under cover, as the officials are endeavoring to suppress it.

Promptly at four p.m., they were sent off on their long journey. Dorando took the lead, closely followed by St. Yves and the Cuban. The others were strung out at the end of the first lap. Dorando is setting a fast pace with St. Yves about a yard behind him. Marsh has run into third position, with Appleby fourth.

This position was maintained until the runners entered the fifth lap, when Marsh sprinted and took the lead. St. Yves followed Marsh and cut Dorando out of the lead. Dorando is third. Appleby fourth and Ohot fifth, and Simpson sixth. The Swede, Svanberg is running easy with a steady but determined stride in eighth place.

Marsh was leading at the end of the first mile, with St. Yves a yard behind and Dorando third, 20 yards behind; Appleby is fourth, ten yards behind Dorando, Simpson fifth. Time 5.09

St. Yves jumped to the front by a sprint and attempted to shake Marsh off, but could not do so. The Third round saw St. Yves in the lead by a yard, Marsh second, Appleby third, the Indian fourth. Dorando fifth, the Swede sixth. This position was maintained to the end of the second mile. Time 10.20.

At the end of the third mile St. Yves was still leading, a yard in front of Marsh, who hangs on and refuses to drop St. Yves' pace. Dorando is third, half a lap behind; Simpson, running easy, is fourth, and Appleby fifth. The others are straggling out. Time 16.07.

MARSH HANGS ON.

The refusal of Marsh to be shaken from the St. Yves pace annoys the Frenchman. He began a sprint in the fourth mile and tried to shake off Marsh, but the Canadian, not to be outdone, put on speed, and at the end of the fifth lap took command and is now leading the Frenchman.

At the end of the fourth mile the two leaders were still hitting it up lively, with Marsh setting the pace and St. Yves a yard behind. Dorando is third and Simpson, still running easily and steadily, fourth. Time 27.51.

Fifth mile—On the third lap Marsh let down and St. Yves, with that steady choppy stride, forged to the lead and is now 60 yards ahead of the Canadian, second. Appleby has pulled up to third place, one yard behind Marsh

At the end of the fifth mile St. Yves had gained 100 yards advantage over Marsh.

Appleby was third and Dorando fourth. Time 37.33. The Swede is running a steady race, a lap behind the leaders. The rest of the field is stretched out.

St. Yves is running steady. Marsh is now 75 yards behind, and leads Appleby by 300 yards. Dorando is fourth, and evidently has settled down for the long grind yet ahead of him. His position ended the sixth mile. Time 33.33.

The vast audience has not exhausted to the situation to any great extent. No bet brushes have occurred up to this time.

St. Yves is losing ground. Marsh is creeping up on him steadily and has reduced his lead to 40 yards.

Marsh leads Dorando by half a lap. Appleby is fourth, close and running easy. Time, 38.30.

On the second lap of the eighth mile St. Yves lapped Appleby and is only 25 yards away from Dorando, who is running third.

The St. Yves' stride is a wonder and bets are now being made that he will not be caught.

St. Yves increasing the pace and at the end of the eighth mile was 100 yards ahead of Marsh, who is three-quarters of a lap ahead of Dorando, third. Appleby is fourth and Svanberg fifth. Time, 44.30.

Simpson, the Indian, has dropped back with the tailenders, but shows no signs of distress.

The runners maintained their places at the start of the ninth mile. The mile ended with St. Yves first by half a lap, Marsh second, 50 yards in the lead of Dorando, and Appleby fourth, a yard behind. The Swede is fifth, 20 yards back. Time, 50.14.

MARSH IN DISTRESS

On the second lap of the ninth mile Marsh stopped to change his shoes. Before St. Yves could gain a lap the Canadian reappeared on the track and started a hot sprint, sprint, which was the signal for the first outburst of applause. St. Yves is now leading Marsh by three-quarters of a lap, but the latter is gaining with every stride.

At the mile St. Yves was leading by three-quarters of a lap. Marsh is second by half a lapp. Dorando third. Time 55.02.

At 5 p.m. the official position of the runners is as follows;

Marsh again leaves track, and is now being vigorously rubbed down by his aides.

Marsh returns to the track after his brisk rub and started a hot sprint. His aides say he is suffering no trouble at all, and merely wanted the rub to loosen up his joints. Marsh's sprint had again carried him into second position, and he is now half a mile behind St. Yves. The 11th mile finished with the two leaders in first position. Marsh being a yard ahead of Dorando. Appleby fourth, 15 yards away. Time 1.02.49.

Twelfth mile—St. Yves' first by a lap and 40 yards; Marsh second by two yards. Dorando third, Svanberg fourth. Time 1.07.49.

The others arestrung out.

THE IRISH BREAK LOOSE

The Irish for noise—pandamonium broke loose in a maelstrome of salvos for Mike Maloney, who cut loose and has increased his pace. He is cutting down the lead of the first division runners some. The crowd shouts encouragement to him and urge him on.

Svanberg is keeping up his steady gait under instructions from his handlers. White and Morrsey seem to be showing the effect of the fast pace. Thirteenth mile, St. Yves Time 1.13.53.

At the end of the 14th mile St. Yves still maintaining his lead. Marsh was tied by a yard. Dorando is third, Svanberg fourth, Appleby fifth. Time 1.20.07.

At the end of the sixteenth mile St. Yves was ahead by a lap and five yards; Svanberg second by 15 yards; Marsh third by half lap; Dorando fourth. Time 1.32.35.

The seventeenth mile finished; St. Yves first by a lap; Svanberg second by a lap; Marsh third; Appleby fourth, Dorando fifth. Time 1.45.52.

The 18th mile ended with St. Yves leading by two laps; Svanberg second by a lap, Marsh third, Appleby fourth, Crook fifth, Simpson sixth, Maloney seventh. Time, 1.45.21.

Nineteenth mile, St. Yves first by two laps; Svanberg second by one lap, Appleby third by half a lap, Marsh fourth. Time 1.51.46.

The twentieth mile finished with St. Yves in the lead by two laps and 25 yards. Svanberg is second by two laps. Appleby is third by one lap, Marsh fourth. Time 1.59.29.

Twenty-first mile; St. Yves first by 2 1-2 laps. Svanberg second, Crook third, Appleby fourth, Marsh fifth. Time 2.05.20.

It is now evident that St. Yves will win easily.

Appleby returns to the track wearing a sweater. He lost only a few seconds' time.

St. Yves, by his steady clocklike stride has increased his lead and at the end of the 22nd mile is ahead three laps. Svanberg second by two laps, Crook third, Marsh fourth. Appleby fifth, Dorando sixth. Time 2.11.10.

St. Yves steadily increasing his lead and the others are falling behind rapidly. At the end of the 23rd mile St. Yves has increased his lead by five laps; Svanberg second, Crook third, Simpson fourth. Time 2.11.53.

Crook and St. Yves are the freshest of the runners and are likely to finish one two. Simpson, the Indian, although tired, still hangs on and may finish third. Svanberg does not appear to be able to finish in the position he now occupies.

Twenty-fourth mile; St. Yves first by 5 laps; Svanberg second, Crook third, Simpson, fourth. Time 2.26.39

St. Yves wins. Time, 2 hours 44 min. 5 seconds.

NEW CHURCH WAS DEDICATED TO THE WORSHIP OF GOD

The new Park street Baptist church was opened yesterday. Large congregations were presented both morning and evening, and there was also a large attendance at the afternoon when the church was dedicated to the worship of God.

The special preacher for the occasion was Rev. W. A. Cameron, pastor of Bloor street Baptist church, Toronto, a brilliant young minister, who is meeting with great success in his work. He preached at the morning and evening services, and also gave an address at the dedicatory services in the afternoon. He dealt with the mission of the church in the world. When Christ had come on earth he had instituted the revitalizing agency of the church. The regeneration of mankind was the true purpose of the Christian church.

The dedicatory prayer was offered up by Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church.

The music at the three services was of an appropriate nature and was splendidly rendered.

A social is being held this evening at which the chair will be taken by Mr. T. F. Matthews.

Has Been Twenty Years in the Presbyterian Ministry

Yesterday was the twentieth anniversary of the ordination of Rev. J. G. Potter to the ministry, and the event was observed by special services at St. Andrew's church. Rev. Alexander McGillivray of Bonar Presbyterian church, Toronto, who ordained Mr. Potter, was the preacher at both services and large congregations were present. At the evening services Mr. McGillivray outlined the duties of the Christian church in an able sermon that was followed with deep interest.

Mr. McGillivray's sermon at the morning service was principally to parents and Sunday school workers.

The musical services at both services were of a high standard. The anthem at the morning service was "Gentle Jesus Gently Lead Us," and at the evening service "Abide with me," the solo being taken by Rev Mr. Potter.

In the morning Miss Mabel McCaw sang very sweetly, "I think when I read that sweet story of old," and at the evening service she sang "Abide with me." Mr. Mortimer Johnston sang a solo in fine voice at the morning service and Principal Downie was heard to fine advantage at the evening service in a solo, "Jesus lover of my soul.

At the evening service Rev. Mr Potter referred in feeling language to the death of Mrs. Wm. Bennet, wife of Rev. Wm. Bennet, who passed away Sunday morning.

A congregational reunion will be held this evening. There is no admission fee and one of the features will be an address by Rev. Mr. McGillivray on "A Trip to the Holy Land," illustrated by limelight views.

Gowganda to be Invaded by the C.P.R.

Montreal, May 8.—So optimistic does the C.P.R. feel as to the immediate future of Gowganda that they will almost at once establish a wagon and launch route all the way from Biscotasing on their main line, a distance of 80 miles, seventy per cent. of the combined transit being by water and thirty by wagon. L. O. Armstrong announced this morning that the canoe service will be eliminated as much as possible during the coming summer.

The launches will be large freight carriers and the wagons similar to the big Ontario farm wagons and with this combined service the company express the belief that they will be able to cope with the very large traffic promised from all quarters as soon as the rush begins a few weeks hence.

They expect that the ice will disappear in two weeks. In fact there is a report received from the front this morning and it will take two weeks additional to perfect the route from Biscotasing to Gowganda for launch and wagon service. By this manner they say that freight can be carried more cheaply than by any other route and the same claim will also apply to passengers.

Mr. Armstrong also says that when the railway is built the launch and wagon route will be continued as a feeder, the farther half from Biscotasing bringing freight and passengers to the railway at Gowganda and the first half to Biscotasing will furnish good accommodation to that place.

"It is now understood," added Mr. Armstrong, "that the canoes will still be used by the first-class passenger service to connect the lake routes, while the wagons will carry the freight and second-class passengers until the roads are fit for fast trotting."

As the crow flies the distance from Biscotasing to Gowganda is 63 miles, but it will be about eighty miles by the new wagon launch route. This distance is given as very accurate by those who are familiar with the country, as well as the contractors who have already a large number of men at work getting the proposed route into shape for the season's rush of prospectors and others who believe, as Mr. Armstrong believes, in the immediate future of Gowganda. He says that they will be able to take all the freight offering by this easy mode of transportation. The surveys of the largest portages are very satisfactory, as the ground in said to be comparatively dry. In fact the advantage of this route is the long stretch of water travel, the start having been made quite near the height of land, there being no up stream work as you near Gowganda, and very little anywhere else. There are long lakes entering into the formation of this new route which was used many years ago by the Hudson Bay Company and one of the main stopping places is Mattagami, famous in Hudson Bay history lore.

At Biscotasing, that starting point, which is reached at four p.m. by the train leaving Toronto at ten p.m. the evening before, there are as many as four good outfitting firms, while there will be hotel accommodation as well as tents and stoves seen in the large American centers of the same kind. The C.P.R. are well satisfied with the expedition used by the contractors, but the expense is very great. Board for the working men at Biscotasing is two dollars per day, while two and two and a half is paid for labor. There will be very comfortable stopping places at one end of each lake, and as everything will be under the control of one concern, there will be absolutely no exorbitant, the rates being railway figures.

J. Allan Baker, M.P. for Finsbury, in the imperial house of commons, will visit Gowganda by the new route, as he and other English capitalists are interested in the rich River Dobie Mine.

Where is "Lady" Dorothy C. Smyly?

Toronto, May 8.—"Lady" Dorothy Theodora Smyly, who came to Toronto last autumn and was introduced to the parish of St. Barnabas, Chester, by the incumbent-in-charge the Rev. C. E. J. Biggs, and also introduced to a number of prominent Toronto families, has disappeared.

Some three weeks ago, without any warning, and leaving no address, she departed for parts unknown, supposedly New York City.

When she came here she rented the house at 101 S. Vincent street, and took up housekeeping.

Shortly after her arrival she visited Rev. Mr. Biggs, whom she knew previously, and who invited her to open a bazaar in Danforth Hall for the ladies of St. Barnabas' Chester.

When she opened the sale she spoke and offered to contribute the sum of $200 towards the funds to liquidate the church debt, provided the bazaar netted a like amount.

Shortly afterwards she was introduced to the Rev. A. G. Hamilton-Dicker of St. Luke's, and he invited her to give an address on her experience as a nurse in the South African War.

Several people with whom she had business dealings during her stay in Toronto are exceedingly anxious to discover her whereabouts.

One of these told a reporter on Saturday she did not owe him a cent, though before he had proclaimed his anxiety to recover about $60.

The servants, three of them, upon her disappearance, searched high and low for their mistress, but finally vacated the house, which was at once taken over by the landlord.

When she came she brought a boy with her, aged 12, who shortly afterward was placed in a prominent city branch bank.

Visitors in town are invited to see our souvenirs before buying hand painted views on china. Prices start at 10 cents each. Times Bookstore.

The Influx of Newcomers to Canada

The influx of newcomers to Canada began with the new century, and was not shown in the census of 1901. Consequently it will all go to swell the population figures in the next census, two years hence. For the year 1900-1 the total immigration was a little over 49,000. The following year it increased to $7,379, and continued to increase annually until 1907-8, when the highest point was reached—262,469. The year following there was a falling off, the figures for eleven months being 139,444, or about 162,000 for the year.

During the past years nearly 1,200,000 people have settled in Canada, and it is estimated that in the two years before the next census will have been taken the number will have increased to about a million and a half. With the addition of the natural increase, the census of 1911 ought to show a population of between seven and eight millions.

Immigration from the United Kingdom commenced in earnest just after the last census was taken, the arrivals from the mother country in 1901-2 totalling 17,259. The high record for British immigration was reached in 1907-8, when the number was 120,102, the number from the European continent in the same year being 63,975, and from the United States 58,312. The decrease in the eleven months of 1908-9 was mainly in British and European immigration. In the same period immigration from the United States reached 56,000, or more than either that from the mother country or the continent of Europe, and it is expected that the present year will see the arrival of 70,000 newcomers from the republic. United States immigration shows less variation in extent than that from any other country, the average for some years past having been slightly below 50,000 a year. The total from the United States for five years was 230,771, of whom 158,388 were agriculturists.

The west is, of course, getting the major portion of this immigration, and while the new population is a racial mixture, most of it is composed of those whom there will be no difficulty in assimilating. In 1907-8, 178,500 were from Great Britain and the United States, and 84,000 from Continental Europe. In the eleven months of 1908-9 immigration from Great Britain and the United States combined was close on 100,000, while that from the continent was no. one-third as many. The assimilating process will also be greatly aided by the large number of Canadians from the older provinces who are each year taking up homes in the West.

Not Drugs

Food Did It

After using laxative and cathartic medicine from childhood a case of chronic and apparently incurable constipation yielded to the scientific food, Grape-Nuts, in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously going from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time.

"A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were partially paralyzed and could not perform their work without help of some kind, so I have tried at different times above every laxative and cathartic known, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use the pre-digested food, Grape-Nuts.

Although I had not expected this food to help my trouble, to me great surprise Grape-Nuts digested immediately from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was just what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently cured of this awful trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food must be understood."

"There's a Reason."

Fire Department Had Long Run

The fire department were called to extinguish a chimney fire at 49 Maria street, Ashburnham. The call came from box 52 at 7.05 p.m., and the department made a splendid run with the hose company but the ladder company did not do so well on account of the new horses being a little green at the work, no damage was done.

Caretakers Getting Parks into Shape

Those in charge of the parks of the city are hard at it endeavoring to make a good showing and before long all these beautiful resorts will be open for the public who are no doubt waiting anxiously for the time to arrive. The parks to the north end of the city should this year be very popular. The seats have all been repainted and everywhere may be found signs that somebody is busy. There has always been much annoyance caused by a certain element who hang around these places with the idea that they own the propert and can do just as they please. But this season the caretakers will have something to say and will have the authority to arrest those who they think are not behaving themselves. By the time the 24th of May arrives all the parks will have been opened to the public who should appreciate the fact that these places are for their own benefit.

Planning Big Trip for Englishmen

London, Ont., May 8.—There are thousands of newly arrived Englishmen in London and the vicinity, and many thousands more who came to London years ago, some of whom are now influential men of the city. They other night they got together and decided to inaugurate a movement for a gigantic old boys' reunion to be held within a year or so.

The scheme is to interest Englishmen in all parts of Canada to charter a steamer, and to take over from 1,000 to 1,500 Englishmen and their wives on a pleasure trip to the old country. Circulars will be sent out, and everyeffort will be made to have a contingent selected from the important cities and towns.

May Have to Face Three Franchises

London, Ont., May 6. — London, the home of the Niagara power movement, has just learned that in case the power is brought here which it must be by December, the city will have three franchises to contend with. One is held by the London Electric Company, one by the Electrical Construction Company, and one by the Helena Company. The London Electric has offered to sell out to the city for the sum of 600,000, and a special committee has recommended to the city council that the offer be accepted.

But the people must vote on the proposition, and as it is alleged Adam Beck is against it, there is likely to be a hot fight, with the odds against the city buying the plant at the price named. The question now arises. What will the other companies demand? They are only small concerns, but there is a danger that they may will out to the more powerful interests which are opposing the introduction of Niagara power in a municipality owned project.

Won't Let Wife Leave Him in Work House

London, May 8.—There is a pauper in Hampstead workhouse who is making a singular exercise of his marital rights—he refuses to sanction his wife's discharge from the union without himself, although she herself wishes to go.

"The man is quite within his legal rights," Mr. C. Russell, the master of the workhouse, said.

"In the whole course of my experience as a workhouse master, however, I have only had one other similar case to deal with.

"The man and his wife, in the present instance, have been in the Hampstead workhouse a considerable while, together with their three children.

"When I mentioned to her husband the fact that his wife wanted to take her discharge I also asked him if she had spoken to him about it. His reply was that she had mentioned it to him, but he objected to her leaving the workhouse without him.

"This being so, I had no alternative, from a strictly legal point of view, but to refuse to grant the discharge."

Shrubb Runs Great Race in Montreal—Many Thousands Crowd Into the City to Witness the Race Longboat Had Many supporters but the Killing Pace was too Much for Him

Montreal, May 8.—Splendid weather conditions favored the great 15-mile race this afternoon between Shrubb, the English 15-mile crack, and Tom Longboat, the Canadian distance runner from the "Tribe of the Onondagas." Yesterday's rain soaked the cinder track at the M.A.A.A. grounds through and through. Warm sunshine from daybreak on today, however, left the track in splendid shape.

The Longboat-Shrubb controversy has raged in Montreal just as fiercely as in many other Canadian cities where there is a large percentage of old country born Englishmen among the population.

Longboat or Shrubb, Shrubb or Longboat, has been the query here for weeks, although there has been very little betting on the result. Even among Longboat's supporters Shrubb is admitted to have rather the better chance, but Shrubb himself looks to Longboat to show a turn of speed that will surprise his best friends.

The pistol cracked at 2.44, and Shrubb jumped in the lead, setting a fast clip.

At the end of the first lap Shrubb was five yards ahead in 1.25.

The Englishman had increased his lead nearly 20 yards. Time, first mile 4.44.

Longboat's time was 4.51.

At the second mile Shrubb was 130 yards ahead in 9.55. Longboat's time 10.15. Big Tim O'Rourke walked about with an anxious look spreading over his face.

Shrubb continued to lead. Time for third mile, 20.32. Longboat, 21.14.

For the fifth mile the runners maintained pretty nearly the same positions.

At this stage there looked to be only one man in the race and the crowd failed to work up enthusiasm.

Small knots of Britonsgave Shrubb the glad hand and cheered him as he passed. Occasionally Longboat was cheered, but the crowd looked on with apathy. Shrubb at the 6th mile had nearly three-fifths of a lap to the good.

In the second lap of the 7th mile Shrubb turned into the straight just as Longboat was turning out at other end. Shrubb's time for seven miles 36.45. Longboat's 38.00.

Longboat slackened up in the 8th mile and Shrubb wanted about 60 yards of a full third of a mile on him. Shrubb covered the 8th mile in 42.15.

The ninth mile mark was passed in 48.01. This was the slowest mile of them all. Shrubb covering the mile in 5.46. Longboat's time 49.55.

At 10 miles Shrubb was 20 yards behind with Longboat pushing his good foot forward to stave off the lap.

Longboat's time 55.57

Lou Marsh ran beside Longboat for a while in the 11th mile and made a 15-yard gain.

Shrubb, as soon as Marsh had left off, started one of his famous sprints and brought the distance down.

CROWD GETS EXCITED.

The crowd began to get crazy with delight at the first semblance of a race at 11 miles. Shrubb ran right on his heels. The time for the 11 miles was 58.45 flat.

Shrubb's time for the journey so far being 59.45

Longboat's time 61.26.

The last two laps of the 12th mile Shrubb ran alongside Longboat and occasionally spoke to the Indian. Time for mile was 5.49.

Shrubb's time for the distance, 65.34; Longboat's 67.24.

Shrubb's time for the 13 miles, 71.33; Longboat, 73.44.

With five laps to go Shrubb began to limp very palpably. Longboat meanwhile showed every indication of coming back. The smile also came back to Tim O'Rourke's face. For a few yards the big fellow ran with Longboat and handed him a sponge.

Shrubb was running easily again at the 14th mile and completed the distance in 77.55.

Longboat, 79.52. The last mile was covered at a good fast clip, but the Indian had started too late and Shrubb won in a sprint in 1.33.57.

Longboat's time was 1.35.46.

Successfully Rescued

Mr. Barry Gibson, of Kingston, was rescued from an enemy that had relentlessly pursued him for years.

Mr. Gibson was born and brought up in Kingston. By profession he is a school teacher. He received his training in Queen's University, where he took a course in arts and medicine that well befits him to talk on ailment any subject.

The enemy that for 25 years relentlessly pursued Mr. Gibson is a menace to our entire population—it is the demon, Catarrh.

Mr. Gibson says:—"For years I was never free from Catarrh of the nose and throat. It bothered me winter and summer and kept me so continually coughing and hawking that I found it a great impediment to the proper performance of my duties at school. I used every available means of obtaining a cure, took bottle after bottle of medicine prescribed by local doctors, but never got more than temporary relief. I consulted a well-known specialist in the States, but after spending a considerable amount of money with him to no advantage, was forced to look elsewhere for relief, which I first received from Catarrhozone.

I consider Catarrhozone a genuine cure for Catarrh. It drove that loathsome disease completely out of my system, and today I am as well as if I never knew what the word Catarrh implied."

A straightforward proof of cure, coming from a well-known gentleman like Mr. Gibson carries conviction of the fact with it that Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it. As a cure for Catarrh and Bronchitis it positively has no equal. All druggists, price $1; small size, 50 cents. By mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

TOWARD INQUISITION

Mr. Blackstock's address to the jury in the Kinrade case was in part an answer to criticisms of the wide range of the examination, and the ordeal to which members of the family were subjected. Law, he said in a progressive science. Formerly accused persons were not competent witnesses. Now they are competent witnesses, and he expects that in a few years they will be not only competent but compellable. Already the process has gone so far that in an inquiry of this kind a person cannot refuse to answer a question on the ground that the answer may tend to incriminate him.

The tendency, then, is toward more inquisitorial methods of obtaining evidence. The Kinrade inquest is a notable example of the new method, and if the method is approved by public opinion and by legislators, and by those charged with the administration of the law, it will become the established practice. The prospect is one which demands very serious consideration. It will mean, in effect, that a large part of the duty which is now discharged by a judge is to be handed over to a physician. In the nature of things there will be much greater latitude in the reception of evidence, and there is grave danger of this latitude being abused.

In a court of law a certain person must be charged with a crime, and no evidence must be admitted which does not intend to implicate that person or to prove his innocence. In a coroner's court it will be possible to use the power of the court over the witnesses to follow up all kinds of clues and theories. No question can be regarded as irrelevant, for any question may lead somewhere. It may tend to establish a theory or to cast doubt upon a theory. A local man within the coroner—the Crowner—who will oppose his judgment to that of the counsel for the Crown in such a case.

Yet it will be difficult to refuse to counsel for the defence the same latitude that will be extended to counsel for the Crown. A witness who could throw light upon a crime might be frightened away by the knowledge that his whole life would be probed and exposed to the public by a lawyer whose professional duty was to try to save the life of the criminal. It may be said that a good citizen ought to be willing to expose his past to assist a court of law. But there are many good citizens whose lives have not been perfect, or who have skeletons in the closet—things which they would not like, for their own sake, or for the sake of others, to have made the subject of glaring newspaper headlines and public gossip. "Five or six unpleasant stories may be told of me," says Montaigne, "as of any man living." Persons whose lives are not models of decorum are quite likely to be important witnesses in murder cases. It is in the public interest to establish such a practice as will cause all who are afraid of the evidence to conceal their knowledge of crimes and to dodge the Crown's Court.

COBALT AS AN OBJECT LESSON

"The significance of the circumstance that rich silver fields have been discovered in Northern Ontario may have escaped notice, possibly, because (as frequently happens) it is too apparent," says the Denver Mining Record. "We refer to the effect thereof upon the attitude of the Atlantic seaboard toward precious metal mining. Ontario is not very far away from New York City and Boston. In fact, the province lies just across Ontario lake from the Empire State, although the silver fields are a considerable distance to the north of Toronto. Contrasted with the vast expanse lying between New York and the Rocky Mountains, the distance is small."

"In years past, when the mining talk wafted across the United States to the eastern coast it loitered under the two-fold disadvantage of the distance. Either it carried too much enchantment or it met with suspicion. The simple wayfarers of the Atlantic region might take the reports from the west too seriously or the wiseacres were apt to set them down as fabrications. Precious metal mining was a remote thing, and the miners could not always count upon justice from their eastern brothers. It is true that copper mining in Michigan is of long standing, but it lacked the romance, perhaps, of gold and silver mining, and it never made much of an impression outside of Boston.

"The search for the precious metals has now become almost a dooryard affair for the New Yorker, the Philadelphian and the Bostonian. They are in a position to gather some of the peculiar spirit that accompanies the grand rush for gold and silver. If fables are spread from Northern Ontario, the easterner is no longer in a place where he can call the westerner names, nor has he so much excuse for credulity and that ignorance of mining boom atmosphere which he formerly alleged. If the nonsensical name of Gowganda which suggests Catoosda, is painted in glittering colors, let it not be said that the westerner supplied the pigment."

"Henceforth we may find thereby end sympathy with the exploratory rites of the precious metal miner boomer. We use the word rites because it is a solemn matter, after all. The mysteries are better understood and the business of finding and making mines is taking on a universal dress. New York has better ground for calling herself a mining center, with matchless silver mines at her door, than when the claim to the distinction was based upon the financing of western enterprises alone. It is really an advantage to the west that a camp like Cobalt has sprung up so close to the strong-holds of the eastern metropolis."

Weak Women

Be weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical nervine membrane supporting remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Riebenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lone Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $129.58.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one. It does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500. for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same lodge, and are now 85 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense sheets already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously. It is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to investigate property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 15c each, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

FITZMAURICE AN EQUERRY.

Minto's Son-in-Law Gets Appointment With Prince of Wales.

The Marquise de Fontenoy writes: The Prince of Wales has earned the gratitude of Lord and Lady Lansdowne and of Lord and Lady Minto by appointing Lord Charles Fitzmaurice to his household in the capacity of equerry, that is gentleman-in-waiting and A.D.C. Lord Charles, who is the second son of the Lansdownes, and who married last Christmas at Calcutta Lady Violet Elliot, the youngest daughter of Lord and Lady Minto, is a captain of the 1st Dragoons, a crack cavalry regiment, which, stationed in India, has several years to serve there before it can hope to be ordered home.

Lord Minto is resigning the viceroyalty of India, owing to his wife's health, and also in consequence of differences with the Secretary for India, Lord Morley, and is returning to England. Lady Violet has always been the apple of his eye, and it is a great relief to him to know that he is not obliged to leave her behind him in India, where the climate, even at the best, is so very trying to white women, especially to young mothers. The next four or five years, that is to say, at any rate until the 1st Dragoons are ordered home, Lord Charles will, thanks to his appointment as equerry to the Prince of Wales, be able to spend in England, his active duties as a member of the heir apparent's household taking up about four months of the year, while during the remainder of the time he will enjoy comparative leisure.

Lord Charles, who served through the South African war, during part of the time as aide-de-camp to Lord Roberts, after taking part in the battles which preceded the arrival of the field marshal at the front, is particularly well fitted to act as equerry to the Prince of Wales, owing to his perfect knowledge of French and to his possession of that quiet, tactful manner which one finds nowhere in such perfection as among those in immediate attendance upon British royalty. He comes by these qualities naturally, for he is descended from the Comte de Flahaut, from the great Tallyrand, and is even credited with having in his veins the blood of King Louis XV. of France, while his mother, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, is one of the principal ladies and most intimate friends and confidantes of Queen Alexandra.

Famous Explorer's Anecdotes.

The great traveler, Mr. Harry De Windt, has just published a book of his reminiscences entitled "My Restless Life." From his innumerable stories the following two are taken: One fine, warm day, nearing the Aleutian Islands, he was sunning himself on the tiny poop, while seated on a long, deep deal box (which, securely lashed to the bulwarks, contained, as he thought, whaling gear), when he became conscious of a sickening smell, yet one so pungent that it overpowered the chronic fumes of boiling blubber. Mr. De Windt asked a sailor, who was at the wheel, what it could be, but the frost-bitten mariner, case-hardened by a long and varied experience of evil odors, sniffed violently, yet could not solve the mystery. But in a moment it dawned upon him.- "Oh, yes," he cried, as if struck by a sudden thought, "that must be our mate. He was killed by a whale up north, and asked to be taken to 'Frisco. So I put him in that box you're sitting on, and I guess the ice is giving out in this warm weather!" At an American hotel a magnificent orchestra performed every evening in the dining-room, but, on one occasion—out of season—the house was so empty that the manager despatched the following wire to the head office of the company: "Only one guest, but orchestra of thirty; what shall I do?" And the prompt reply came: "If guest dissatisfied engage six more musicians."

A "Queer" Preacher.

Rev. Mr. Hagamore, to whose memory is a slab in the church at Catshoge, Leicestershire, England, was "a little queer." It seems that the reverend gentleman died in January, 1855, leaving all of his property, valued at $3,500, to a railroad porter.

This queer old preacher kept one servant of each sex, whom he locked up every night. His last employment of an evening was to go the rounds of his premises, let loose the dogs and fire off his gun. He lost his life in a curious manner. Starting out to let out his servants, the dogs fawned upon him and threw him into a pond of water. The servants heard his cries, but, being locked up, could not render assistance, so the old man was drowned.

When the inventory of his property was taken, he was found to be the owner of 60 gowns, 100 pairs of trousers, 105 pairs of boots, 400 pairs of shoes, 60 wigs (although he had plenty of natural hair), 50 dogs, 26 wagons and carts, 60 wheelbarrows, 240 razors, 60 plows, 30 saddles and 225 pickaxes and shovels. He surely was "a little queer."

The Patient's Stratagem.

"You must drink hot water with your whisky," the doctor told his patient. "Otherwise you mustn't take it at all."

"But how shall I get the hot water?" the patient queried plaintively. "My wife won't let me have it for the whisky toddy."

"Tell her you want to shave," the doctor said and took his departure.

The next day the doctor called and asked the wife how his patient was.

"He's gone raving mad," his wife replied. "He shaves very ten minutes."

His Message.

Excitement is often the cause of strange telegrams, as well as of other strange manifestations.

A man who had been one of the passengers on a shipwrecked vessel was rescued almost by a miracle. On arriving at a place from which he could send a telegraphic message he forwarded the following despatch to his brother:

"I am saved! Try to break it to my wife."

FREAKS OF INVENTORS

CURIOSITIES OF THE BRITISH PATENT OFFICE.

Devices For Combining a Gun and a Pointer For Hunters—An Artificial Moon—Circumventing Insect Robbery—Plan to Oust the Engineer—A Catapult For Travelers—Earthquakes Set at Naught.

Sir Cornelius Dalton recently retired from the Comptrollership of the British Patent Office, and in the course of an interesting review of that useful public servant's regime, recalls some curious instances of "cranks" with whom he has been called upon to deal.

Thus there was a man who presented an elaborate specification for combining animal instinct with human precision in the realm of sport. The patentee elaborated a plan whereby "direct communication, by chain, cord, or other device, should be established between the tail of a pointer and the trigger of the sportsman's gun.

By intuition the dog would know when the bird was about to rise, and by moving his tail would fire the gun. The sportsman had only to see that his aim was accurate; the dog and the bird would do the rest.

A rural gentleman, of marked economical habits, having observed the gorgeous reflection of the setting sun in the village windows, saw no reason why every hamlet should not boast its own artificial moon. By the expenditure of much mathematical skill he demonstrated that by suspending a huge reflector from a balloon at high altitude it was possible to reflect the rays of the sun after daylight had died away. An unappreciative public declined to avail itself of this astounding discovery, even after a patent had been granted.

A naturalist, as the outcome of profound study, was moved to pity for the hard-working busy bee, who, while wrapped in slumber after a strenuous day's toil, was robbed of his honey by the bee-moth at night.

The claims of honest industry cried aloud for protection from the midnight marauder, and another addition was made to the archives of the Patent Office. The specification with much gravity detailed the working.

The beehive was provided with a door connected to a henroost. Directly the bees retired to rest the fowls retreated to their henroost, and by the process of getting on their respective perches caused the door of the hive to close automatically. The process would be reversed in the morning and success ensured.

The plan for harnessing Niagara was puny compared with the vastness of the project which had for its object "the boring of a hole until it reached the waters that are boiled by the eternal fires of the earth."

The author of this daring proposal foresaw the day when fuel would no longer be needed, and when the engineer would be no more. Upon what principle the inventor hoped to dispense with the services of the engineering section of the community remained a closely-guarded secret.

The almost autocratic power wielded by the driver of an express train upon the democratic sensitiveness of a traveler whose experiments with the communication cord were disappointing, and he elaborated a remedy.

The top of the guard's van was to be equipped with a powerful catapult, so that in the event of sudden emergency the train might be brought to a standstill by stoning the driver into a state of subjection.

The railway companies were uncharitable enough to allow the possibilities of ruffling the feelings of the driver to outweigh the prodigious capabilities of the catapult, and the invention never reached practical maturity.

All great crises have stimulated the creative faculty of mankind, and earthquakes have, of course, earned a full share of attention of the "freak" inventor. The most original notion in this connection was put forth by a genius who quite satisfied himself that if houses were provided with wheels or rollers they would move about backwards and forwards during an earthquake and escape disaster.

Another aspirant to fame bemoaned the unhappy circumstance that man was unable to vie with the fly in rambles on the ceilings, and he patented an arrangement for soling boots with iron, so that, in combination with an electro-magnetic ceiling, he would be able to walk head downwards.

A Girl Recruiting Officer.

The London recruiting sergeants who promenade the vicinity of Trafalgar square and the provincial visitors who gaze at the Life Guardsmen on duty at Whitehall have lately been afforded the spectacle of a young lady—Miss Baker by name—in a smart uniform, and wearing in her military cap a bunch of colored ribbons, busy enlisting "likely-looking" girls for the first-aid Nursing Yeomanry Corps. This body, which has been in existence for some time, boasts several troops, each twenty strong. Miss Baker makes a most enthusiastic recruiting officer.

Country Needs It Most.

A bit of a wag is Mr. Wm. O'Malley, who represent Connemara in the British House. He mentioned the chaplain, the Ven. Archdeacon Wilberforce, the other day to a friend whom he was showing over St. Stephen's. "Oh, he prays for the House, doesn't he?" asked the friend. "No," replied the member for Connemara, "he gets up and takes a look at the House, and then prays for the country."

ALFRED COONEY.

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD.

Retired British Admiral Is a Man of Many Talents.

When Admiral Lord Charles Beresford hauled down his flag at Portsmouth, in obedience to the strange behest of the rulers of the "King's Navee," and bade an affecting farewell to the Channel Fleet, close upon half a century had elapsed since the bluff old sea-dog entered as a cadet on the Britannia.

Not a British blue jacket could be found who would not follow anywhere the idolised commander whom they knew as the truest type of a human Dreadnought, caring for no one—but his men.

During his long term of service the splendid officer who received the ever-memorable signal, "Well done, Condor!" at the bombardment of Alexandria, was called upon to go almost everywhere under the "Old Flag," and never once failed to "quit himself well."

Lord Charles once playfully christened himself a "scallywag." His breezy personality is most marked. Full of humor as of vigor, he has a will of his own, and has accustomed himself in all companies to say what came first to his mind.

This may account, perhaps, for the somewhat premature and by many so much regretted close of his control of the King's ships in home waters. His Irish impulsiveness never had manifestation in conciliatory "cottoning" to the "landlubber," however highly placed. He is of the battling blood, and will be a "fighting Beresford" as long as there is breath in his body.

Lord Charles Beresford is indeed one of those fortunate men who seem to have a knack of being able to acquire anything in the way of handicraft. Thus, among the varied accomplishments in which he could, if he wished so to do, claim no mean distinction are numbered tailoring, sail-making, boat-making, house-building, horse-breaking, and cycling.

On one occasion—this was a good many years ago—a friend offered to bet him a considerable sum of money that he would not drive down Rotten Row, Hyde Park, during forbidden hours. He won the wager by donning disguise and inducing the driver of a water-cart to lend him his vehicle. Lord Charles not only steered the cart along Rotten Row, but he bespattered with water a number of those who had assembled in the expectation of seeing him lose his wager. Not one of his acquaintances, all of whom protested loudly when they were deluged with water, had the remotest idea who the driver of the cart really was until he revealed his identity.

Prime Minister of New Zealand.

Left fatherless when he was three years of age, and his mother unable, through lack of means, to pay for any better education than that afforded by the state schools, Sir Joseph Ward, Premier of New Zealand, who was responsible for that colony's magnificent offer of a Dreadnought, was considerably handicapped in the early days of his career. When he was 21 he started a business of his own, after trying various occupations, and nine years later he entered the New Zealand Parliament. He is one of the fastest speakers in the world, his delivery often reaching 300 words a minute, and rarely falling below 200. In his younger days he was a keen athlete, but contents himself nowadays with sea fishing.

Sir Joseph likes a good story, and he can also tell an amusing one. Here is a favorite. A certain Maori "witch-doctor" was held in great awe and reverence by the superstitious natives. This man claimed that he was enabled by his magic to walk upon the water, and one day his disciples went with him to the sea-shore, expecting to see him perform the miracle. When they reached the water's edge the man turned to his followers. "Do you all really believe that I can walk on the sea?" he asked, in solemn tones. "Yes, yes," they replied, reverently, "we do." "Then," said the witch-doctor, as he walked coolly away, "there is no need for me to do it."

Mr. W. T. Stead.

No one denies that Mr. W. T. Stead is one of the cleverest journalists in London. As he confessed the other day, he has been right "through the mill," and there was a time when he wrote advertisements, and articles at a penny a line. It has been said that he has interviewed everybody who is anybody, from royalty downwards. Mr. Stead has many stories to tell of exalted personages he has met. He was once visiting the King and Queen of Denmark, and during the interview the question of women's suffrage arose. The King was in favor of extending the franchise to the gentler sex, but the Queen demurred, saying that she did not approve of granting women the vote. "But, my dear," replied the King, with a smile, "you have everything that the Suffragists are fighting for."

"Thrashing the Hen."

They had pretty ways of keeping Shrovetide in the good old times. There was the game of "thrashing the hen." And this is how Hilman, the antiquary, speaks of it: "The hen is hung at a fellow's back, who has also some horse bells about him. The rest of the fellows are blinded and have boughs in their hands, with which they chase this fellow and his hen. But the maids are to blind the fellows, which they do with their aprons, and the cunning baggages will endear their sweethearts with a peephole. After this a store of pancakes is made, and she that is noted for lying abed long hath the first pancake presented to her."—London Chronicle.

Saltest Lake in the World.

This is Lake Urumia, in Persia, situated more than 4,000 feet above the level of the sea. It contains 23 per cent. of salt as against 3.5 per cent. in the Dead Sea. The lake is eighty-four miles long and twenty-four miles broad, and its northern coasts are incrusted with a border of salt glittering white in the sun. No living thing can survive in it except a species of very small jellyfish.

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Do you feel languid and tired this spring?
Are you pale, nervous, nervous, finding it hard to do your housework?
Backwards feel just the same—feel the enervating influence of spring, whether that brings out latent symptoms of disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flanagan of Moss and Junction—here is her experience—"I will never again suffer the torture of dreadening spring illness — never will I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I tried through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, Ruthless,—Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite—I relished my meals and grew strong. Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic, blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."
Women who are continually pale, tired and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, aching muscles, bearing, downs pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that urgently need Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c of all dealers.

Great Dane was Poisoned

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will still cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoo, doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers

Fox Chase at Rink Rink

A fox chase will be the novel and exciting event at the roller rink next Tuesday evening. A tame fox, muzzled, will be the quarry pursued and the one to capture Mr. Reynard will get the honors and the prize.

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and is so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual.

Football

Peterborough Y.M.C.A. at Bethany Saturday afternoon played a draw with the Bethany team. After playing two 30-minute halves neither team was able to score and it was decided to call it a draw. The game was played ten men aside.

The Best Plaster

A piece of flannel with tapes attached for holding it in position, slightly dampened with Chamberlain's Liniment and bound on over the seat of pain is superior to any plaster.

Building Permits

The building permits issued in the city of Peterborough since January 1st total $60,881. The figures for the different months are as follows,

January—$6,280
February—$1,105.
March—$5,295.
April—$31,781.

The increase for April 1909 over the same month last year is in the neighborhood of 282 per cent. Apparently the present year will be a record one in the history of Peterborough so far as building is concerned.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this Liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents, large size 50 cents.

Telephone Line from Apsley to Lasswade

The first general annual meeting of the Apsley Telephone Company was held this week in the village town hall, when there were thirty-five of the shareholders present.

Mr. Duncan Graves occupied the chair, and the bylaws for the regulation of the affairs of the company were passed and confirmed. The company has now sixteen miles of line with four public stations. Apsley is connected with Mount Julian, and during the coming summer the line will be extended to Lasswade. There have been twelve applications made from private individuals to have the telephones placed in their homes.

A resolution was passed by the shareholders of Apsley Telephone Co., Limited, expressing their deep appreciation and gratitude for the valuable assistance rendered by the Hon. Mr. Stratton, M.P., both financially and otherwise, in the promotion and organization of this company, giving to residents of Burleigh and Anstruther and Chandos telephone communication with the rest of the Province.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The directors of the company are Messrs. S. Coons, G.o. A. Bullick, Alex McColl, John Stiles, T. Tucker, D. Brown, and W. S. Davidson.

Mr. Brown was elected President, Mr. W. S. Davidson, secretary-treasurer, and Mr. T. G. Eastland, auditor.

BASEBALL

At the regular meeting of the Boys' Guild of St. Andrew's church, Friday evening, it was decided to organize a baseball team for the season, and to place a team in the Junior Church League. The Guild has a number of good players, and another meeting will be held in the near future to elect officers and make arrangements for the season. St. Andrew's are in favor of having the age limit of the league raised one year.

TEMISKAMING'S RICHEST VEIN CROSSES PAN-SILVER PROPERTY

Streak of Solid Silver a foot Thick—the Most Wonderful Strike Made in Cobalt's Biggest Dividend Payer—Continues on through Cartwright's New Mine

A vein of solid silver, a foot thick was the sensational strike recently made in the Temiskaming mine, which within a year has developed into the biggest dividend payer in the marvelously rich Cobalt district.

The Temiskaming mine is immediately adjoins Pan-Silver, B. C. Cartwright's new mine, on the northeast.

Almost coincident with the record-breaking Temiskaming strike, the discovery of the same wonderful vein was uncovered in the Columbia Cobalt, the next mine to the Pan-Silver on the southwest.

It has been positively known for months that the richest and biggest veins in the Temiskaming continue right on into the Pan-Silver; and in the light of these two recent discoveries, Mr. Cartwright declares there is every reason to believe that the drills on Pan-Silver will strike the foot-thick solid silver vein.

Mr. Cartwright has gone into the Pan-Silver in the same spirit in which he took up the Temiskaming when it was the most discredited working in the entire Cobalt district.

Mr. Cartwright believed in Temiskaming and the developments of three years have gloriously justified his belief.

He believes in Pan-Silver with the same faith and declares there is not the shadow of a doubt that Pan-Silver will be a better and bigger producer than its older neighbor, Temiskaming.

If B. E. Cartwright knows what he is talking about. He has staked his own fortune and the fortunes of his associates on Pan-Silver.

"Within six months," he says, "we will be shipping ore from Pan-Silver."

The drills on Pan-Silver are going down steadily and surely—day and night and is working—to the 200 foot level—the level at which rich pay ore was struck in Temiskaming—are running $1,500 to the ton.

Even now, on a depth of 100 feet, they have struck opposite veins averaging eight inches in thickness.

Stock in the Pan-Silver Mining Company, Ltd., (par $1.00) is selling for 60c.

It will go to par when the 200 foot development proves the bonanza values.

That is what B. E. Cartwright says—and you can depend on it that B. E. Cartwright knows.

Pan-Silver will be another Temiskaming—but greater and better and richer than the best Temiskaming has ever been.

A limited number of Pan-Silver shares are offered at 60c. (par $1.00) in lots of 100 shares and upward.

Use the coupon or make out an order in similar form and mail it today to Howe, Norris & Co., 50 Broadway, New York, financial agents in the United States for the Pan-Silver Mining Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont. Booklets, maps and detailed information mailed on request.

Dedicatory Supper and Entertainment in Park St. New Church

The tea and entertainment in the Park street Baptist church last night was a great success. It was in celebration of the dedication of the new church which took place on Sunday. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all present and there was a big crowd. Tea was served from 6 to 8 o'clock, and nearly 400 guests sat down to the tables and partook of very appetizing and bountiful repast. Following the supper a program was rendered in which the following took part;

Addresses by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt of St. Luke's, Rev. Mr. Hincerson of Charlotte street, Rev. Mr. Manning of St. James, Rev. Mr. Webb of Murray street, and Rev. Mr. Riddiford of Park street. Mr. Jones of Lakefield, and Mr. T. F. Matthews, who also acted as chairman.

The Murray street choir quartette sang.

Mr. Ferguson of Murray street choir, gave a solo.

The Orpheus quartette gave two selections. A duett by Messrs. Pratt and Miller. An anthem by the Park street choir.

Tripple Anniversary of St. Andrew's Church

A three-fold anniversary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, was celebrated last night by a very successful entertainment and congregational rally. The event marked the 74th mile post since the organization of the church; the 24th anniversary of the dedication of the present church building, and 20th anniversary of the ordination of Rev. J. G. Potter, the pastor, to the ministry of the Presbyterian church of Canada. There was a large attendance and the evening was most enjoyable.

The feature of the program was the lecture on "A Trip to the East and the Lands of the Bible," by Rev. Mr. McGillivary of Bonar Presbyterian church, Toronto. The talk was illustrated by beautiful views and the lantern was very efficiently managed by Mr. H. O. Fiske. During the lecture Mr. James Brown sang as a solo, "I think when I read the sweet story of old."

The orchestra of the George St. Methodist Sunday school rendered several selections. The chair was taken by Dr. Neill C. McKinnon. Mr. Gordon Wright sang, and Mrs. McClelland presided at the piano. Rev. Mr. Keither conveyed the greetings of Knox church to St. Andrews. Mr. Wm. Campbell very ably moved a vote of thanks to the speaker of the evening and it was carried unanimously. Rev. J. G. Potter also spoke a few words, and then the Y. P.S.C.E. served light refreshments. The evening was brought to a close by singing Auld Lang Syne, God Save the King and the Doxology.

Life Sentences for the Kidnappers of Little "Billy" Whitla

Mercer, Pa., May 10.—James Boyle was sentenced today to life imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary, at Pittsburg, for the kidnapping of "Billy" Whitla. Mrs. Boyle, indicted as Mary Doe, received a sentence of 15 years, with a fine of $5,000, and the costs of the prosecution.

Although no official announcement as to the effect of the fine has been made, it is customary in this State to extend imprisonment until any fine imposed has been paid.

Boyle did not utter a word prior to his sentence. His counsel, however, made a plea for both Boyle and his wife, pleading for leniency in both cases. He stated that until a recent period the extreme penalty for kidnapping in this State was ten years, and in view of the fact that the boy had been treated with every consideration, and that all care had been taken not to inflict unnecessary mental anguish upon the parents, he felt leniency might be asked with propriety.

Both Boyle and his wife collapsed completely upon hearing their sentence pronounced. When they were started back to the jail from the court room, Boyle managed to walk with assistance down the stairs, but upon reaching the front door he became limp and unable to stand. He was lifted into the old-fashioned omnibus, in which the prisoners have been transported for several days between the court house and the jail. When he was placed upon the seat inside the vehicle, he was left for a moment unsupported and nearly fell out of it before he was caught. He was utterly unable to support himself, and had to be held all the way to the jail and carried to his cell.

Mrs. Boyle was in even worse condition. She was unable to walk down the steps from the courthouse to the street, and was carried by Sheriff Crem and Chief of Police Livermore down three flights of stairs to the street. She was lifted into the omnibus, and when the jail was reached she was again lifted out by these officers, and carried to her cell, where she wept violently.

District Attorney Lininger today issued the following statement; "I read in Pittsburg papers on Saturday and Sunday that a third party was alleged to have been implicated in the kidnapping of 'Billy' Whitla, and also that this party is alleged to have been connected with an alleged murder in Youngstown, Ohio. For the purpose of giving Boyle and Mrs. Boyle an opportunity to bring this third party into the case, visited them in jail yesterday and today, and asked them for the information which they claim to possess. Both, however, continue to maintain the air of mystery which has characterized them, especially the women.

"I want to state publicly that I am still making an investigation, and should I find evidence warranting the bringing into this case of a third party I will prosecute him without fear or favor, it does not make a particle of difference whom the prosecution may hit. In spite of the silence of Boyle and his wife, Mercer county officials are going ahead with the investigation, and will continue it until such time as they are absolutely certain that the case can be either prosecuted vigorously or dropped entirely."

Purity Ware Stock is Subscribed Large Rolling Mills are Assured

Two Big New Industries for Peterborough—Promoters Have Been Very Successful—Purity Ware Company is Organized—The City to Enjoy a Boom.

The stock for the Purity Ware Limited of Peterborough, has all been subscribed. This is the good news which was given to The Times last night by the chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee. Ald. Gillespie was in communication with the promoters of the company yesterday. They told him that not only was the stock all subscribed, but that an organization meeting was held and the officers and directors have been elected and the affairs of the company are progressing very satisfactorily.

The Purity Ware Limited, is the new factory which has been secured for Peterborough through the efforts of the Manufacturers' Committee. In order to assist this concern the council has consented to make certain concessions and a by-law has been prepared and will be voted on by the property owners on Tuesday, June 1st. The bylaw has been published and the particulars have been given in these columns several times.

ROLLING MILL ASSURED

The rolling mills, which were referred to in The Times some couple of weeks ago are also assured. This journal was informed by Ald. Gillespie that the promoters of the Purity Ware Limited, are also behind the rolling mills and that they told him the project was going ahead. These mills will be located on the property just south of the old race track, or the property on which the Purity Ware factory will be located. For the mills the city will be asked for no assistance other than a reasonable assessment. The company will purchase its own site, erect its own buildings and will employ a large number of skilled and highly paid mechanics. The buildings will cover a large area and will be built very substantially. The capital for this enterprise, it is understood, is also practically all subscribed.

It is now up to the property owners of Peterborough to support the Purity Ware bylaw and to carry it with a big majority. If the bylaw is not carried the Purity Ware Company will seek a location elsewhere and the rolling mills will go with it. With two more big factories in the south-east part of the city there is every indication of a great increase in population and in commercial circles.

$40,000 Fire at Haileybury on Sunday

Haileybury, Ont., May 10.—An early-morning blaze on Browning St., did $40,000 damage to the Stahl and Cook blocks today. The fire started in Adam Keddie's bakery, in the Stahl block, about two o'clock, and in in thirty minutes both blocks were ablaze.

The losers are as follows;

S. Stahl, business block and living rooms, $8,500; insurance, $2,500.

A. J. Carson, grocer, loss $7,000; insurance, $2,000.

Adam Keddie, $1,000.

Ringrose Bros., theatorium, $1,500.

Mr Cook, block and shoe store, $6,000.

D. Johns, assay offices, $1,500.

Besides these several people living upstairs, lost everything.

Two years ago, Saturday, May 8, 1907, the same block was destroyed, and almost the same occupants were losers.

The Fruit Crop will be Heavy

There will be a heavy crop of peaches and all small fruits this year from Ontario's fruit gardens. The orchards are in splendid condition and the growers are very optimistic. Reports from all sections are very favorable. The heavy rains have been an assistance to the buds and it is very doubtful if there will be a frost severe enough to do any damage.

Miss Kinrade and Mother, Accompanied by M. Wright, Said to be in Montreal

Montreal, May 10.—Mrs. Kinrade, Florence Kinrade, and C. Montrose Wright arrived on the morning train from Toronto today.

They came by Pullman, and though they were evidently seeking to avoid attention, their identity was revealed by the conductor, to whom the Kinrades are well known.

On the arrival of the train the three walked slowly down St. James' street, passing the Russell House.

The trio were also identified by a guest of that hotel, who was looking out of the window when they passed.

Inquiry at a number of the leading hotels has failed to discover their present whereabouts.

When Mrs. Kinrade and Florence and Montrose Wright got off the train at Bonaventure station there were a large number of people gathered about the station platform. The conductor had pointed the party out to several on the train, and when the three started down the platform for the St. James' street exit. Those who knew who they were stood at the door of the station and watched them walk down the street. Several porters followed them as far as the St. James' Hotel, which they passed.

This afternoon it was stated that the Kinrades were at the Queen's. The desk clerk admitted the newspaper correspondent that he had recognized the party when they registered about ten o'clock this morning.

The ladies were dressed in mourning. Florence wearing a three-quarter length black stuff coat, and a large black hat. Wright was also dressed in black, and wore a black hard felt hat.

AT STATION AGAIN.

At noon Florence Kinrade and Wright turned up at the Bonaventure station again and made their way up to the ticket office. By this time the people who were aware of their arrival had all left the station. They asked the ticket clerk about summer resorts in the vicinity of the city, and he gave them the desired information, talking with them for about five minutes. He recognized them, but did not address them by name.

Afterwards he was told that the couple had walked over from the Queen's Hotel across the street. At the office of the hotel, however, it was said that the party are registered there.

LEFT HAMILTON O.K.

Hamilton, May 10.—The Kinrade family left here last night. The Crown Attorney, however, knows nothing of their movements.

It was impossible to obtain any definite information here today as to the whereabouts of the girl and her mother. At Nurse Walker's residence on Caroline street south, where they have been staying, no information was available. The police express ignorance as to the whereabouts of any members of the family. Detective Inspector McMahon said that he was not aware that they had left the city until he saw the report in a morning paper.

There was a report here today that Florence and her mother were going to take a trip to the Old Country.

If the Kinrade family left town last night they must have walked to the station and got away without anyone recognizing them, as enquiries among the station hands and cab drivers failed to locate anyone who had seen them going. The cabmen who does all their work and has driven them to and from the station every time they left the city or returned since the murder, informed a reporter that he was paid on Saturday for his work, but had not been called in yesterday.

At noon today Mr. Kinrade and his youngest daughter, Gertrude, were seen going east on a King street car. Mr. Kinrade carried a small suit case. They had apparently come from the Grand Trunk station.

NOT IN TORONTO.

Toronto, May 10.—Mr. Cartwright, the deputy attorney-general, was informed by a newspaper man of the report that Miss Kinrade and her mother were in Montreal. He did not show any particular interest in the story.

While other reports stated that the Kinrade family left Hamilton last night, and another that they arrived in Toronto at 9 o'clock, and were driven to 88 Homewood avenue, the presence of the party at that address was denied today by Mrs. Taylor, who keeps the apartments. She declared that not only were they not there, but they would not stay at her lodgings when they next returned to the city.

Detective Miller was not at his home on Dupont street this morning.

The cabinet meeting, at which it is expected the Kinrade case may be discussed, will probably be held tomorrow. The ministers are not likely to confer today.

Mr. Hazzard, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., gave an address on the "Sermon on the Mount," before the George street Epworth League last night. The attendance was large and Mr. Hazzard's exposition greatly appreciated.

Fatal Prairie Fire Renders Fifteen Families Homeless

Rush Lake, Sask., May 10.—The seven-year-old girl of L. Kline, a farmer north of here, was burned to death in a prairie fire. His wife and two other children were also badly burned.

In the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Meyer, the corpse of their infant was cremated, the homestead and all buildings being destroyed.

Fifteen families in this district have been rendered destitute, losing the buildings and stock. They include, in addition to the above, W. M. Meyers, George Wittman, David Klassen, Jacob Klassen, and Mr. Cornelson. All are new American settlers.

The Hains Case will Go To Jury Today

Flushing, N.Y., May 10. — When court opened today John F. McIntyre chief counsel for Captain Peter C. Hains, jr., on trial for killing William E. E. Annis, began his last weekly occupy about four hours.

There is a possibility that the case may go to the jury late today, but it is more likely Judge Garretson will adjourn after both sides have their last word to the jury, and deliver his charge tomorrow morning. In opening his plea Mr. McIntyre said; "It was the act of God that directed Captain Hains when he took the life of the man who ruined his home. The meeting between Annis and the defendant was accidental; there was no intention to kill."

Taking up the question of Capt. Hains' sanity, Mr. McIntyre said;

"The burden is now on the people to convince you beyond reasonable doubt that he was sane. The law does not require us to convince you beyond a reasonable doubt that he was insane.

"The State intends to show that he was in a normal state of mind by a few cursory observations abstracted from a mass of matter, and even though this actions may have seemed rational at times, medical science shows that insane people often speak and act rationally.

"Was it a mental shock sufficient to unbalance his mind, when the unfortunate man learned of his wife's infatuation from her own lips. It was then that melancholia seated herself beside the throne of reason, and afterwards taunted and tortured his brain, accelerated his mind, and altered the condition of his heart."

Mr. McIntyre criticised the State's hypothetical question, and declared that the speech and conduct of the defendant, as therein related, was taken from unimportant incidents which might have occurred to any man, sane or insane.

"I do not deny that this man had lucid intervals and rational moments, when he talked and acted like a normal man—many insane persons have such period of rationality," said Mr. McIntyre.

Roosevelt Killed a Rhinoceros which was Charging Him

Nairobi, British East Africa, May 10.—From ex-President Roosevelt's camp, near Machakos, word was brought down today that the luck of the party continues, and that fifteen varieties of game, including a bull rhinoceros, have been bagged on the last expedition.

The rhinoceros was charging Mr. Roosevelt when the hunter fired. The distance was fourteen paces, and the animal fell dead.

The naturalists of the part are kept busy preparing the trophies which are brought in daily.

Forty-five skins already have been prepared for the Smithsonian Institute at Washington.

Pat Powers Got Money Meadows Beat Holmer

Montreal, May 10.—No settlement has yet been arrived at with reference to the seized proceeds of the Shrubb-Longboat race on Saturday. It appears that Pat Powers had the whole amount taken in seized, but authorized the managers of the race to pay Shrubb his share.

It is agreed that Mr. Powers took the action merely to assert the principle of his contract with Longboat, and which he claimed he violated in going into the race without his consent. It is believed the matter will yet be amicably arranged.

Hans Holmer, the Maritime Provinces champion, got his down in old Quebec Saturday, and the little lad who handed to to him was Freddie Meadows, the Guelph surprise package.

Fred and his manager, A. C. Lawrence of Hockwood, came to town today. They hide their faces in shame when they tell what they did to Holmer. Holmer, down around Quebec, where they run like organized crabs, got the idea that he was in Longboat-Shrubb and St. Yves class. He refused to come into the Canadian Derby without a guarantee, and his manager, Edgar A. Shea, wrote Alf. Shrubb a letter tearing him up the back and alleging that he got his fame running duke on short tracks. It was awful the side on the Holmer Shea combination—or, at least, it was until Saturday, when Meadows walloped him a mile and a quarter in fifteen miles.

Incidentally Meadows cleaned up a whole top of beer, and did the distance in 1.24.56. Now 1.24.56 compares very favorably with Alf. Shrubb's 1.27.57 at Montreal, when you consider that Meadows ran on a track like an ash heap and Shrubb ran on the best track in America. In addition Meadows went back at five miles and lost half a lap to enable his backers to get down their wagers. Once the Guelph lad commenced to show his real form he ran Holmer into the woods in a hurry. He had a lap's lead in the thirteenth, two in the fourteenth, and Holmer finished walking.

In spite of the big-headed conduct of Holmer and his manager, Holmer is a good runner, and will be heard of prominently. The lesson will be a valuable one. Meadows' great time makes him a Shrubb possibility.

Milwaukee, May 10.—An international heel and toe walking match will start in Schetz Park Pavilion here at eight o'clock tonight, and will continue three hours each night until next Sunday, when there will be a six-hours' wind-up. Y.; George Brown and Louis West, of Auburn, N.Y.; James Harrison, of Peterborough, Canada; Jack Oddy, London, Eng.; Albert Corey, France; August Riddell, Germany; Tom Slater, Oswego, N.Y., and George Gale, St. Louis.

A Startling Revelation

The friends of Miss Mary McKenzie, of London, were astonished to hear that she had gone into consumption.

This sad intelligence came as a shock to Miss McKenzie's many friends. In the early fall she contracted a heavy cold which developed rapidly into Catarrh, and finally made such rapid advances that the bronchial tubes and lungs became affected.

Although the doctors said nothing short of a change of residence to the south would benefit, on the advice of a Dundas street druggist Miss McKenzie decided to thoroughly test Catarrhozone which is warranted to cure all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes.

Miss McKenzie says: "After my druggist had recommended Catarrhozone I spoke to my friends about it and they all said it was such a good remedy that I commenced forthwith to inhale it five or six times each day. I breathed it deeply into my lungs, and felt its beneficial action very quickly. It seemed to go where other remedies did not reach, and was so pleasant and convenient that I did not mind using it very frequently, which, probably, was the cause of it curing my obstinate case so quickly. Certainly no case of Catarrh or Bronchitis should go untreated if the sufferer can get Catarrhozone, which is a sovereign remedy, worthy of the highest recommendation."

Miss McKenzie's case needs no endorsement. She was in a critical condition, apparently beyon dthe aid of doctors' medicines.

Catarrhozone has cured her, and others in her condition should no longer experiment with uncertain, untried treatments, but should turn at once to Catarrhozone, and in it they will find relief and cure unobtainable by other means. Remember the name, Catarrhozone. Complete outfit guaranteed to cure. Price $1.00. Small size 50 cents. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

PRISON DISCIPLINE

One of the most difficult problems in connection with the administration of justice is the management of our prisons and penitentiaries and the care of the criminals confined therein. In that regard it may be said that methods have changed greatly since the old days when prisoners were herded together like so many cattle and treated like so many dogs. It is recognized now that there is a difference in criminals, that misfortune or monetary wrongs may lead to the commission of a criminal act which is no sooner done than it is repented of, and that such a prisoner should not be treated in the same manner as the hardened ruffian who would knock one on the head for a ten-dollar bill. But how and where to draw the line is the difficulty.

The law should have at least three things in view in its treatment of prisoners, first the punishment of the criminal for the offence he has committed, which consists in the fact of his being imprisoned, secondly the protection of society, which object is also attained by the imprisonment of the offender.

Some people seem to wish to add hereto, and thereby the reclamation of the prisoner treatment to the punishment which the law gives by imprisoning a man, while in more than the few cases possible. Proper discipline must be observed, but it may be said that that discipline is best which is least oppressive, and which brings about results with the smallest effort on the part of those in authority

THE WILL OF ALLAH

England's most interesting case ball of the document Gulzar "Abdul the damned." For 33 years Abdul Hamid II. has been the centered politics system. He was the 34th Sultan of the famous race of Othman, that has ruled the Turks for six centuries. His dexterity as a diplomatist was the despair of all Christian nations. He juggled with the powers of Europe like an accomplished prestidigitator. Wherever he was concerned he threatened the existence of Christendom and a "holy war." Indeed, his whole reign was marked with outrages and blood that gave him and his nation the epithet of the "Unspeakable Turk."

Apricocious! I dare, and yet not a coward, the Sultan lived a life not to be envied by the meanest of his subjects. His vast deposits in the Bank of England and in other strongholds will avail him little. He has simply exchanged the life of his predecessor with "It is the will of Allah" on his lips. Whether in the Tchragan Palace or in a retreat in Salonica he will exist only with a hope of revolution or fear of assassination.

In the meantime Sultan Mehmed V. is a mere pawn in the game of kings. Kindly of disposition, but ignorant of procedure, he is the temporary figurehead of the new party. Pliant and meek suppliant, he will do the will of the Constitutionalists or of the predatory army.

The question of the sentiments of the Christian missionaries is far more important than that of a change of potentate. The Christian is always to the Mussulman a source of hate by the threshhold of murder. It the coercion of the powers that will stop the Kurds, not the new Monarch.

TEMISKAMING'S RICHEST VEIN CROSSES PAN-SILVER PROPERTY

Streak of Solid Silver a foot Thick—the Most Wonderful Strike Made in Cobalt's Biggest Dividend Payer—Continues on through Cartwright's New Mine

A vein of solid silver, a foot thick was the sensational strike recently made in the Temiskaming mine, which within a year has developed into the biggest dividend payer in the marvelously rich Cobalt district.

The Temiskaming mine im mediately adjoins Pan-Silver, B. C. Cartwright's new mine, on the northeast.

Almost coincident with this record-breaking Temiskaming strike, the continuation of the same wonderful vein was uncovered in the Columbia Cobalt, the next mine to the Pan-Silver on the southwest.

It has been positively known for months that the richest and biggest veins in the Temiskaming continue right on into the Pan-Silver; and in the light of these two recent discoveries, Mr. Cartwright declares there is every reason to believe that the drills on Pan-Silver will strike the foot-thick solid silver vein.

Mr. Cartwright has gone into the Pan-Silver in the same spirit in which he took up the Temiskaming when it was the most discredited working in the entire Cobalt district.

Mr. Cartwright believed in Temiskaming and the developments of three years have gloriously justified his belief.

He believes in Pan-Silver with the same faith and declares there is not the shadow of a doubt that Pan-Silver will be a better and bigger producer than its older neighbor, Temiskaming.

B. E. Cartwright knows what he is talking about. He has staked his own fortune and the fortunes of his associates on Pan-Silver.

"Within six months," he says, "we will be shipping ore from Pan-Silver."

The drills on Pan-Silver are going down steadily and surely—day and night shifts working—to the 200 foot level—the level at which rich pay ore was struck in Temiskaming—ore running $1,500 to the ton.

Even now, at a depth of 100 feet, they have struck calcite veins averaging eight inches in thickness.

Stock in the Pan-Silver Mining Company, Ltd., (par $1.00) is selling for 60c.

It will go to par when the 200 foot development reveals the bonanza values.

That is what B. E. Cartwright says—and you can depend on it that B. E. Cartwright knows.

Pan-Silver will be another Temiskaming—but greater and better and richer than the best Temiskaming has ever been.

A limited number of Pan-Silver shares are offered at 60c. (par $1.00) in lots of 100 shares and upward.

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 2½ miles in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jessie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Richenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lone Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.88.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, is sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of stoking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 65 feet deep, are from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immediate shafts already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 15c each, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

SHASTA GOLD BELT MINING COMPANY

W. F. ARAM, President, REDDING, CALIFORNIA

A GREAT SHIPOWNER.

Sir Donald Currie Was Among Britain's Self-Made Men.

One of the most notable figures in the world of shipping is removed by the death a few days ago in England, in his eighty-fourth year, of Sir Donald Currie, head of Messrs. Donald Currie & Co., and of the Union Castle Line.

Sir Donald was the third son of Mr. James Currie, of Belfast, a small tradesman (it has been said that he was a barber), who lived for many years in Greenock. Young Donald received his somewhat scanty education at Belfast, his schoolmaster being Mr. Bryce, father of the British Ambassador at Washington.

The most memorable feature in Sir Donald's private life was his friendship with Mr. Gladstone. The statesman's first trip with his friend was in the Dublin Castle. As was usual with him, he combined business with pleasure, and in the course of it made his historic speech in favor of the assimilation of the borough and county franchise. In 1880 Mr. Gladstone's health having broken down after his tremendous labors in the first session of the new Parliament, he circumnavigated Great Britain in the Grantully Castle.

Three years later a memorable voyage was made in the Pembroke Castle. Tennyson was also a guest, and it was during the passage to Norway that he was prevailed upon to accept a peerage. A remarkable party was held on board the vessel at Copenhagen. It included, besides Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, the poet and their host, the Princess of Wales, the King and Queen of Denmark, the Emperor of Russia, the King and Queen of Greece, and twenty-nine of the Imperial and royal children.

Of the numerous interesting stories told of the great shipowner one is associated with this historic trip. When the Danish royalties heard that the Poet Laureate was on board they requested that he might be asked to read one of his poems to them.

After a long search Sir Donald found Tennyson in an obscure corner smoking a stumpy clay pipe. At first he declined to comply with the request of the royal visitors, but finally consented. Before going on deck he handed his clay pipe to Sir Donald with the jocular remark, "Keep this, it will be precious one day." It did, indeed, become precious, for it has since been one of Sir Donald's most cherished possessions.

On one occasion Sir Donald commissioned an agent to attend a sale and purchase an old chair which bore the name "Dunottar Castle." Although the chair was of little value, a similar commission had been given to another dealer, and when finally the auctioneer's hammer fell it was to a bid of $1,250. There was nothing in the theory of some of those present that the limbs of the chair were stuffed with banknotes. The simple fact was that Sir Donald, in commissioning the second dealer, had forgotten that he had previously commissioned the other.

During one of his election campaigns Sir Donald was asked whether it was not a fact that his father was at one time only a barber in the town. "Yes," promptly replied the candidate; "but if your father had been a barber you would still have been a barber."

Infanticide in China.

Though infanticide is uncommon in China, it occurs occasionally. A good many years ago, Sir Robert Hart related, a British Consular doctor and his wife were walking at Amoy. As they passed a dung-heap the lady cried out, "Oh, Charlie, Charlie, what is that?" and pointed to a small matted package, opened it, and found a baby born, newly born evidently, inside. They took the baby home and reared it, and afterwards, on a visit home to Scotland, took the child with them and gave it some education. In 1886 that Consular doctor went to Ningpo as consul, when Sir Robert Hart was an assistant in the consulate, and they had with them as valet-de-chambre, a fine, bright, healthy lad of 13 or 14. This was the child in question.

Later on they left China and got the lad a good billet as steward on an English gunboat. His name was Lee Bush. Still later on the Chinese Government sought to erect a navy, and wanting men of naval experience, they made Lee a commander, and gave him a fine steam corvette to take charge of.

Subsequently he was condemned twice to death for losing ships by no fault of his own, and twice pardoned, Chinese fashion, being given ultimately further high official status.

Whaling May Disappear.

The depression in the Dundee whale fishing is so acute that there is danger of the industry disappearing from the British Isles. The growing paucity of whales in the Arctic regions has made the industry very unremunerative, and shareholders have declined so disheartened that a number of the vessels have been put up for sale. A serious side to the question is the probable fate of the Esquimaux, who depend upon the whalers for supplies of rifles and ammunition, having, through use of these, lost their forefathers' skill with the bow and lances.

Burns' Favorite Word.

A contributor has had the curiosity to look up Mr. J. B. Reid's "Burns Concordance" and measure the amount of space devoted to certain words. In the result he found that Burns uses the word "heart" more than any other, the quotations under this word filling no fewer than six of the closely printed columns. "Love," "friend" and "heaven" come next, each having about two columns. —Glasgow News.

WASHES BEGGARS' FEET

EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA'S QUAINT EASTER TASK.

On Maundy Thursday Twelve Old Men Present Themselves Before Ruler Who Bathes Their Feet and Gives Each a Bag Containing Money—Biddenden Cakes Are Another Queer Easter Custom.

From time immemorial many curious charity customs have been associated with Eastertide throughout the world. Many of these have long since died out, but some are still observed throughout the country.

One of the most modern charitable Easter customs is that instituted at the Church of St. Mary-at-Hill by the Rev. William Carlile, well known as head of the Church Army. After the special Easter afternoon service the congregation make offerings of hard-boiled eggs. These the sidesmen collect, and they afterwards figure on the bill of fare of a supper given at the rectory to penniless and starving men.

The ceremony of presenting the King's Maundy gifts at Westminster Abbey dates back to the sixteenth century, when Queen Elizabeth was wont to present half a side of salmon, six herrings, six loaves, and a bowl of wine to each of twelve men. Nowadays, poor and needy men and women, chosen by the King's almoner, attend Westminster Abbey and receive purses of leather—red and white—containing sums ranging from $5 to $11. Sometimes the gift amounts to more, as, for instance, in 1903, when the sum of $25 was distributed to each man and ten shillings less to each woman. The number of recipients is regulated by the years of the sovereign's age. There will be one hundred and thirty-four recipients this year, sixty-seven men and sixty-seven women, the King's age being sixty-seven.

This charitable custom reminds one of the quaint ceremony observed in the churchyard of St. Bartholomew's, Smithfield, on Good Friday morning, when twenty-one old women pick twenty-one sixpences from an old gravestone, the trace of any name upon which was obliterated long before the oldest parishioner can remember. This custom dates from the time of Henry VIII., during whose reign a lady died who left by will a sum of money, the interest of which she desired should be placed each Good Friday, in the shape of sixpences, upon her tombstone for the benefit of the poor and aged widows of London. The sixpences are now, however, provided by private individuals.

It might be mentioned, in connection with the royal gift of Maundy money, that at one time the sovereign of England, in addition to presenting gifts of money, meat, and clothes to the aged poor, used to have brought before him as many poor men as he was years old, whose feet he washed with his own hands. This custom, however, has long been discontinued in England, although it is still observed by the Emperor of Austria, who washes the feet of twelve old men on Maundy Thursday, who are chosen on account of their advanced age and thorough respectability.

The ceremony is essentially a religious rite, and was instituted to teach a lesson of humility to earthly rulers. After the washing ceremony the Emperor suspends round every old man's neck a small purse full of coins as Maundy bounty. Then the old folks are taken back to their dwellings in the same court carriage which brings them to the Imperial Palace.

The foot-washing custom, however, has not been altogether abandoned in this country. At the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Westminster, for instance, Archbishop Bourne has performed the ceremony of washing the feet of twelve choir boys and kissing the right foot of each. This ceremony was revived in England some twelve years ago by the late Cardinal Vaughan.

A curious and interesting ceremony, by the way, is observed in St. Mary-in-Arden Church, Market Harborough. When W. Hubbert died in 1703, he bequeathed to the singers of Market Harborough the sum of one guinea yearly on condition of their singing the Easter hymn over his grave.

For hundreds of years a quaint custom was observed at Biddenden, a small Kentish village, which had an extraordinary origin. In the twelfth century two children, Elsm and Mary Chalkhurst, who were joined together by the hips and shoulders, lived at Biddenden for nearly forty years. When they died they directed that the churchwardens should draw the rents of certain lands which now brings in about $200 a year, distribute some 1,000 cakes, containing the donor's portraits, to the members of the congregation attending Biddenden Church on Easter Sunday afternoon. The poor of the district have also given to them a quantity of bread and cheese.

A Cookham Easter charity custom, the origin of which does not seem to be known, is carried on at Bolleshy, a small village near Yarmouth. On that day the parish clerk visits every house in the village and claims, as a perquisite of his office, from the resident a gift of bacon and eggs.

All Mirrors Lie.

"Everybody is better looking than the mirror makes him," said a milliner. "The mirror robs us of our expression and of our coloring, and expression and color are to the face's beauty what the legs are to the figure.

"First, our expression. When we look into a mirror our eyes take on a glassy stare and our mouths a curious sad droop. Really we never look like that save when we are going to be ill.

"Then our coloring. All mirrors have a pale-green tinge, and this tinge makes even the purest rose-leaf complexion sneddy. It takes the gloss from the hair, the brilliance from the eyes and the scarlet from the lips."

ALFRED COONEY.

AN ELEPHANT'S MODISTE.

How Lord John Sanger's Monsters Are Dressed.

"Few people who visit the circus realise the amount of money that is spent upon an elephant's wardrobe," said Mr. Danbe, who is responsible for the dressing of Lord John Sanger's animals, to an interviewer. "In the course of a year we spend something like $2,500 to provide just plain costumes for our performing animals, to say nothing about more elaborate affairs for 'best' wear.

"To make a simple costume takes several weeks. This will be obvious when it is stated that the average-sized elephant has a delicate 'waist' of about 15 feet in circumference, and he measures about 10 feet from shoulders to hind quarters, and about the same in height. Forty-six yards of material, exclusive of trimmings, is required to complete the 'costume.'

"We can only use the finest and most costly materials," said Mr. Drake, sadly, "or else the elephant would be always tearing the garment to pieces. Just this plain article made of silk or satin will alone run into $50, and the trimming of gold lace and other decorations will run away with another $25. It will then only last the animal three weeks.

"The animal's clothes have to be cut and fitted in just the same way as a lady's would be, with the exception that we cannot use a paper pattern, and require a ladder to fit the elephant. We have to substitute the paper pattern for one of canvas.

"At first, however, the animals strongly object to being dressed, and much prefer to appear in the arena in nature's garb. We have to get the animals used to it gradually. When they are in their quarters a piece of canvas is thrown carelessly over their backs. This is nearly always instantly torn off, but we repeat it time after time until the animal patiently submits.

"Should the animal still resist, however, then we resort to flattery, just as the fashionable costumier does when she makes up her mind to persuade a customer to purchase an expensive garment she doesn't want. We get one of the older animals and dress him in the most striking colors possible and lead him to a huge mirror. The new candidate is allowed to see the pretty effect the clothes have on its mate, and will afterwards submit to the most troublesome dressing."—Tit-Bits.

The Knollys and Royalty.

The familiar name by which Miss Charlotte Knollys, whose indisposition has been causing some anxiety of late, is known to the younger members of the royal family as "Aunt Knollys." To the Queen and her daughters she is known as "Chatty." For over forty years Miss Knollys has been a Woman of the Bedchamber to Queen Alexandra, having taken that position immediately after the marriage of the then Prince and Princess of Wales. Her brother, Lord Knollys, is private secretary to the King, while another brother acts in a similar capacity for Queen Maud of Norway.

His Majesty alone knows what the King would do without Lord Knollys. He performs his duties ideally, constituting himself the memory and sometimes the conscience of the King. Lord Knollys opens King Edward's letters, sees all his telegrams, attends to all his dispatches, and organises with mathematical accuracy the hours of His Majesty's audiences. He sends out in His Majesty's name a thousand pounds' worth of telegrams every year, and opens an average of 300 letters a day. He attends to all the King's annual subscriptions, which, chiefly in guineas and five-pound notes, run into several thousand pounds a year.

Waiting for Act to Pass.

Under the Deceased Wife's Sister Act a novel question has just been raised in the Court of Session, Edinburgh. A suit was brought by a Glasgow lady to have the court declare that she is the wife of a Glasgow contractor, failing which she claims £7,500 damages for alleged breach of promise. It appears that defendant married plaintiff's sister, who died in 1881. In that year plaintiff became his housekeeper, and, according to her story, the parties went through a Scotch marriage ceremony, defendant promising to legalize the marriage when the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill passed. The parties lived together until last September, when defendant refused to live with plaintiff any longer. He denies the alleged marriage ceremony and that he made the promise alleged. The case was sent to the Roll for discussion.

A Little Irish.

An old ruined castle bearing the name Dunluce stands near Portrush, in Northern Ireland. Upon the dilapidated gate leading into the castle grounds is posted the following notice:

"Lord Antrim authorises his grazing tenant of these grounds to charge a toll of 6d. per head from visitors wishing to view these ruins. The gatekeeper, however, has authority to let parties off three inside for 1s. 6d., six for 1s. 6d. He is also instructed that any one person expressing inability (not unwillingness) to pay may be passed free."

No Time to Waste.

People who go to see Admiral Sir John Fisher get a little slip of paper given them with the following legend on it: "When you go to see a business man, go on business, and state your business in a business-like manner. When you have concluded your business, go about your business, and leave him to finish his business, and mind your own business."

A Soldier Athlete.

Col. H. E. Rawson, who has just relinquished command of the Royal Engineers in the Northern District of Britain, is an old "Soccer" International, and in cricket he has kept up his reputation as a county player by making a century for the Royal Engineers in the Pretoria Cricket League.

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

In spite of all your careful bathing it is safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pale or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely billious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years, says W. S. Gangster of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite, suffered from indigestion and gas, had some pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt despondent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They twisted me exactly. In one week I felt like new. I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clean all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand tonic medicine."

Miss Elliott Said to be with Col. Warburton in Alexandria, Indiana

Hamilton, May 11.—The police believe they have located Col. and Mrs. Warburton, the latter being mysterious Miss Elliott so often referred to in the Kinrade case. They are said to be living under the names given, in a house on Churchill St., Alexandria, Indiana.

It appears that a man living in Hamilton received a couple of letters from a person living in the same house with the Warburtons. Finally he was sent a photo of Mrs. Warburton, and this with the letters is said to be now in the possession of the authorities, who swore the recipient to secrecy.

Curiously enough Alexandria, which is a town of 8,000 people, is between Anderson and a place named Marion, and Miss Kinrade says Miss Elliott wanted to be called Aunt Marion.

Albert Newport is the man who supplied the police with the information. Three years ago, while in Toronto, he met a girl who now resides in Alexandria. Shortly before the murder she wrote him a letter telling him about a Col. Warburton and his wife, who were staying at the house where she boarded. When Newport read Florence Kinrade's evidence, he became curious, and wrote to the girl in Alexandria to find out if Col. Warburton's wife was a Miss Elliott. The reply came back that she was. The letter was accompanied by a photograph. It was a snapshot and a rear view, taken without the Warburtons knowing it.

Newport told friends about these letters. They regarded it as a joke, and bet money that he could not produce them. When he did, someone gave the police a tip, and last night Detective Bleakley secured the letters. He swore Newport and his friends to secrecy. The information was sent to the Provincial Department today and will be investigated.

Miss Kinrade and Montrose Wright Left Montreal for the East

Montreal, May 11.—In a gusty wind and pouring rain, Miss Florence Kinrade, Mrs. Kinrade, her mother, and Mr. Wright, shook the mud of Montreal from their feet and went aboard the eight o'clock train for Quebec or the Atlantic seaboard.

During their brief stay in the city the party were besieged by a small army of newspaper men, and that they succeeded in getting away without an interview with the journalists was due to the fact that the management of the Queen's Hotel made special arrangements to see that they were not disturbed. Only one of the city papers knew of the Kinrade's arrival yesterday, but ten or twelve men of the staff of that paper were camping on their trail.

When the news was published all the other papers had men out, and there was a big newspaper deputation waiting about the Queen's, anxious to get hold of the party.

As far as could be learned, the Kinrades retired early, Florence having spent the greater part of the evening at a piano in a private parlor of the hotel, where her mother and Wright sat with her.

They were up bright and early this morning and took an early breakfast in the dining room. After the morning meal the three went to their rooms and collected their luggage, and Mr. Wright went to the counter and paid the bill for the entire party.

The three then left by the ladies' entrance and walked across to the Bonaventure depot, each member of the party being dressed on an arrival yesterday. None of the party bought tickets, but they went directly aboard the train for the east, which might mean Portland or Quebec as their ultimate destination.

Richmond, Que., May 11. — Miss Florence Kinrade and Mr. Wright were seen this morning on the Portland train from Montreal, and went through on the way to Portland, Maine. They did not change cars for Quebec.

The train was almost on time here at 10.50 o'clock.

GOT OFF AT SHERBROOKE.

Sherbrooke, Que., May 11.—Florence Kinrade is in town. She arrived on the G.T.R. noon express from Montreal, accompanied by Mr. Wright. They immediately proceeded to the Sherbrooke House, across a few yards from the depot. They carried only hand-bags, and went upstairs without registering. When the lunch bell rang they were among the first to get into the dining room.

It is reported here by railroad men who were on the train that Florence and her mother are on their way to Portland, Maine.

The party were recognized as soon as the train pulled in and quite a buzz of excitement went through the city when the news spread that Florence Kinrade was in town.

WILL RETURN TO HAMILTON.

Hamilton, May 11.—"We have had enough publicity and we don't intend answering any more questions for reporters or anyone else," said Earl Kinrade, the ex-bank clerk, when spoken to over the phone at noon regarding the whereabouts of his mother and his sister Florence.

T. L. Kinrade was at the Waldorf Hotel with some friends yesterday afternoon, and this morning, with his youngest daughter, Miss Gertrude, he was seen walking on King street.

Reporters were unable to reach him, and, although no information was forthcoming from the family, friends of the Kinrades say that that the only reason Florence and her mother went to Montreal was that they desired to avoid publicity. Their intention, it is understood, is to spend the summer months at some quiet resort, until public interest in the mystery has died out. They will then return to Toronto.

Penny Banks in the Schools Discussed

The penny bank system was discussed at a meeting of the Supervision Committee of the Board of Education last night. Mr. John Crane occupied the chair, and others present were, Messrs. L. M. Hayes, K.C., Dr. Morrison, H. B. H. Kenner, A. Mowatt, and W. O'Brien. All the members seemed to favor the idea and the workability of the scheme was carefully discussed. Nothing definite, however, was decided and it will be taken up at another meeting. It is very probable, however, that about September 1st, the system will be introduced into the Peterborough schools.

Fox Chase Created Much Amusement

A real live fox chase was what furnished a big bunch of fun for the large crowd at the roller rink last night. Prof. Genno has a very valuable silver grey pet fox which is trained to run, jump, dodge and stand still at the proper time. Last night he cleared the floor space and with about a dozen good skaters in the enclosure let the fox loose. Then the fun began. The boys took after the little fellow and chased him hard but he was too quick and active for any of them. He would make a trip from one end to the other in about three or four jumps. Then he would sit down while the skaters going at full speed tried to catch him but as the fellow almost had him the fox would shoot out and be away at the other end of the rink while the skater went up in the air and landed hard on the floor. At the end of the race all the boys were allowed to take after the silver-grey pet, but they had no better success. Once they got him in a corner, but Mr. Fox jumped over their shoulders and between their legs and got away. No one caught him and another opportunity will be given later on.

Large Quantities of Grain Being Shipped from Midland this Year

Large quantities of grain have been brought down from Fort William to Midland by the boats since navigation opened, and the Grand Trunk Railway is very busy on this line. In fact on Monday the rush was so great that several trains had to be sent around by the Allendale route to Toronto where the main line was joined and the grain sent on to the seaboard.

This is where the Trent Canal should be opened. If the canal were connected with Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario a large portion of that traffic would come through here and the Trent waterway would be of some use to the country and to commercial interests. As it is the canal is only used for local transportation and that is not very heavy.

The Ontario Jockey Club Races Next Week

The Ontario Jockey Club has issued its prize list for the spring meet starting May 22nd and continuing until June 5th. The Woodbine races always attract a big crowd of Peterborough sports, and a lot of them are now planning to attend the races, and especially the King's Plate on Saturday, May 22nd. The program of events is more attractive this year than ever, and the Woodbine track will be a busy place for a couple of weeks.

St. Peter's Won Game

In a seven-innings game yesterday afternoon St. Peter's school baseball club defeated the boys from the King Edward school by six runs to five. The batteries were King Edward—Taylor and Williamson; St. Peter's—Callaghan and O'Brien. Mr. W. O'Brien officiated as referee with general satisfaction to all. Neway Taylor, the boy who lost both legs in a railway accident is a great pitcher. He is the manager and captain for his team and besides being a good club artist he has a good head and is a good general. He also made the longest hit of the game. Neway, however, has to get one of the other boys to run for him. The school boys are playing good ball and are the only baseball league yet doing business.

Valuable Team

Two firemen from Winnipeg, who are on their annual vacation, were visitors at the fire hall yesterday morning. They are former residents of London, and were acquainted with Chief Howard in that city. One of the visitors is a foreman and the other an engineer at one of the fire stations in the Manitoba capital. They were greatly taken up with the equipment at the local fire hall, especially with the horses, and they were surprised when they were told what they cost. The new grey team, they stated, would bring $600 from the Winnipeg fire department.

Many People Have Moved This Spring

It is a well known fact that every spring sees a large number of families change their place of abode. Not a few leave town and many new families move in. This year has been no exception, and in spite of the wet, cold and disagreeable weather quite as many people have moved as formerly. The Peterborough Fuel & Cartage Co. do by long odds the largest amount of business in this line, and from January 1st to May 11th, this firm moved 224 families. This number included about 50 families leaving the city and about the same number coming in. The latter part of April and the month of May is when the most moving is done. Last week alone the firm would average six movings a day for the six days, and the rest of this month promises to show up well. To handle this amount of business requires a large staff of men and many horses and even at that it is no easy job. Besides the Fuel & Cartage Co., many others carters get a share of the business so that it would be safe to say that at least 300 families have either changed houses in the city or have moved away.

Walter Blythe will be Executed Thursday, Thinks of Children

Toronto, May 11.—Penitent and philosophical, and filled with solicitude for the future welfare of his worse-than-orphaned children —that is the attitude in which Walter Blythe is awaiting death "by process of law" in Toronto jail, at dawn on Thursday morning. Blythe is the man who with a poker beat the life out of his wife at Agincourt on Jan. 3 last.

This morning's despatches from Ottawa indicated that all hope for executive clemency, all hope that the death sentence would be commuted to imprisonment for life had vanished. The minister of justice, and the Dominion Cabinet, having carefully considered the case, had decided not to interfere with the sentence pronounced by Mr. Justice Riddell.

BAD GIVEN UP HOPE.

Rev. Canon Farncomb, who had been Blythe's spiritual adviser since the trial, told a newspaper man this morning that for several days the condemned man had entertained little or no hope of escape from the judicial death. When Canon Farncomb broke the news to Blythe some time ago that the authorities at Ottawa had not looked favorably on the application of Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., his counsel, for a change in the sentence to life imprisonment, the prisoner received the information quietly.

"Walter Blythe has been in a very devout frame of mind," said Canon Farncomb today. "And he takes his terrible situation in a very Christian spirit. He of course fully realizes the enormity of his crime. I believe he is fully penitent. While I do not wish to be understood as condoning the crime at all I am convinced that up to a certain point this man's general character has been good. It was too much drink and a very violent temper that caused him to commit this terrible deed."

Rev. John Bushell, rector of St. Clement's, has also taken considerable interest in the spiritual welfare of the unfortunate man. There was a solemn hour in Blythe's jail quarters the other morning when the prisoner partook of Holy Communion.

LOVES HIS CHILDREN.

Ever since he was arrested Blythe has been very much interested in what washing done for his children. There were two of them, and shortly after the trial a relative arrived from England and took them back with him to the Old Land. According to reports and the letters that have arrived for the prisoner, the relatives of both Blythe and his murdered wife are in good circumstances and the children will be well cared for.

"After they reached England," said Governor Chambers, of the jail, this morning, "Blythe seemed to be quite satisfied that they would be well treated. The folks on both sides of the house seem to be doing their best for the children—and that seemed to satisfy Blythe. He reads every letter that comes from the Old Country—and there are many of them—with the greatest interest. As a prisoner, his conduct has been exemplary. He has not shown any unpleasantness of spirit, has been very agreeable, and has taken every thing in the most philosophical way, although I think he has had some hope right up to date that the sentence would be commuted."

FOR HIS MOTHER'S SAKE.

Blythe's hope for executive clemency, according to Governor Chambers, was not so much on his own account as that of his family. For the sake of his aged mother and sisters in the Old Country, as well as his children, he hoped that he would not go to eternity by way of the gallows. Since he was sentenced he frequently got letters from his mother, who gave him every encouragement to hope, as she did herself, that something would happen to stay the hand of the executioner. So far as Blythe was concerned for himself, he seemed to think that death was preferable to a life of bitter remorse in Kingston Penitentiary.

Blythe will not hear a hammer tap in connection with the preparations for his death on Thursday morning. On the upper floor of the jail there is a permanent "death room" which is reserved for hangings. All that has to be done is to open a door or two and the room is ready. The work of J. R. Radcliffe, the official hangman, in making his preparations is simple. The death room is situated only a few steps from the room—a hospital ward—which the condemned man now occupies. He will know nothing about as "place of death till he walks a few steps and into the room on the morning of the execution.

Captain Hains is Guilty of Manslaughter in First Degree, Sentence Monday

(Special to The Times.)

Flushing, N.Y., May 11.—Mr. McIntyre said, after the jury retired, that he had credible information that two of the jurors were opposed to a defence of insanity, and would not vote for acquittal on that ground. The lawyer said he had received communications from friends of these two jurors to the effect that they had frequently expressed themselves before the trial as opposed to the idea of Capt. Hains' insanity at the time of the shooting. This information had been confirmed. Mr. McIntyre said:

"I believe the jury will remain out twenty-four hours, and then be discharged on account of their inability to reach a verdict."

Flushing, N.Y., May 11.—No verdict had been reached up to 3.20 this afternoon, in the case of Captain Peter C. Hains, junior, charged with the murder of William E. Annis, in August last. The jury has been considering the case since 1.30 p.m.

The jury brought in a verdict of "Guilty of manslaughter in the first degree."

The defendant was removed in the custody of the sheriff for sentence Monday morning.

Cellar Flooded

The Board of Education is having all kinds of trouble with the King Edward school sewer. The cellar of the building is lower than the sewer and as a result the sewage has backed up, and is five inches deep on the floor. Besides being a great inconvenience it causes bad odor to pervade the building. A remedy will have to be found very shortly.

THE RING

The bout between Tommy Daly and Jimmy Kelly which takes place at the Brock street rink tonight promises to draw a very large audience. The boxing game has taken well with the local fans as was shown by their appreciation of the two fast goes which were held at the roller rink a short time ago. Kelly and Daly will come together for ten rounds and will undoubtedly furnish a much better mill than the bout between Burns and Kelly as both are clever and scientific men and have science and ability to hit.

The Maiden Trip

The new tugboat "Herbert," which was launched recently, made her first trip yesterday morning through the locks down the Otonabee. The boat is in charge of Mr. Clem Gordon, who will in the discharge of his duties inspect the light houses down around Rice Lake and Hastings. The boat will be used on Lake Simcoe this season, where the "Bob Hall" will also be in action.

Show Japanese How we Can Shoot Them

Vancouver, B.C., May 10.—The celebration of the visit of the Japanese cruisers Aso Sayo on May 17 is likely to be a badly mixed affair, as is shown by the marked opposition to the celebration arrangements in civic quarters. The civic finance committee by very decided majority have turned down a recommendation of Mayor Douglas for $1,000 donation to the militia officers in aid of parade and entertainment expense.

Ald. McMillan declared, when the military deputation presented its request for the appropriation that Vancouver ought rather to show the Japs "how well prepared we are to shoot them." Four aldermen out of five voted with McMillan, despite the protests of the military men that their action was against imperial ethics, and that Vancouver should cultivate trade relations with Japan.

The Trades and Labor Council have also officially decided that no labor organization should take any part whatever in the celebration.

This all is in the face of a published appeal of the mayor to the citizens to make the celebration a success.

Patrick T. Powers Sues Tom Longboat

Toronto, May 11.—The long-expected has happened—Tommy Longboat and P. T. Powers have hooked up for a fight to the finish, and the battle will come off in Montreal.

Troublesome Tom started the fun before the Marathon Derby by defying Powers. P. T. came up with some soft salve and smoothed the affair over, but when the Red T. Longboat laughed in his face and contracted to meet A. Shrubb at Montreal, P. T.'s fighting Irish blood rose, and he waded in. He jolted Tom Saturday with a stiff left in the form of an adjustment of his share of the gate receipts, and followed it up with a rattling right hand to the nose—a suit for $1,000 damages.

The writ was issued in Montreal yesterday.

The suit will test the validity of P. T. Power's contract with the Indian.

Not worth the paper it is written upon is what the redskin and his friends allege, and Longboat will fight it to a finish.

This will settle it.

Meanwhile what becomes of Longboat's 20-mile engagement with Shrubb at Scarboro Beach Park on May 24?

The Indian, subdued and dejected after his defeat at Montreal, Saturday, took a run today and is determined to get right for the big race.

Mining Deal

Mr. Crowley of North Monaghan, son of Mr. T. Crowley, the well known Cobalt prospector, has received word from his lawyer in Toronto that a mining deal of importance has been transacted on his behalf. Mr. Crowley expects a considerable profit as a result of the transaction.

Lord and Lady Minto Treated for Rabies

Simla, India, May 11.—As a precaution against the possible development of hydrophobia, Lord Minto, viceroy of India, and Lady Minto are undergoing the Pasteur treatment.

While the viceroy and his wife were out walking, Lady Minto's lapdog was harassed by a wandering mad dog.

Lord and Lady Minto went forward to rescue their pet, and while neither were bitten, their hands were covered with the saliva of the rabid beast.

They submitted to the treatment on the advice of their physician.

Two of the viceroy's servants were bitten by the mad dog, and also are taking the Pasteur treatment.

Central Park Needs Some Attention

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—There only remains a few days until May 24th, when the regiments of Brantford and St. Catharines will visit the city, and will assist in the opening of the new armories. As yet very little attempt has been made to clear away the debris in front of the building and a most disgraceful spectacle is presented. If there is any pride at all in those responsible for this condition of affairs they will put a big force on at once to clean the place up and make it look at least as if it were a part of the city.

Yours truly,

CITIZEN.

Bronchitis

SCIENTIFICALLY TREATED.

The best authorities agree that bronchitis is treated most scientifically by Catarrhozone, which goes right to the root of the trouble.

Bronchitis can be treated successfully only by a remedy carried direct to the affected parts along with the air breathed.

Catarrhozone is a vegetable antiseptic and is inhaled at the mouth, and afterpassing through all the air passages of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, is exhaled through the nose.

The healing vapor of Catarrhozone goes wherever the air you breathe goes, and reaches every part that is affected. No matter how deep-seated the bronchial irritation may be, Catarrhozone is sure to reach it.

Catarrhozone protects and heals the mucous membrane, stops the cough, heals up the pores, and is guaranteed to bring speedy relief and cure sure.

By means of the inhaler Catarrhozone treats the local symptoms of bronchial trouble very effectually. The poisons and impurities in the blood are driven off by Ferrozone, which is a wonderful tonic and stimulant for the entire system.

Ferrozone is a tonic and tissue builder, increases the appetite aids digestion and makes the body so healthy and strong that bronchitis goes away for good.

A prominent steamboat owner, well known throughout Eastern Ontario, Captain Dunlop of Kingston, was perfectly cured of Bronchitis by Catarrhozone. The Captain had suffered for more than 20 years, and says that Catarrhozone is the best cure for Bronchitis on the face of the globe.

Mr. A. J. Calhoun, a prominent citizen of Neepawa, Manitoba, speaks very appreciatively of Catarrhozone as a specific for Bronchitis, and states that his wife could not get along without it.

Everyone that has used Catarrhozone is satisfied that it is superior to all other remedies. It is delightful to inhale, simple and convenient to use, and relieves from the first breath taken through the inhaler.

Better try Catarrhozone. All druggists sell and recommend it. Complete outfit, price $1.00; trial size 25c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

BACHELORS LEAD

Boston says that certainly the best results and those of greatest merit for the public have proceeded from unmarried or childless men. Schopenhauer, the German philosopher, appears to be of the same opinion. "For men of higher intellectual aspirations, for poets, philosophers, for all these in general who devote themselves to science and art, celibacy is preferable to married life, because the conjugal yoke prevents them from creating great works."

Moore has expressed the same belief, asserting that in looking through the lives of the most illustrious poets it is evident that they have been, with scarcely any exception, restless and solitary spirits, with minds wrapped up, like silk worms, in their own tasks, either strangers or rebels to the domestic tie."

Dante, Milton, Shakespeare and Dryden are instances of the saddening effect of married life upon poets. Dante went through life weary from his wife and children, turning his mind to the immortal dream of Beatrice. There is that oft-told jest of Dryden, which sufficiently exhibits his views of the subject; when his wife told him that she wished she were a book in order that she might have more of her husband's companionship, he said; "Be an almanac, my love, so that I can change you every year."

Scott's remark about Dryden was that "on the occasion when a sermon against matrimony would by introduced here he failed for reason with such bitterness as spoke of an inward consciousness of domestic misery." But the same is true of other artists as well—of musicians and painters as well as poets.

Wagner, when a young man, married an actress, "pretty as a picture," but she appears to have had but little sympathy with his aims, and he lived apart from her. He afterward married a daughter of Liszt, who did appreciate his genius, and whit her he was very happy.

The girl whom Haydn married turned out a shrew. Beethoven wrote: "Oh, that I could find her, the Juliet, the Ophelia that my heart calls for, that I could drink in the consolation of mingled joy and sadness that only love bestows. Could I but visit in her arms one autumn evening, soothed by the moonlight on some wild heath, and pleasantly my fate and change."

We are told that a few years after these effusions were written he managed an amicable separation from his wife, his former divinity, and he left her to die in misery and solitude.

Shaded rarely never in love and hurt an overplus to marriage.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAY BOARD

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, minister of railways and canals, has announced the names of the men who are to be entrusted with the task of operating the Intercolonial Railway as a business proposition. They are Mr. M. J. Butler, deputy minister of railways and canals; Mr. D. Pottinger, present general manager of the road; Mr. Tiffin, traffic manager, and Mr. Brady, who has had extensive experience as a superintendent in the C.P.R. service. Mr Butler is recognized as an eminently capable man, and his appointment will be hailed with pleasure; Mr. Pottinger and Mr. Tiffin have thorough knowledge of the road and its business Mr. Brady should bring the useful capacity to the work before him. It has been the custom for those interested in maintaining the present disastrous conditions on the Government railway, says the Montreal Gazette, to represent that it was built for political purposes and through an inferior country. Those who have read Sir Sanford Fleming's report on the location of the line known that there were commercial as well as military grounds for choosing the northern route. Anyone who takes the trouble to look at a time-table and note the number of thriving business centers along the line all the Intercolonial from Montreal to Sydney, will appreciate that for such a length of line there are few better situated railway properties in Canada. The Intercolonial has been a business failure because its management has been political and not commercial, and because things have been done on it for effect at elections instead of out of regard for its finances.

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Richenbar, First Home, Henriette, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lone Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.85.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, in sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chasesmith, Mayer Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500, for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 65 feet deep, are from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immediate shafts already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously. It is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 15c each, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

REMARKABLE REMOVALS.

Church Removed by Traction Engine —Shipping a House by Water.

Something of a sensation was caused the other week at Leigh-on-Sea, England, by the removal of a church from one site to another by means of a traction engine. The transportation occupied several days, and the streets were completely blocked during the transit.

Removals of this nature are extremely rare, and there are some unique instances which are worth recording. A novel "flitting" was witnessed in Glasgow in 1880, when the St. Bride's Episcopal Church was removed from Bacoesfield road to a seat in Hyndland road. The task was accomplished under extreme difficulties, as the route had a steep gradient, and the church weighed about sixty tons, affording seating accommodation for a hundred people. The building was raised by "jacks" and pulled along scraped planks until it reached the roadway, where four massive wheels were attached, and it was dragged to its new position by three traction engines.

Another remarkable case of house removing was to be seen last summer near Dalhousie, New Brunswick, when a large frame structure was shifted more than two miles by water. It was first taken 1,000 yards to the shore, and then removed by means of lighters. It was said to be a curious sight to witness a two-storey building, 35 feet by 80 feet in size, being towed into port by a gasoline launch.

Another case of this kind is that of a hydro which the doctors had ordered to be removed to a more healthy spot. Although it was a large building, with twenty rooms, it was put on rollers, and taken in this way to the edge of the bay, and then placed on large barges, and towed over the water a distance of ten miles.

LIONIZING MR. LOCKE.

English Novelist Is Excessively Timid and Hates Publicity.

William J. Locke, the noted English novelist, who recently visited America, is very tall in appearance and has a very sandy complexion. His work table is usually littered with papers and uncorrected proofs. He is one of the few famous men that success has not spoiled, and to this day he considers it a high honor to be asked for a photograph—a request to which up to the present he has always religiously acceded. In manner Mr. Locke is diffident and almost shy, and to be the lion of the evening is to him a distinction which is almost akin to pain.

A distinguished artist tells the following story of him: "Locke," says the artist, "was the guest at a reception one evening and was due at the Lambs Club at ten o'clock on the same night, when a dinner was to be given him by the members. Poor Mr. Locke, lionized by everybody, shy and almost embarrassed, felt that the time for the Lambs Club dinner must be arriving, but was far too polite to look at his watch.

"I went to him on several occasions and suggested that time was flying and that he was expected at the Lambs. After much hesitation he finally approached his hostess timorously and with outstretched hand. 'I think I must really' — he began. 'What!' exclaimed the hostess 'You mustn't think of going yet,' and immediately commenced a brilliant fusillade of conversation directed at the bloomed but embarrassed Locke.

"Poor Locke stood there, the picture of the politest trepidation. Finally the lady left him, her duties calling her elsewhere. I then manoeuvred him to near the door, when, coming behind him, I fairly pushed him from the room. Mr. Locke, rather shocked but intensely relieved, reached the Lambs Club only thirty minutes late."

Painting Wagner's Picture.

Sir Hubert von Herkomer, the celebrated English artist, described his experience in painting the portrait of Richard Wagner without a sitting. Wagner in 1877 was introducing his music to English audiences, and he permitted the young artist to be with him at his house, see him day by day and watch him. When Wagner was asked when he intended to sit he replied, "He sees me all the time." That went on for a month. Then the artist started on Friday on the portrait, worked at it all day at white heat, slept badly all night and worked again all day Saturday. By the evening it was finished, and the next day he took the portrait, glazed and framed, to Wagner. Then came a change over the great musician. He was delighted.

Got Out by Hole.

An attempted burglary under rather peculiar circumstances was reported from Motherwell, England, recently. A shop at North Motherwell was during the night entered by thieves, who gained an entrance by making a hole in the brick wall at the rear of the building. The shop is in the Miners' Rows, and the lights used by the burglars attracted the attention of the residents, who crowded round the door to prevent the escape of the thieves. They called the police and awaited developments; but when the constable entered it was found that the thieves had made their escape by the hole, quite unobserved by the watchers. They went without their booty, however.

Designer of "Dreadnoughts."

The man who has created a new naval standard by designing Dreadnoughts is Mr. John Harper Narbeth, a naval architect employed in the construction department of the Admiralty. Mr. Narbeth began life as a shipbuilding apprentice at Pembroke Dock, and ultimately joined the designing staff at the Admiralty. When the plans of the Dreadnoughts were first submitted, they did not capture the fancy of the Lords of the Admiralty. Afterwards, however, the merits of the design were recognised. When not busy over his plans at Whitehall, Mr. Narbeth is to be found at Wandsworth Common, where for many years he has made his home.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

FLOORED BY A FIGURE.

Tale of the Coin That Ended His Love Affair.

He was a bold sailor lad, she was a simple village maiden, and they had met after an interval of five years at the old lych-gate. He told her that his love for her had never altered, and she told him that when the storms raged round the old rooftree she thought of the sailor boy she had given her heart to. And they both forgot to mention the numerous flirtations, in which they had acted as principals, that they had gone through during those five years.

"Do you love me really?" she murmured, cushioning her sunny looks against his reefer jacket.

"Shiver my timbers if I don't," he replied, in hearty sailor exuberance.

"I can hardly believe it," she cooed as she thought of her own past five years' experience. "Have you always been true to the little girl who has been waiting for you these many long months?"

"Belay there a minute!" he replied, moving her little head from off his chest, and taking a wash-leather bag from out of the recesses of his clothing. "Do you remember the new coin you gave me as a keepsake five years ago?"

"I do," she responded.

"I have never parted with it. In the long, dark watches of the night it has been my constant companion"; and he handed his treasure to the girl.

"All this time you have kept it for my sake?" she sighed.

"For five long years it has never left me till this moment. For five long years it has been my greatest treasure. Often when the waves were running mountains high and swept the ship from stem to stern have I pressed that coin to my lips and thought of the little girl so many miles away——. What's the matter?" he asked, as she suddenly disengaged herself from his embrace.

"For five years it has been your constant companion, has it?" she scornfully said. "Then it must have been made purposely for me to give to you. Look at the date."

He did—it was 1908.

The rest is silence.

Disaster and Earthquake.

"Let us set aside all sentiment and try to differentiate between the disaster as such and the earthquake itself," writes Frank A. Perret, formerly honorary assistant at the Royal Vesuvian observatory, concerning the Messina earthquake in The Century. "Let us realise the fact that if the population of these cities had been ten times as large the disaster would have been correspondingly greater, while the earthquake would have remained the same and the still more interesting fact that if instead of these rubble built cities a large army had been encamped on the spot there would have been no disaster whatever, the earthquake still remaining the same. Years ago laws were passed prohibiting the erection of houses having more than two stories, but avarice led to the building of tall, flimsy structures which would accommodate many families and bring the owners a goodly rental. And yet this was a well-known seismic area, where quakes were of frequent occurrence and a great one might be expected at any time."

Picking 'Em by Their Tunes.

"Employers have their own ideas about the sort of man that will fit into a certain job," said the manager of a local employment bureau. "Not many days ago I sent an able-bodied, capable-looking young man around to the office of a big contractor who had a position he wanted filled. I thought I had found just the man for him. But the young man came back here disappointed and said he didn't get the job for some reason—he couldn't figure out why. I called up the contractor, and he explained how it was. 'The fellow kept whistling a lot of tunes such as "Auld Lang Syne" and "The Suwanee River" while he was waiting to see me,' said the contractor, 'and I decided that he wouldn't do before I even saw him. He must be a slow moving, slow-thinking man or he would whistle livelier tunes. Send me around a man who likes to whistle "A Hot Time" or "Hiawatha" and I'll take him'."

The Coming Countries.

Southern America and Africa are the coming countries. A half-century ago or more the great geographer, Arnold Guyot, predicted that within two or three generations the reaction of the east upon the west would produce an equilibrium, and that then the reaction of the north upon the south would begin in earnest, and the great streams of population and traffic would flow at right angles to those which they have followed during historical times. With the increase of population and a control of mankind over the forces of nature of which Fred. Guyot could have had no conception the increase of exchanges between north and south seems likely to begin sooner than he could have anticipated.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Sardou's Unpublished Plays.

Sardou's executors have found four unpublished plays among his papers. one of them is a four-act play written in collaboration with Ange Galdemar for a London theatre. The other three consist of the libretto for a comic opera, entitled "The Feast on the Nile"; a dramatic comedy in four acts and "Mme. Tallien," a tragedy in five acts. All these three works, of which the first will be produced during the present year, were written in collaboration with Emile Moreau.

RUINS OF BABEL.

Dr. Theophilus Pinches Has Made Important Discoveries.

Many interesting new discoveries have been made concerning the Tower of Babel, whose construction, as described in the Book of Genesis, is one of the most remarkable occurrences of the first stage of the world's history.

For one thing, it has been found that the Tower was square, and not round, as it has always been represented by Bible illustrators and by artists, including the great Gustave Dore.

A large part of the Tower of Babel has been carried away in recent times, so that it would seem that the curse put upon the building during its construction has remained potent even to the present day.

We read in the second chapter of the Book of Genesis how, when the whole earth was of one speech, people started to build a tower whose top should reach unto Heaven. But the Lord confounded their speech, or forced them to speak different languages, which compelled them to leave off building the Tower and scatter over the face of the earth.

Dr Theophilus Pinches, of the British Museum, one of the greatest Assyriologists in England, has just made public the latest discoveries concerning the Tower.

"Our excavations have proved," said Dr. Pinches, "that the forms and Tower were square, and not, as the pictures in illustrated Bibles show, circular in form and tapering with a spiral ascent to the top. In its original state the structure measured about 300 feet each way, and the height was about the same. Though this was only a third of the height of the Eiffel Tower in Paris, it was sufficiently imposing as a high monument.

"It was built in stages. The lowest stage was much higher than any of the others, and the topmost stage was the upper temple or sanctuary of the god Bel, or Merodach, a hall of considerable size, 80 feet long, 70 feet broad and 50 feet high.

"Unfortunately, the remains of the Tower have been cleared away within recent years to build the dam of the Hindiyeh Canal, and instead of a great monument a depression is now all that remains."

The tower is situated at Birs Nimrud, a suburb of Babylon, which must have been about ten miles from the heart of that city when it was in existence. The ruins cover a space about 40,000 square feet. Doubtless great processions took place from Babylon to Babel in honor of the god Bel.

Other records of an early calamity to the Tower of Babel besides that of the Bible exist. Ancient Babylonian and Assyrian tablets speak of the anger of Bel, the father of the gods, at the sin of those who were building the Tower. Bel appears to have been appeased by later offerings, and to have permitted the Tower to be rebuilt.

The fact that Nebuchadnezzar the Great rebuilt the Tower is proof that it had been destroyed or its building interrupted. He has left a brick stamped with this legend:

"To restore it, the great god Merodach urged my mind; its site, however, I did not injure, did not change its foundation walls."

Assurbanipal, the famous King of Assyria, mentioned in the Bible as "the great and noble Asnapper" (Ezra iv., 10), enriched the Tower and copied the bricks and other wisdom of Nebuchadnezzar. This is shown by a brick bearing the inscription:

"Palace of Assurbanipal, King of the World, King of Assyria, to whom Nebo hath given a broad ear. . . 4 The wisdom of Nebo even the contents of the inscriptions, as many as had been made, on clay tablets, I wrote, graved, examined, and for my own information laid up in my palace."

It is probably from the Tower of Babel that we derive our first knowledge of scientific astronomy. Its corners pointed exactly to the four cardinal points of the compass, and its priests were engaged in the observation of the summer and winter solstices, of the vernal and autumnal equinoxes, of the influence of the sun and moon on the diseases of men and other astronomical matters.

Exhibited First Gorilla.

When he was ten years old, Mr. George Wombwell, who died the other day at the advanced age of 92, went to live with his uncle, the founder of the famous traveling menagerie, so that he was associated with the showman's life for over eighty years. It is generally believed that Mr. Wombwell exhibited the first gorilla known to have been brought alive to this country. The mounted skin of this animal is now at Alston Hall, near Preston, England.

A Barrel of Flour.

A barrel of flour will make nearly double its weight in bread. Flour rapidly deteriorates with age unless kept dry. It absorbs moisture, and this moisture impairs the gluten, which is indispensable to the lightness of the bread. Besides, it changes some of the starch into sugar and a gummy matter known as dextrin, and this makes the bread heavy and sodden.

An Easy Jail.

In one of the Basque provinces of Spain there is a prison the doors of which are opened every morning, allowing the prisoners to go into the town for housework, gardening or some trade. Some act as commissioners. In the evening they quietly return to the prison at the appointed time, and after being identified by the jailer the bolts are drawn for their admission.

Tanner to Baron.

Lord Allerton, who has just entered upon his seventieth year, began life as the son of a small tanner in Leeds. He worked his way up by sheer hard work to opulence, a seat in Parliament, a Privy Councillorship, the mayoralty of his native city, and finally the barony, which came to him in 1902. He is the father of the Hon. F. S. Jackson, the famous Yorkshire cricketer.

Company's President, a mining engineer of national reputation, member of American Mining Congress, now directing work at the mines, writes recently

"We are about 90 feet in good ore on the 200 foot level. In fact the entire length of the drift is good smelting ore and the breast of the drift shows some very rich Copper Glance. When our drift on the 600 foot level reaches this chute of ore, we will have 600 feet of ore over us to work out, which will give us enough to run a smelter for several years. Our development on the 200 foot level solves the smelter proposition."

TEMISKAMING'S RICHEST VEIN CROSSES PAN-SILVER PROPERTY

Streak of Solid Silver a foot Thick—the Most Wonderful Strike Made in Cobalt's Biggest Dividend Payer—Continues on through Cartwright's New Mine

A vein of solid silver, a foot thick was the sensational strike recently made in the Temiskaming mine, which within a year has developed into the biggest dividend payer in the marvelously rich Cobalt district.

The Temiskaming mine is immediately adjoins Pan-Silver, B. C. Cartwright's new mine, on the northeast.

Almost coincident with this record-breaking Temiskaming strike, the continuation of the same wonderful vein was uncovered in the Columbia Cobalt, the next mine to the Pan-Silver on the southwest.

It has been positively known for months that the richest and biggest veins in the Temiskaming continue right on into the Pan-Silver; and in the light of these two recent discoveries, Mr. Cartwright declares there is every reason to believe that the drills on Pan-Silver will strike the foot-thick solid silver vein.

Mr. Cartwright has gone into the Pan-Silver in the same spirit in which he took up the Temiskaming when it was the most discredited working in the entire Cobalt district.

Mr. Cartwright believed in Temiskaming and the developments of three years have gloriously justified his belief.

He believes in Pan-Silver with the same faith and declares there is not the shadow of a doubt that Pan-Silver will be a better and bigger producer than its older neighbor, Temiskaming.

B. C. Cartwright knows what he is talking about. He has staked his own fortune and the fortunes of his associates on Pan-Silver.

"Within six months," he says, "we will be shipping ore from Pan-Silver."

The drills on Pan-Silver are going down steadily and surely—day and night shifts working—to the 100 foot level—the level at which rich pay ore was struck in Temiskaming—ire running $1,500 to the ton.

Even now, at a depth of 100 feet, they have struck calcite veins averaging eight inches in thickness.

Stock in the Pan-Silver Mining Company, Ltd., (par $1.00) is selling for 60c.

It will go to par when the 600 foot development reveals the bonanza values.

That is what B. E. Cartwright says—and you can depend on it that B. E. Cartwright knows.

Pan-Silver will be another Temiskaming—but greater and better and richer than the best Temiskaming has ever been.

A limited number of Pan-Silver shares are offered at 60c. (par $1.00) in lots of 100 shares and upward.

Hains is Facing a Possible Sentence of 20 Years in Prison

Flushing, N.Y., May 12.—Guilty of manslaughter in the first degree, Captain Peter C. Hains is now facing a possible sentence of 20 years' imprisonment. That is the maximum sentence for the crime of which the jury found him guilty yesterday in connection with the death of W. E. Annis last August. Sentence will be imposed on Monday.

After the jury was discharged, Juror Wm. Craft, of Jamaica, L.I., said four ballots were taken On the first three first degree and six for acquittal on the ground of insanity. On the fourth ballot, the compromise of manslaughter in the first degree was reached. Little consideration was given to the expert testimony. Juror Craft said. They believed, he continued, that Annis deserved his fate, but none of them would consider the unwritten law and therefore the manslaughter verdict resulted.

NEW TRIAL DEMANDED

Quickly following the young army officer's conviction his counsel announced that they would produce affidavits to show that the jury had not been properly guarded during the trial, and upon this allegation will urge that a new trial be granted. These affidavits will be submitted on Monday, the time set for passing sentence, and for any motions that the defendant's counsel may wish to make.

The conviction of the young army officer after the jury had been out less than three hours came as a general surprise. It had been expected that the jurors would deliberate much longer, and that a verdict of acquittal on the ground of insanity or a disagreement would result. No one was more than surprised than District Attorney Dewitt, who had said that all he could hope for was a disagreement.

Captain Hains stood up and faced the jury, squaring his shoulders in military fashion, while Foreman Sundling read the Verdict.

As he heard the decision of the jurors Hains' face was as white as chalk He stood for a few moments motionless, staring at the jury after he heard the verdict, then one of his lawyers touched him, and he quietly sat down. A few minutes later, apparently little affected by the verdict, he walked from the court room with a steady stride between his two lawyers and was taken back to the Queen's county jail.

CAUSE OF TRAGEDY.

Captain Hains' conviction is the sequel to the sensational shooting of W. E. Annis, the clubman, Captain Hains first the fatal shot because of Annis' supposed attentions to Mrs. Hains, but as his (Hains') brother, the writer, was there, too, and, it was said, kept Annis' friends from interfering, both brothers were charged with murder. The brother was tried first, and an acquittal resulted. Now that the captain has been found guilty, insanity may be again urged, though, so far, his counsel have not said so, expecting, it is believed, an acquittal, or, at least a disagreement.

C. Montrose Wright and Mrs. and Miss Kinrade May Go Abroad

Boston, May 12.—Miss Florence Kinrade, Mrs. Kinrade and C. Montrose Wright had not booked for an ocean voyage this morning. Nothing is known about them at the Allan Line offices here. They may, of course, get on the Laurentian at the last minute; she sails at three o'clock.

LEFT SHERBROOKE.

Montreal, May 12 — The Kinrade party left Sherbrooke for Boston on the Boston & Maine Railway last night at 9.15. They stayed at the New Sherbrooke Hotel for lunch, and spent the afternoon in the city. Mr. Wright and Miss Florence visited a number of places, including the Y.W.C.A. The B. & M. train was held up for an hour at Newport, but they should have arrived in Boston about 7.30 this morning.

WHITE MOUNTAINS.

Inquiring about trains for Sherbrooke at the Union Depot here yesterday afternoon, Mr. Wright and Miss Kinrade asked especially about trains for the White Mountains. It is believed that the party will spend some time there. They are traveling under assumed names, and Mr. Wright registered as Norman Latchford. Miss Kinrade registered as Miss Latchford, and Mrs. Kinrade as Mrs. Latchford.

It is understood that Mr. C. Montrose Wright shortly before his departure for Montreal the other evening admitted that he was going to Europe in the near future, but did not say he was going with Mrs. and Miss Kinrade, though he said he was not going alone. He intended to tour the Highlands of Scotland and England, and then proceed to Italy He had planned to take a year post-graduate work in theology in Edinburgh University.

Moreover, it was learned from the college friends of Mr. Wright that he will not take his next year in theology at Victoria.

"I'll never take another lecture at Victoria," he said just before leaving Toronto. "If I can raise the money, I'll finish my theological course in Edinburgh."

It is presumed that the tour in Scotland, England and Italy, is for the benefit of Mrs. Kinrade and Miss Florence Kinrade, whose health is said to have been impaired by the recent murder investigation in Hamilton.

AT A BOSTON HOTEL

Montreal, May 12—The Kinrades have been located in Boston at the Haymarket Hotel. Their intention is to proceed tomorrow to Portland.

Five Years in the Kingston Penitentiary

Belleville, May 12.—This morning Emmanuel Hannah, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary on a charge of stabbing Louis Saucier, of Bancroft, and two years for assaulting William Beadry, who interferred in the fight between the two men. It is stated that Hannah's wife was living with Saucier during the absence of her husband in the lumber camps. When Hannah came back this spring, and found the condition of affairs, he sought Saucier and stabbed him severely. Beadry was a witness of the affray and tried to save Saucier and was himself wounded.

The case caused much excitement in Bancroft and the trial has been followed with interest. In some quarters there is considerable sympathy manifested for Hannah, in view of the circumstances of the assault.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Paris is Like a City in State of Seige

Fifty Thousand Troops are Held in Reserve —Infantrymen Guard the Post-Office and Telegraph Stations—Strike is on.

Paris, May 12.—Paris today resembles a city in a stage of siege. During the night troops took possession of the Central Post and Telegraph stations, and at daylight squads of infantrymen were posted around every branch office. The streets are being patrolled by the mounted Republican Guards. All exposed telegraph lines are being watched, and soldiers have been introduced even into the sewers of the city to prevent the cutting of wires. These precautions were taken to protect all the postal employes who are willing to work and to prevent the threatened "sabottage" or destruction of property.

Furthermore 500 military telegraphers and several hundred automobiles have been hastily mobilized and massed in the Galleric Des Machines, ready for instant service. General Dalstein, the military governor of Paris, has 50,000 troops in reserve.

The strikers, on the contrary, have made a poor initial showing so far as outward appearances go. The walls of Paris are covered this morning with their posters announcing that the strike will continue until their grievances are redressed.

"The right to form trade unions will be obtained, cost what it may," they declare.

A MODEST BEGINNING

But beyond the railroad mail clerks, the number who have abandoned work is comparatively small. The first two deliveries of mail were effected without the aid of troops, but the distribution of the newspaper mail was not attempted. At the strikers' headquarters there are evidences of great activity, but at the same time much secrecy prevails. The leaders content themselves with saying that the strike has only begun, but they are confident it will spread rapidly, and eventually tie up the entire machinery of the government.

In the provinces the tactics adopted by the government here are being repeated. The various post offices were encircled by cordon of troops at daylight today.

The postmen of Lyons and Bordeaux last night voted to join their Parisian colleagues.

The press generally reproaches the Chamber of Deputies for its cowardice yesterday in postponing a vote on the postal situation, thus throwing the entire responsibility on the government. It is understood, however, Premier Clemenceau preferred non-parliamentary action for tactical reasons, first, to force the postmen to open battle, and second, to permit the government to put its measures into action. This puts parliament in the position where it will be compelled to approve, or abandon the government in the midst of the crisis.

SORT LETTERS OFF TRAINS.

Instead of trying to replace the railroad mail clerks who have gone out, letters are being sorted before they are placed on the trains, in accordance with a system previously worked out. The authorities claim that methods for maintaining communications with the provinces with the aid of local commercial bodies have everywhere been perfected, and are ready forr instant application. In some sections a regular automobile service covering distances of from 100 to 200 miles has been arranged.

The places of the strikers will be filled automatically.

Towards noon today eight strikers were arrested while trying to enter the central bureau.

Nancy in the first city where the telegraphers and telephonists went out.

Albany, N.Y., May 12.—Twenty-five workmen are reported killed in a premature blast of dynamite in a stone quarry operated by the Callanan Road Improvement Company about ten miles from Albany shortly before 2 o'clock this morning.

THE KNOWN DEAD.

Among the dead reported are; J. Hoyt Callanan, manager of the quarry; Charles D. Callanan, his brother; Leroy McMillan, Fred Snyder, master mechanic; John Hendrickson, steam drill foreman; William Baumes, fireman.

Two gangs of men were at work in the quarry at the time of the explosion. It was the intention to fire a blast at five o'clock this afternoon, and fourteen holes had been drilled, and seven or eight of them had been filled when there was a terrific explosion.

Of the thirty men who were working near the drills 25 are believed to have been killed. Another gang of twenty men were at work further down in the quarry, and it is said some of them have also been killed. About 1,000 pounds of dynamite exploded.

Kelly Got the Decision Over Daly in 8th Round, Lively Bout at the Rink

Kelly got the decision over Daly in a ten-round go at Brock street rink last night. There was a fair-sized crowd present and they got their money's worth. Three bouts were put on, and all of them were good, although the first one was very one-sided, and as a result Howden was put to sleep at the opening of the second round. The squared circle in the center of the rink was so situated that all could see every move of the boxers, and the sports was thoroughly enjoyed.

The referee for all the bouts was Mr. Geo. Graham, while Mr. C. N. Graham acted as time-keeper. The decisions in every case were well received by the crowd.

The first bout was between Fred Miller of hockey fame, and Bob Howden. These two sports have fought many a word battle over their respective abilities with the gloves, but they never got together before. As soon as they met in the ring it was very plain that Howden had no chance. In the first round he received several punches that put him in a daze, while he failed to land an effective blow.In the opening of the second round Miller landed on Bob's jaw and Bob went to the floor like a log and was counted out.

The second bout was good exhibition of the game. J. Wilson and G. Jones were matched for three rounds and they went the limit for a draw although Jones is the better boxer. Both men did some nice work and swung and jabbed freely. The decision of the referee was however satisfactory to the crowd.

DALY vs. KELLY.

Tom Daly was defeated in the eighth round of his ten-round bout with Jim Kelly of Buffalo last night. Kelly has been seen in Peterborough on several occasions, and he is popular with the crowd. He has always given a clean and clever exhibition of boxing. As a matter of fact he is one of the most gentlemanly sports in the ring, and last night allowed several opportunities to take advantage of his man, go by. Daly is a clever young boxer and is well known in Toronto and also has several admirers here. He put up a stiff argument in Toronto recently for the Canadian amateur championship. Kelly however, is too much for him, and he was slightly out of his class.

In the first round Daly landed a nice one on Kelly's left eye, but that was all the damage he did during the go, although he landed several good ones on the head and body. In the second round Kelly had much the best of it and could have knocked his man out had he cared to take advantage of an opening. The third round was slow, but in the fourth Daly showed a little more life and landed once on Kelly's jaw pretty hard. Then Kelly got in several stiff jabs. The fifth round was slow, both men were sparring for wind. After that the bout was all Kelly. In the seventh Daly went to the floor and took the count to nine, and as he got up Kelly went after him but the gong sounded in time to save Daly. The eighth round was fast, Kelly went in to win the fight and twice he knocked Daly down. The latter was very weak and was no longer any match for the Buffalo boy, so the referee stopped the fight and gave the decision to Kelly

During the evening the six-day walk, starting on May 24th, was announced. There will be three hours' walk nightly with seven hours on Saturday.

Execution of Wife Murderer Postponed Until June 17—Blythe was Staggered when He Heard That He was to Have a Chance to Live

(Special to The Times)

Toronto, May 12.—Walter Blythe, the wife murderer, has over a month longer to live.

The following telegram was received at Sheriff Mowat's office in the City Hall this afternoon.

Ottawa, May 12, 1909

Sheriff Mowat.

City Hall, Toronto.

His Excellency, the Governor-General, has been pleased to direct the postponement of Walter Blythe's execution until Thursday, June 17, next.

(Sgd.) Joseph Pope.

Under-Secretary of State.

The message is a result of the efforts of Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., who acted on Blythe's counsel during the trial. On Monday last Mr. Robinette sent to Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice at Ottawa, some additional facts in connection with the case, and a request for a reprieve until a further investigation might be made of them.

PREPARING FOR HANGING.

At the time the message was received this afternoon Sheriff Mowat was at the jail making ready for the hanging. In fact, he was in the room wherein Blythe was to die at eight o'clock tomorrow morning, when one of the guards told him he was wanted at the telephone.

The message was read to him from his office at the City Hall. He immediately communicated with Governor Chambers, who was talking in his office with Rev. Canon Farncomb and Mr. Richard Kirby, a friend of Blythe, who has been his chum since they were boys together in England.

Mr. Kirby was overjoyed to hear of his friend's temporary new lease of life, and was permitted to accompany Governor Chambers and Rev. Canon Farncombe to the condemned cell, where Blythe sat waiting for the last sunset he thought he was to see.

BROKE THE WELCOME NEWS.

Rev. Canon Farncombe broke the news to Blythe, who was staggered when he heard that he was to have a chance to live.

WAS READY TO DIE.

He had been told after hoping against hope, that there was no possible chance for a reprieve, and was fully prepared to die. After having been informed that his execution had been postponed for over a month, he sat silently for a few minutes gazing at his three visitors as if dazed by their appearance. Then he began to realize that they were telling him that he was to live for a short time longer, and his face lit up with hope. He did not speak for some moments, but finally said, quietly; "There may be a chance yet, for I don't think they would be cruel enough to prolong this agony of waiting if it were not to ultimately commute my sentence. However, whatever happens, I am prepared to take my punishment, and pray that I may be forgiven."

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Deplorable Condition of the Public Schools of Lindsay

Lindsay, May 12.—If any doubt existed in the minds of the Lindsay aldermen concerning the deplorable condition of the public schools of the town, it must certainly have been dispelled as a result of their meeting with the Board of Education and having laid before them the condition of affairs as they really exist. The result of the joint meeting will be that both bodies can now deal intelligently and unitedly with the situation confronting them.

The board wants to spend $5400 and have applied to the council for that amount.

The tender leaves of a harmless lung-healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its marvelous curative properties. Tight tickling or distressing coughs, quickly yield to the healing, soothing action of this splendid prescription—Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is no rash and good for children, as well. Containing no opium, chloroform, or other harmful drugs, mothers should in safety always demand Dr. Shoop's. If other remedies are offered, tell them No! Be your own judge! Sold by all dealers.

T.A.S. Society Have Secured Two Boats

One of the mottoes of the committees in charge of the annual picnic of St. Peter's T.A.S. is to get to work early and complete arrangements in order that everything will be in readiness at least a week before the big event. At any rate the greatest part of the work is then complete, and it only remains to add the finishing touches This year will be no exception, and even greater attention will be given than in the past. It has seemed on practically every occasion in the past that the crowds have exceeded the expectations of even the most sanguine. This year every attention will be given to the accommodation of the people. Two boats and two scows have been secured for the day. They are the Monarch and the Rainbow, which making regular trips all day, should meet any demand that is presented.

Orange Grand Lodge Meeting

Lindsay, May 12.—One of the largest and most interesting meetings of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 557, heretofore held took place last evening in the Adams block. There was a very large attendance, and keen interest was manifested in the proceedings.

Mr. Hall of Toronto, representing the Sentinel, was present and delivered a stirring address on the principles of Orangeism, in the course of which he pointed out the very satisfactory growth made by the Order during the past year, a net increase of over 6,000 having been achieved. Orangeism was growing, he said, in numbers, in standing, and influence throughout the country, and he urged every member to do his utmost to secure for every one equal privileges, fair play, and justice, no matter of what religion or creed, for of such was the basis principle of the Order.

OBITUARY

HUGH BLACKSTOCK MEHARRY.

Word was received yesterday, of the sudden death in the morning in Norwood, of a former resident of this city, Mr. Hugh Blackstock Meharry. The deceased, who was 68 years of age, had been ailing for some time and death was not entirely unexpected. He was born in Cavan, and was the oldest son of the late Robert Meharry, and a grandson of the late Rev. Moses Blackstock, also of that place. The late Mr. Meharry came to Peterborough twenty years ago, and was in the insurance business on Simcoe street for fifteen years, after which he went to Saskatchewan, where he lived for about four years and then came back to Norwood where his daughter is living. Besides his wife two sons and one daughter are left to mourn his loss. The sons are;—Messrs. Fletcher of North Dakota, and Robert of Saskatchewan, Mrs. John Peterborough of Norwood, is a daughter.

IF YOU HAVE

Catarrh

Remember the Best Catarrh Medicine that Money can Buy is Catarrhozone; it cures quickly and permanently when all others fail.

The remedy doesn't exist that will cure Catarrh as quickly as Catarrhozone. It relieves the most stubborn cases in a short time, and drives the disease so thoroughly from the system that it never returns.

Druggists busily recommend Catarrhozone in preference to other remedies, because they know it is the best, and every progressive doctor prescribes it.

Catarrhozone is a rational, commonsense treatment that finds favor with everybody. It cures by the inhalation of medicated air, which comes into contact with the numerous surface of all the breathing organs. It gets at the source of the trouble, kills the germs and drives every vestige of catarrh right out of the system.

It doesn't matter how deep-seated or chronic your case may be, Catarrhozone can cure it. Even though a thousand other remedies have failed, don't give up hope till you have used Catarrhozone. It has cured other cases probably worse than yours, and will cure yours if it gets a chance.

Mr. Dutcher Law, a prominent citizen of Pinky Cross, N. S., says: "I experimented with hundreds of Catarrh remedies and found the majority to be worthless, dismal failures. Catarrhozone was the first to give lasting relief; it cured me and I am with pleasure testifying to its merits as a cure for Catarrh of the nose and throat."

(Signed) DUTCHER LAW.

You are sure to derive the most pleasant results from Catarrhozone. It has been tested many times and never found wanting. Every druggist in Canada sells it. Complete two months' treatment, guaranteed to cure costs $1, or a trial size 25c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

WHEAT-GROWING IN ENGLAND

The high price of wheat has made bread dearer in England. Towards the end of April wheat advanced to $1.46 for Manitoba, and large sales of other kinds were made at $1.35. The minimum price for the four-pound loaf was thirteen cents, and in many shops fourteen and seven were charged.

This looks like a heavy addition to the burdens of the English poor, but some of the London newspapers find consolation in the hope that the production of wheat in the British Islands will be stimulated, and the people encouraged to go "back to the land." The Mark Lane Express says that a regular price of forty shillings a quarter, or $1.20 a bushel, for home-grown wheat would stimulate arable farming and convert large areas from grass to wheat. The London Daily Mail says that every shilling a quarter, or three cents a bushel, added to the price of wheat will put $1.20 an acre into the hands of the farmers. Agriculture will revive, there will be a return movement from the cities to the land, and the nation will be fortified. "Cheap food is not the cult of life," says the Mail.

Undoubtedly England could greatly increase her production of wheat and greatly diminish the import; and if Great Britain goes back protectionist the farmer will demand his share. But what about preferential trading, which was once supposed to be the backbone of the English protectionist movement? The British farmer will want protection from all outside competitors, and it will make no difference to him whether his competitor lives in Canada or in Russia. In fact, a good many of them frankly expressed that opinion when they were examined by the Chamberlain tariff commissioners.

At present Canada is making way in the British market by natural causes. The export of wheat from the United States is declining because population is overtaking production. The Canadian export is rapidly increasing, and so we are supplying year by year a large share of the British demand. But that demand will be diminished if wheat-growing in the British Islands is stimulated by protection or any other means. Protection and preferential trading are not mutually helpful, but antagonistic, as we see in this country. The attitude of the protected manufacturer here toward our preference on British manufactures is precisely the same as would be the attitude of the British farmer toward a preference on colonial wheat.

A tickling or dry cough can be quickly loosened with Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. No opium, no anodynes, nothing unsafe or harmful. Sold by all dealers.

CONSTABLES AND THE LAW

In the address to the jury in the Kimball case Justice Teetzel pointed out that a constable has no right to shoot a prisoner, who is merely running away. A constable is justified in killing the judge said, only when this is necessary to save his own life or that of someone else whom it is his duty to protect.

This is the second time within a comparatively short period that the law has been laid down in regard to the rights of constables in the use of firearms. It is well that it has been stated so clearly in this particular case, and all police officers would do well to read carefully what has been said. Occasions have occurred on which revolvers have been used without the justification required in such cases—when prisoners were simply making to escape—and, because fatalities did not follow, the offending officers did not receive even so much as a reprimand. Because these things have occurred, and because there is no often a disposition to make too free use of weapons by those permitted to carry them, the clear and explicit statement of the law which Justice Teetzel has given should have a decidedly beneficial effect.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and protect the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a nauseating poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Bells, The Jennie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Richenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Lana Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $19.52.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, is sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickness 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said, it is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid us cash $500. for stock, could any one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same lodge, and ore now 45 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense shoots already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

THE RAPACIOUS EEL.

He Is an Omnivorous Feeder With an Enormous Swallow.

Quite apart from the peculiar and mysterious characteristics of eels at their spawning season, there are few more interesting fish than the snake's maritime cousins. A writer in The London Outlook describes how he has seen young eels—"elvers" they are called at this stage of their existence—coming from the sea to the rivers in countless multitudes. They move in masses, he explains, overcoming every obstacle, and are anything up to eighteen months old, six inches or so long, of the thickness of a shoestring. As retribution for the damage they will some day do to trout and salmon spawn, as well as to newly hatched fish, the elvers are greedily eaten by almost all other kinds of fish. Still, their numbers are so large, they move forward in such battalions, that millions dodge the attentions of their enemies and reach the upper waters in safety. This wonderful migration is one of the marvels of nature.

At home the eel thrives rapidly. He soon puts on flesh. He is an omnivorous feeder, and nothing comes amiss that he can take into his gullet. He preys upon the young of every sort of fish. He burrows into their nests and eats ravenously of the newly deposited spawn. In fact, experts declare that pike are not half so destructive to a trout water as eels are, for the pike eats mature fish or those that are maturing, whereas the eel takes his fill of the eggs as well as of the perfect fish.

It is wonderful, considering the size of an eel, what an enormous swallow it has. A fish of two or three pounds will easily make away with a bait of a quarter of a pound, and there are authentic particulars of an eel about two and a half pounds which was chocked at King's Lynn attempting to swallow a full sized rat. Eels scale up to seven or eight pounds and occasionally even more. They have tremendous strength, and, as for their vitality, is it not recorded in the proverbs and folklore of the people?

"As slippery as an eel" is a saying centuries old, and everybody is supposed to know that an eel requires more killing than any fish that swims. When you have got him on the bank and have put your foot down hard upon his head ready for the coup de grace he will lash his tail over your foot and around your ankle, and it is a feat of dexterity to hold him tight while you get in the final blow. But you do not always get him as far as that stage. An angler once testified in the sporting papers that, having hooked a big eel, he was trying to land it, and in its struggles to resist it took hold of a passing bream and coiled around it. As the tackle was good, both eel and bream were landed.

The Chapel of the Bones.

Not far from the Cathedral of St. John, in Valleta, on the Island of Malta, is an exquisite little church, built in the form of a Maltese cross, called the Chapel of the Monks, belonging to one of the Catholic orders. Connected with it is a small underground chapel, a most weird, gruesome place, called the Chapel of the Bones. Here rows upon rows of human bones are arranged all over the walls and ceiling in geometric design. These are the bones of 1,000 people who perished in two of Malta's many sieges. In a pit outside 30,000 more were burned, and these are but a tithe of countless thousands whose life blood has laved this rocky isle of the sea all down the centuries. For so long a time that history is lost in dim ago, it has been the centre of such conflict and woeful carnage as no other known spot on the earth's surface can recount, unless it be Sicily, which lies just north of it. For two and a half centuries it was the hardly held home of medieval chivalry.

An Old Larch Tree.

Italy can boast of a larch tree the age of which is estimated to be 2,000 years. It is situated on the northern flank of Mont Chetip in the direction of the huts of Pian Vani, above Courmayeur. A few steps from the footpath that skirts the limits of the meadowland. Due allowance being made for the extreme slowness with which the larch grows, for the altitude above sea level (1,650 metres) at which it is rooted and for its northerly exposure in the near neighborhood of the glacier where the cycle of its development is barely five months every year, this venerable larch, untouched alike by woodman's axe and thunderbolt, cannot be less than 2,000 years old.—Scotsman.

The Spy and the King.

The following story is told of Louis XVIII., King of France, and Fouche, who had been at one time Napoleon's minister of police: After the Bourbon restoration the King asked Fouche whether he had not spies over him during the empire. Fouche admitted that he had. "Who was the spy?" the King asked, and he was informed that it had been the Comte de Macon. "How much did he get?" continued the King. "Two hundred thousand francs a year, your majesty." "Ah, well," said Louis, "he was honest, then, after all. I had half."

Talkative Judges Preferred.

If the garrulous judge is a "nuisance," since he is apt to divert the attention of counsel from the vital points and to lengthen the proceedings, the silent judge is hardly to be described in more flattering terms, since the advocate never knows what is passing through his mind. On the whole, talkativeness on the bench is perhaps preferable to absolute silence.—Law Journal.

Elgar Flew Kites.

Sir Edward Elgar, the famous composer, at one time made a hobby of kite-flying, and was not ashamed to be seen tugging at a string and gazing heavenwards after a struggling object with a long tail. He is also an ardent naturalist.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

JEM MACE "BROKE."

Veteran English Prizefighter Is Now Old and Poor.

"Jem" Mace, the old-time champion prize-fighter, who has applied for an old-age pension, was born at Beeston, near Norwich, on Good Friday, April 8, 1831.

A representative of the press inquiring for the veteran was referred to a tavern in Islington—that decaying remnant of disappearing Old London where the old traditions still flicker. There, in the sawdusted parlor of the Bluecoat Boy, the old warrior may often be heard modestly recounting his exploits to a respectfully listening group.

Mace was not at the "Bluecutt," however, as it is familiarly known, but plentiful information concerning his merits was to be obtained. A tall old gentleman of forcible manner in a silk hat introduced himself as "Jem's business manager." There was another friend, who had been middle-weight champion of England himself in days gone by, and another admirer who was able to claim the distinction of having hospitably entertained the veteran in recent emergencies.

The "Bluecut" was unanimously of opinion that, despite the number of his birthdays, it was not old age that the old fighting man was suffering from. It was the world that had grown old, and lost its youthful interest in fighting, and not "Jem" Mace.

Later on Mr. Mace himself was encountered. He had been taking his evening meal in the family circle of some professional friends in Clerkenwell, and was cleaning up his plate with what was left of the loaf of bread. A lithe, erect, handsome old man still, with fine eyes and wavy grey hair above a good forehead, and strong, well-formed features.

"Since I lost my wife," he said, "nothing has gone right. I always wanted a master," he added, "and since she died I have had nobody to tell me."

On the back of each hand below the wrist there is a big, bony swelling. Asked what caused that he said, "Punching did that—punching men."

"Punching which men?"

"Punching more than five hundred men. My memory is going, and I can't remember all their names. More than five hundred I have battled with and beat them all."

"And were you never beaten then?"

"Two of them beat me. Bob Brettle beat me and Tom King beat me, but they were accidents, and in other battles I beat both of them. I was a bit careless the day I fought Bob Brettle—took him to cheap, and he caught me with his right and smashed my jaw, knocked me clean out. But the next time I beat him, and beat him fair.

"They never gave me no thick ears, none of them. I suffered more in my hands from punching them than from them punching me. I knew more than they did, had a better headpiece; but since my poor wife died I've had nobody to tell me.

"A quarter of a million pounds I have took out of the prize-ring, and all gone. Ten championship cups and four championship belts I have won, all silver with diamonds and precious stones, and they have all gone. I have got a bust of old Tom Sayers left, and I would let it go for a couple of sovereigns, for I have got nothing."

"You are my old friend, Bill, for fifty years," he said to his septuagenarian manager. "You've got a good business headpiece. You stick by me and I'll do whatever you tell me to, and I can box three rounds with anybody as well as ever I could."

"I will, Jem," said the business manager, "I'll stick by you. I'm walking wonderful well this last day or two."

And the principal of seventy-seven with his manager of seventy odd went off hopefully together to look for a likely opponent and a sporting backer.

The Last H.

Sergeant Channell, who was in the habit of dropping his h's, and Sir Frederick Theiger were once trying a case about a ship called the Helen. Every time the former mentioned the vessel he called it the Ellen. Every time the other counsel mentioned her they called her the Helen. At last the judge, with a quaint gravity, said: "Stop." (a favorite word of his.) "Stop. What was the name of the ship? I have it on my notes the Ellen and the Helen. Which is it?" And the Bar grinned.

"Oh, my lud," said Theiger in his blandest and most fastidious manner, "the ship was christened the Helen, but she lost her 'h' in the chops of the channel."—London Spectator.

Daring Lady Explorers.

Probably no other lady has such a record of exploration as Mrs. French-Sheldon, who, amongst other claims to distinction, possesses that of having been the first woman elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. In addition to three journeys round the world, she has personally conducted more than one African expedition, and has traveled alone on the Congo. Mrs. Workman, too, has accomplished wonders among the Himalayas—where she and her husband, in 1903, attained an altitude of 23,394 feet—and Miss Gordon-Cumming has also climbed many of the almost inaccessible peaks among the mountains of Northern India and Thibet.

SLIPS IN PRINT.

Typographical Blunders That Cause Smiles or Frowns.

When a leading London newspaper, in noticing the floating of a new commercial enterprise, spoke of the issuing of "100,000 snares at 25 each," a statement which, however true, was hardly intentional, the splendid fury of the promoters of that enterprise was fully balanced by the large satisfaction, not to say glee, of its enemies, and no one stopped to think that the innocent fact of the close juxtoposition in which the letters "h" and "r" stand to each other on the typewriter of to-day or a slip on the part of the typesetter in the composing room fully accounted for the "error." A typographical error may be an evil thing. It is sometimes a very serious thing, but it never fails of being, from some point of view, funny to the last degree.

The presence of the typewriter in the newspaper offices of to-day has done much to make easier the lives of the author, the editor and the compositor, but the typewriter, with all its advantages, has no automatic punctuating device, and the virtue of the comma is amply illustrated by the story of the Scotch divine, an extract from whose sermon as it appeared in a local paper reads:

"Only last Sabbath, my friends, a young woman died in this parish very suddenly while I was endeavoring to preach the word in a state of beastly intoxication."

And over a poem printed in a weekly appeared the startling comment:

"The following verses were written more than fifty years ago by a gentleman who has for fifteen years lain in his grave for his own amusement."

Unusual handwriting, however, has more to answer for than the vagaries of the typewriter. "The greater the author the greater the scrawler" is only too frequently true, and it is not always fair to put the blame for this sort of blunder on the shoulders of the compositor. Carlyle and Balzac were two whose copy few printers could read and none would handle for more than an hour at a time. Victor Hugo and Byron were impossibly bad penmen, and Sydney Smith is quoted as frankly saying:

"I must decline reading my own handwriting twenty-four hours after I have written it."

STRANGEST OF BIRDS.

Peculiarities of the Penguin Puzzles Ornithologists.

Ornithological puzzles are the penguins, with their curiously shaped wings and odd, unbirdlike upright carriage. The peculiarities of their wings suggest that the penguins are descendants of birds which used their wings rather than their legs in the pursuit of prey under water, and as the struggle intensified between the competing individuals the most expert at this sort of swimming would get the most food and oust their less successful rivals. The winners gained advantage over their neighbors in proportion as their wings improved as swimming organs and, inversely and of necessity, became less suited to perform the work of flight.

In all other birds the feathers, though shed annually, are more or less gradually displaced. But in the penguins the new feathers all start into being at the same time and thrust out the old feathers upon their tips, so that these come away in great flakes. And, whereas in all birds save penguins the new feathers as they thrust their way through the skin end in pencil-like points, formed by investing sheaths, in the penguins these sheaths are open at the tips and attached by their rims to the roots of the old feathers, and hence these are held to their successors until these have attained a sufficient length to insure protection against cold.

This curious device for retaining the warmth afforded by the old feathers until the new generation can fill their places is apparently due to the fact that penguins are essentially natives of the Antarctic regions, although some now inhabit the tropical seas.

The Old Time Jury.

Grievances of present day jurymen are mild compared with those inflicted on them in the past. Until the passing of an act of Parliament in 1870 British jurymen were prohibited item having meat, drink or fire (candlelight only excepted) while considering their verdict. In some ancient courts they were even subjected to physical violence. They were told to "lay their heads together" as an indispensable preliminary to finding a verdict. No sooner did the jury dive beneath the level of their boxes than an usher, armed with a willow wand, took up a position near them. If any juryman presumed to come to the surface before the verdict was arrived at, down came the wand on the head of the offender.

Hash.

The old Greek word for hash was made up of 170 letters and 78 syllables. It begins this way—lepadochemachoselachogaleo, and so on to the end of the 170 letters. Aristophanes used the whole word in one of his plays. It is supposed to take in all the ingredients of this vague and comprehensive viand which we in this hurry scurry, time saving age, call hash.

Rag Doll Tells Her.

One of the oddest mascots in the world belongs to Miss Constance Collier, the famous actress. Upon her pincushion is pined a little black bogey made of rags. Its owner vows that when she is to make a success in a new part the impish face bears a cheerful grin, but if failure is to be her lot the creature scowls.

Zam-Buk Cured a Face Sore which Defied all other Remedies for Two Years.

Rev. Charles E. Stafford, of Bridgeburg, Ont., says:—"I had been much troubled for over two years with a sore on my left cheek. I tried all kinds of salves and lotions, but nothing I procured seemed to have the least bit of effect toward healing the sore. Hearing of Zam-Buk, I decided to give it a trial and see if it would bring about a cure, as so many other things had failed. I purchased a supply, and commenced with the treatment. After several applications to my great joy, Zam-Buk had effected what for two years I tried in vain to bring about—a complete cure."

Cases after case could be quoted in which, as in the above instance, Zam-Buk has worked cures when everything else tried had failed. There is a reason for this. Zam-Buk is the ideal remedy because of its unique ingredients for all skin injuries and diseases.

Away back in the days of the Roman gladiators, secret balms were used for the healing of cuts and injuries sustained in the arena and in battle. Then came a period during which external balms were neglected, followed by a period in which all the salves and embrocations had as their base animal fats and oils. Zam-Buk marks a new epoch. It is absolutely devoid of all animal fats, all mineral coloring matters, and is composed entirely of rich medicinal herbal extracts. Zam-Buk is a combination of Nature's rich healing herbal juices by the most modern scientific methods, and the result is a balm which cures when others fail.

Skin diseases, such as eczema, ringworm, salt rheum, and prairie itch, are speedily overcome by it. For piles it is fine!—easing the pain and inflammation, and hastening a cure. It also cures burns, scalds, cuts, ulcers, children's sores and eruptions, blood-poisoning, scratches, old wounds, varicose ulcers, etc. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c. a box, or post-free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Refuse harmful and cheap imitations, sometimes represented as "Just as good."

Letter to The Editor

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—Allow me a little space in your valuable columns to express my opinions on the fixed assessment question. The Peterborough Canoe Co. recently applied for a grant of land from the city upon which to erect a new building, and also for a fixed assessment of $6000. This, Mr. Editor, I do not think the council has any right to grant. The Peterborough Canoe Co., are established and are in a prosperous condition. Their business is growing rapidly, so rapidly that they have to enlarge their premises. What right have they to any assistance from the city? If they were a new firm looking for a place to locate, and as yet had done no business, and made no profits, and were assuming the customary risks with their own money it would be a different proposition. The Canoe Co. needs no assistance. They have a sure thing and are making money. If, Mr. Editor, the council granted the Peterborough Canoe Co., the property they are asking for and gave them a fixed assessment on that particular piece of property. I think they would be getting a pretty generous deal. They should pay taxes on their present property and buildings and upon their new building, if they erect one. In the past the council has thrown away altogether too much money by giving fixed assessments to established institutions. This is a good time to stop the thing. With a new factory it is different, and in this I think I am voicing the opinion, not only of the vast majority of taxpayers, but also of the majority of the aldermen.

Yours truly,
TAXPAYER.

Gas Factories

In People Who Do Not Know How to Select Food and Drink Properly

On the coffee question a lady says:

"I used to be so miserable after breakfast that I did not know how to get through the day. Life was a burden to me. When I tried to sleep I was miserable by having horrible dreams followed by hours of wakefulness. Gas would rise on my stomach and I would belch almost continually. Then every few weeks I would have a long siege of sick headaches. I tried a lot of medicines and physicians without benefit.

"Finally, I concluded to give up my coffee and tea altogether and use Postum. The first cup was a failure. It was wishy-washy and I offered to give the remainder of the package to anyone who would take it.

"I noticed later on in one of the advertisements that Postum should be boiled at least 15 minutes to make it good. I asked the cook how she made it and she said, 'Just the same as I did tea, being careful not to let it steep too long.'

"I read the directions and concluded Postum had not had a fair trial, so we made a new lot and boiled it 15 to 20 minutes. That time it came to the table a different beverage and from so delicious that we have been using it ever since.

"My sick headaches left entirely as did my sleepless nights, and I am now a different woman."

"There's a Reason."

Weary, Worn Out, Tired

If You Feel Poorly this Spring this Article is worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health. If the nerves are weak, if the stomach liver, bowels or kidneys, fail to work properly, healthy surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health—the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the life and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Burton of Lewistown: "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depressions, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned of the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvellous. I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly."

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

BASEBALL

There was no meeting of the Junior Church Baseball League last night. The boys did not show up and things that were present went home. It looks very much like too many leagues, too many would-be teams and not enough enthusiasm. Leagues have been formed all over the city, and in the early part of the season there was great talk of baseball. In fact there were so many leagues that it looked like four or five games every day. As a result none of them have materialized, so far as the public is concerned, except the school league. The small boys have settled down to business, and already have played several games. The Midland league, The Toronto-Peterborough league, the senior, intermediate and junior church leagues, are still in dreamland, and it looks as if they would stay there. The officers have been appointed, but that is all. So far as can be learned no salaries have yet been paid, probably that is the draw back. One thing, however, is certain, if the ball tossers do not get busy soon all that classy ball so much was heard of will be in a lone class by itself.

Port Hope Got 15 Cents Reduction on Key Rate

It is well known that the inspectors of the Canadian Underwriters' Association have been in the city for a couple of inspecting the property in the business section with the object in view of reducing the key rate. There is good news in store for the merchants. There was for Port Hope as the following from the Port Hope Guide will show;

The Guide is informed by Messrs. Thos. Long & Son that the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association has just announced a reduction on fifteen cents on all rates on mercantile risks in Port Hope. This will be welcome news to merchants and property owners in the business section of the town. The reduction does not apply to manufacturing risks rated under the manufacturing schedule of the association, nor to those risks rated under the three-year tariff.

The reduced rates are operative only in the case of expiring policies. No rebates are allowable on current policies, and should such policies be cancelled by agent into date of cancellation, even if replaced by new policies.

Would Re-open Inquest Kinrades Have Vanished, Disappeared from Boston

Montreal, May 13.— The Kinrades have vanished. after tiring out a large squad of detectives, gum-shoe men and newspaper writers, artists and kodak fiends, the little party of three has faded away in the fens of Boston.

There are three theories as to what has become of them. One is that they have taken a slow freight boat for Europe, the only ship which cleared from the port of Boston yesterday; another is that they have gone into hiding in one of the many small boarding houses in the north end; while the third is that they boarded the train for Portland. It having leaked out while the party was in Montreal that Portland was the ultimate destination of the party.

MAY BE IN BOARDING HOUSE.

That they have gone to a small boarding house near the station seems most likely. The party, upon arriving at the north station, yesterday morning, walked directly across the street and put up at the Haymarket Hotel. The last seen of them was at breakfast about half-past eight. At noon they had disappeared although a shadow had been kept on the hotel every minute all morning.

WOULD RE-OPEN INQUEST.

Hamilton, May 13.—That Foreman R. B. Spera and a majority of the jury which investigated the murder of Ethel Kinrade are prepared to go to great length to urge the attorney-general's department to make a move at once, is evident from the fact that a scheme is now on foot to try and have the inquest reopened. If the Ontario Cabinet this afternoon does not approve of the recommendations which are reported to have been made by the Crown authorities, Foreman Spera and his colleagues will move tomorrow. Coroner Anderson, has already suggested to some of the jurors the advisability of meeting at his house to confer.

E. F. Stenabaugh, one of the jurors, declared today that he had prepared a verdict so strong that the department could not have afforded to ignore it. Eight or ten jurors, he said, would have supported it. He intimated that it would have been pointed out that the evidence failed to show that there was a man in the house the afternoon Ethel Kinrade was murdered.

NEVER HEARD OF IT.

"I never heard of that before," said Attorney-General Foy this afternoon, when shown a despatch from Hamilton declaring that the jury in the Kinrade case has had a verdict drawn up and containing the name of some one, but returned an open verdict after the Crown's conference with the family's lawyers in order not to interfere with their plans.

"The jury should not have decided on impressions, but on facts," was Mr. Foy's comment.

In regard to the statement that "Foreman Spera and some of the jurors wrote a combined note to the attorney-general." Mr. Foy said; "Mr. Spera did write me a letter but as far as I recollect he spoke only for himself and the others did not write me. His statements were very indefinite and he did not mention any name or tell me they had a draft verdict ready. They should not have given a verdict on what they thought might have happened. It was only a few days ago that I got the letter."

Mr. Foy refused to discuss the case further.

Opening Meeting of Cheese Board

The opening meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board for this year will be held on Wednesday, May 19th. The price can hardly be estimated at present but it will likely be opened over 12 cents. It is not expected that the offering of cheese for the first meeting will be a large one. Last year it was small and the situation will be considered satisfactory if the boarding is as good as the first meeting of 1908. Alderman Geo. Gillespe, who has been through the country this spring is in close touch with conditions and he does not expect a very good showing when the board meets on Wednesday next.

Canadian Woman was Barred from States

Clinton, Ont., May 13.—The people of this town are indignant and amused at the action of United States immigration or Custom officers in refusing to allow a woman, who had been visiting her old home here, after a residence of some years with her husband in New York State, to return to her husband.

Mrs. W. Hamm, the daughter of Joseph Cooper of this town, married her husband two years ago, and went with him to live in Rose, N. Y. In the fall of 1907 she came home to visit her parents, and remained some months, returning to her husband with no interference. This spring she again came to Clinton, and was here two months, but on returning on May 7th she was stopped at the suspension bridge, and refused admittance to the United States.

Argument nor explanation availed; she, with her small baby, had to return to Clinton, where she now is.

The case has been taken up with the authorities in Washington.

Jack Seymour Won First Marathon Race at Roller Rink--Fast Time Made

Mayor Rush Started the Skaters Off on Their Long Grind --An Exciting Race All the Way.

Jack Seymour won the first Marathon race on roller skates ever seen in Peterborough, and he did it in the remarkably fast time of one hour and fifty-two minutes. Prof. Genno deserves great credit for his enterprise in putting on this class of amusement for the people, although the people evidently do not appreciate a good thing. The attendance was small, but the sport was good. There were seven starters, and only three dropped out. One was because he could not keep his skates on, the second one was little Frank Lundy, aged 10 years, who covered 6 1-2 miles in 30 minutes, which is a remarkable feat for a boy his age and size. But he can go some, and at regular intervals called to his trainers for an orange or a lemon which he sucked while making the next lap. The third man to stop was Rolly Smith, who complained of being bothered by the other skaters. He had gone about half the distance, and up to that time had a good lead.

The race was started at twelve minutes past 9 o'clock by Mayor Rush, who addressed a few words to the seven boys who were lined up and then pulled the bell. The boys were off, Smith took the lead and set a very hot pace until he had changed the bunch. Smith retained his lead and gained two laps and was going after his third lap when he claims one of the big fellows interfered with him. At any rate he fell several times. The first mile was made in four minutes, and this clip was kept up until the first 10 miles were covered in 42 minutes, or 4 1-5 minutes to the mile. This is very fast going and especially so when it is remembered that it was a 20-mile lap track. In the first part of the race Clute and Kennedy gave Smith a merry chase, but in the second ten Seymour and Parrington, who had been going easy before began to pull up and soon cut down the lead, and then went on ahead. The most excitement was between Kennedy and Clute, who fought it out all through the race. The 50 miles were made in 84 minutes and Seymour had 2 3-4 laps lead. He took advantage of this and sat down to fix his skate. Parrington jumped up the lead and gained 1 3-4 laps on Seymour, but he could not gain the last lap. In the 25th mile he tried hard but slipped and lost what little ground he had gained. Then just as the 26th mile was finished, Percy again took the lead, and made a fine sprint, but could only gain a few yards, and the long grind was wound up in 1 hour and 52 minutes in the following order;

Seymour, 26 miles 285 yards.
Percy Parrington, 3-4 lap behind.
Mr. Kennedy, 3 laps behind.
R. Clutes, 4 laps behind.

Western Wheat Six Inches High

Winnipeg, May 13.—Reports from all parts of the West show that seeding is now practically completed, and as the weather today is warm and fine prospects are now bright. The Saskatchewan crop increase is at a conservative estimate placed at 10 per cent. Maple Creek reports state that the wheat in some fields which were sown early before the snowstorm are six inches above the ground and very healthy looking. Rain was general throughout the West yesterday, improving the outlook.

Lays His Large Fortune on the Altar

Louisville, Ky., May 13.—The sensation of the Southern Baptist Convention in this city was an announcement to the laymen last night by Mr. Joseph Shenstone, Millionaire manufacturer, of Toronto, Ont., that of his immense fortune he would keep only enough for his future living expenses, and would devote the remainder to the service of God.

Toronto, May 13.—"I don't know anything about it," said Mr. J. K. Osborne, vice-president of the Massey-Harris Company, when asked by a newspaper correspondent about the despatch. "I think it is very much exaggerated," he added, "but I don't anything about his private affairs. In fact, I don't know where he is just now."

Mr. Shenstone, who lives at 49 Walmer road, is a member of Walmer Road Baptist church, and prominent in the work of the Baptist Church, and in missionary work generally. He has not yet returned to the city.

There has never been an association in Oshawa and this is a new feature in the life of the young men of that town.

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and is so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual.

In Charge of the Kingston Camp

The Provincial Committee of the Y.M.C.A. have asked Mr. Hassard to take charge of the Y.M.C.A. work at the Kingston military camp in June for a couple of weeks. The Board of directors met this week and granted Mr. Hassard leave of absence.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents, large size 50 cents.

Wild Scenes in French House--Strike Caused a Fierce Rowdy Time

Paris, May 13.—There were wild scenes in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon when the government asked for a vote of confidence on the attitude assumed by it in the strike of the government employes. Mm. Sembat and Jaures warmly defended the stand taken by the postmen, and the latter declared that the battle which had begun would not end until the functionaries were possessed of the same "syndicated" rights as are private workmen. He charged that for years past a parliamentary majority had encouraged "syndicatism," and he pointed out that the Swedish Government had just concluded a five-year contract with the employes of the State-controlled railroads.

Suddenly, amid growing excitement M. Combrousse, Radical Republican, intervened, and virtually charged the Socialists with being the tools of the Reactionaries. He declared specifically that M. Morel owed his seat the Duc D'Uzes.

Instantly bedlam broke loose and the chamber was in an uproar. M. Morel tried in vain to make himself heard above the clamor, and M. Brisson, president of the chamber, clapped his hat on his head as a sign that the session was closed. The tumult, however, continued. One of the delegates bounded over the presidential chair, grabbed the bell and rang furiously. Then the Socialists began singing the "Internationage," to which M. Beaudry D'Asson and his Royalist colleagues, standing on chairs, replied by singing "Long Live Henry IV."

Finally the public and the press galleries were cleared, but there was frantic delirium both inside and out of the Chambers of Deputies. M. Baudry D'Asson climbed the tribune, and with the Socialists shouting and singing, he tried to harangue the deputies. Outside in the corridors several person who raised the cry "Long Live the King!" were almost mobbed.

Premier Clemenceau and the ministers remained on the benches. At first it was apparent that they were amused, but later they grew indignant at the scandalous exhibition in the midst of a serious debate, and summoned the sergeant-at-arms, who ejected M. Baudry D'Asson and closed the steps of the tribune.

After an hour's intermission the session was resumed. M. Baudry D'Asson mounted the tribune to make a personal explanation, but the Socialists soon were on the verge of fisticuffs with the Radicals, and the Sergeant-at-arms again was forced to intervene.

Miner Produces $1,500 in Nuggets

Montreal, May 11.—The discovery of a placer mining area, fifteen miles by five, near Cochrane, or 150 miles north-west of Cobalt, is the latest mining news to reach here from the North.

A gentleman who arrived here today from Cobalt says that from three to four hundred men stampeded from Cobalt to Cochrane on Saturday and more are preparing to follow.

One man came down to Cobalt, and reported that $75 per pan was being secured. The man had $1,500 in nuggets.

An application has been made to the Y.M.C.A. in Syracuse to permit smoking in the lobby and billard room. Those who smoke cannot understand the shock this request has given non-smokers.

Wipe Out $2,000,000 of Worthless Assets

Ottawa, May 12.—The Public Accounts Committee wound up today by adopting the report of the sub-committee wiping out $2,000,000 in worthless assets. An item causing discussion was one of $30 due by Sir Robert Weatherbee for a special train hired many years ago on the Prince Edward Island Railroad, and payment for which has not been made. Mr. McDonald objected to the judge's name going on record, and it was struck off after some rather uncomplimentary references to the jurist.

Joseph Thibeault, summoned in connection with a payment of $23,000 for building the Montreal examining warehouse, telephoned that he was indisposed. As this was the last sitting of the committee it was definitely understood that the case will be investigated next session.

The Rain's Bad Work

Mr. John Hutchinson of Lindsay carter, was in Rosedale on Tuesday with a camp outfit of Mr. Geo. Rea. Mr. Hutchinson reports everything as in first-class condition at that village, but the farmers along the road are greatly alarmed over the continued rainfalls. Some of the fields are like amateur lakes and will not be fit to work on for a week or more. The high lands, however, are fairly dry, and a few farmers were out yesterday getting started with the spring seeding. The season has been very late, and the only hope of the farmer is that we will now have a spell of dry weather.—Lindsay Post.

Memory Mending

What Food Alone Can Do for the Memory

The influence of food upon the brain and memory is so little understood that people are inclined to marvel at it.

Take a person who has been living on improperly selected food and put him upon a scientific diet in which the food Grape-Nuts is largely used and the increase of mental power that follows is truly remarkable.

A Canadian who was sent to Colorado for his health illustrates this point in a most convincing manner;

"One year ago I came from Canada, a nervous wreck, so my physician said, and reduced in weight to almost a skeleton, and my memory was so poor that conversations had to be repeated that had taken place only a few hours before. I was unable to rest day or night for my nervous system was shattered.

"The change of climate helped me a little but it was soon seen that this was not all that I needed. I required the proper selection of food, although I did not realize it until a friend recommended Grape-Nuts to me and I gave this food a thorough trial. Then I knew what the right food could do and I began to change in my feelings and bodily condition.

"This kept up until now after 6 months use of Grape-Nuts all my nervous trouble has entirely disappeared. I have gained in flesh all that I have lost and what is more wonderful to me than anything else my memory is as good as it ever was.

"Grape-Nuts has remade me all over, mind and body, when I never expected to be well again."

"There's a Reason."

Britain Leads World as an Exporting Nation--Imports Billion More Than Any Other Country

Washington, May 13.—A new record for the international commerce of the world was established in 1907, according to the statistical abstract of the United States, prepared by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

This abstract puts the total exports of the various countries and colonies of the world in that year at $[illegible], and the imports at $[illegible]. Ten countries contributed more than two-thirds of the total.

On the export side the United Kingdom headed the list with $2,057,000,000, and the United States coming next with $1,835,000,000. Germany next with $1,639,000,000, and France fourth with $1,520,000,000.

On the import side, the United Kingdom again headed the list with $3,142,000,000. Germany coming second with $2,000,000,000. France third with $1,201,000,000, and the United States fourth with $1,194,000,000.

Practically two-thirds of this total of international trade is accredited to Europe.

In the year under consideration Canada took fifty-eight per cent. of her imports from the United States.

Is Fred Simpson the Coming Long Distance Wonder?

Outdoor Canada for May, one of the best sporting publications in Canada has the following paragraphs of local interest;—

Is it to be Simpson the Adored Indian, vice Longboat, deposed? Will the proud Ojibway take the place that the Onondaga has occupied in the heart of Canadian sporting lovers for two and a half years? The redman from Hiawatha seems to be coming, coming, although he has no press agents, no Tom Flanagan and no Marathon victories to his credit. To him a good many of the experts look for something doing in the future, although there are few of the genuine authorities who believe that, he is the natural distance conqueror that Longboat was. Simpson was badly beaten by Shrubb in the fifteen mile indoor event at Toronto Armories. But he turned round and walloped Appleby to the King's taste at Rosedale. The Indian is a genuine out-of-doors man, and he is unlikely ever to make an indoor performer. To him the taste of tobacco or the juice of the rye, which is indigenous to this fair country, are equally unknown. The alcohol does not bother him to any extent at indoor races, but the tobacco smoke certainly does. It gets into his lung cavities and puts him all to the bad. Henceforth, if his manager, Tom Eck, wants to get the best results from the Hiawathian he will have to figure for a no smoking clause in all his race agreements.

No kind of smoke troubles Thomas Longboat, Esq. He has consumed cut, plug, cigarp and cigarets since he was knee high to a grasshopper. He is immune from any bronchial worries caused by a smoke-laden atmosphere. He can run nearly as well indoors as under the blue canopy—always supposing that he is in condition.

THAT NEW YORK RACE.

And it was solely from lack of condition that Longboat dropped out at the Polo grounds in New York, when St. Yves, the former French waiter, galloped home, a winner. Longboat was severely criticised after the race for having neglected his training, but as a matter of fact the fault was by no means wholly his. He had bad advisers; voluntary advisers, it is true, but still advisers in whom he put too much confidence. He took things easy when he should have been conditioning himself as earnestly and as rigorously as possible. The lesson that he learned on that occasion is not likely to be soon forgotten. He has said so to his friends—and they are legion still. The only ones who have dropped away from him have been a few selfish gentlemen who were diligently in search of their own skins of what might be coming through their intimacy with the Big Chief. They have retired from his embarrage, and neither the Indian nor the public will weep any bitter tears. Longboat will henceforth do what he should have done long ago. He will understand that as long-distance racing is his business, he must condition it and himself in a businesslike way. System in athletics is as necessary as system in commerce. Now that Brother Thomas has got wise to this fact, we may well hope to see him at his very best. The long-distance game will last

Deaf

For Thirteen Years

Mr. Geo. Warner, publisher of The Masonic Register, Toronto, was almost totally deaf in both ears for a number of years. He experimented with a thousand different remedies, and only got relief by using Catarrhozone, and is cured.

Mr. Warner says:—"For the past thirteen years my hearing has been badly affected. The streets were as quiet to me as if I lived in the city of the dead. I could neither hear the noise of street cars or sound of horses' feet on the pavement. Before I had used Catarrhozone Inhaler three days I was able to notice a great change in my condition, which gradually improved until now I can hear a whisper across the room. I cannot tell you how much I appreciate Catarrhozone or the wonderful results I have derived from using it. Catarrhozone has my strongest endorsement and I can quite willing that you should use it."

Mr. Warner's unsolicited testimonial furnishes abundant proof that deafness can be cured, even in old age, if Catarrhozone is used. This remedy scientific in its application and meets with the endorsement of prominent ministers and doctors all over Canada. Our best equipped health institutions always keep it on hand, and cases are recorded where it has been used with great success in the Government deaf and dumb institutions where other means proved futile.

If your hearing is poor, if you have head noises, or ringing in the ears, be sure and use Catarrhozone. It is a regular miracle worker and is sure to help you. Complete outfit costs $1; trial size 25 cents. Sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

INEVITABLE WARS AVOIDED

The declarations recently made by British Ministers, that in maintaining the two-power standard for the navy, the navy of the United States is not taken into account, is the subject of some thoughtful comment in the Woodstock Sentinel-Review. It is not very long, says our contemporary, since a very different feeling prevailed. De Tocqueville wrote in his history of Democracy in the United States: "Nothing can be more violent than the hatred between the Americans of the United States and the English," and he certainly was not drawing entirely on his imagination. "Most of us can remember when twisting the lion's tail was almost a national pastime in the United States. Now, all that has changed. Mr. Roosevelt finds it necessary to go to Africa to do any tail-twisting."

The Sentinel-Review reminds us also of the passing of the Russian alarm, and of the French alarm. Upon several occasions in recent history war with these countries has been declared to be inevitable. What is remarkable is that when these alarms are raised they seemed to be well grounded; the arguments in favor of them have an appearance of strength, and they influence some moderate and peace-loving men. "I am no alarmist, and no Jingo," says one, "but really the conduct of France on this occasion goes beyond all bounds, and must arouse the spirit of everyone who loves England."

That the German alarm also will pass away to the relief of the Sentinel-Review, in some respects it may do good. It has served to call attention to the fact that Germany is the best organized nation in the world, either for peace or war. It may be said that German efficiency is sometimes secured at the price of liberty. But Great Britain, without relinquishing any essential element of liberty, may learn something from her neighbor. It will do no harm to have a thorough investigation into the efficiency of the British army and navy. The German system of technical education, the German system of preventing the growth of slums, are well worthy of examination, and probably of imitation.

The impression conveyed by "An Englishman's Home" is not so much fear of Germany as fear of a loss of seriousness and efficiency among the people of England. The play represents the Englishman and his family as leading rather frivolous lives, and as lacking efficiency and resourcefulness. If that is a true picture, it is a serious matter, whether in peace or in war. It is possible that a long period of unquestioned supremacy has made Englishmen careless. It is certain that the prodigious growth of London has been unwholesome. There are too many people employed in occupations which require little or no initiative and develop neither body nor mind. The patriotic helplessness of a certain class of immigrants may be ascribed to this manner of life.

German statecraft treats the State as a huge machine, which is to be oiled, kept in thorough repair, and maintained up to the highest point of efficiency. The system is associated with an espionage and an interference with personal liberty, which are repugnant to men brought up under British institutions. But it is possible to avoid these features, and yet to learn much from Germany, which in many respects is in the forefront of civilized nations.

Congratulations to Mr. A. F. MacLaren and Mr. Wm. O'Beirne, of the Stratford Beacon, on their good sense in amicably settling their libel suit. What sense is there in two real nice fellows going into court and shaking all the money out of each other's clothes until the floor looks like the kitchen of the mint at cooking time?—Toronto Star.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents. Large size 50 cents.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative, aimed direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

WILL YOU HELP

Us To Build a Mill To Concentrate This Ore?

A Made Mine with Thousands of Tons of Gold, Silver and Lead Ore in Sight.

The POCAHONTAS COPPER QUEEN MINING Co.

Incorporated under the laws of Arizona for one million dollars, shares par value of one dollar, fully paid and for ever non-assessable. Has progressed with its development work to a point where the making of a mine no longer enters into the problem.

The holdings consist of 14 claims 245 acres in Yavapai County Arizona, Big Bug District. This county alone produces more wealth from mines than the entire district of Gold Fields, Nevada. Did you know that?

We are in the midst of big mines, United Verde, Binghampton, Blue Belle, The Jessie, Yeager Canyon, Leland, Crown King, Tiger Mine, Ora Belle, Savoy, Richenbar, First Home, Henrietta, Oriental, Poland Milling Co., and many others.

Proof of the Mine Lies in the Smelter Return

Shipped one car to Luna Lead Works, Deming, N.M., showed values in gold, silver and lead of $1956.

With a concentrating plant to put four or five cars into one, it does not require a mathematician to show what the results would be, especially as we are so situated that we can work four dollar ore at a profit.

Most of our work is on the Bullion Bar claim, where we have five parallel veins and one thousand feet east and west would cut them all, what the result would then be no one can anticipate, with depth I can see but one result, they would all be one vast ore body, our deposit of ore is in a true fissure, is sulphide, and fills the veins from wall to wall and its continuous thickness being 27 inches and the thickest 30 feet, several hundred feet of sinking and drifts show continued ore body.

Mr. Frank Chinesmith, Mayor Arizona, who has been working for the past thirty-five years in mines, said: It is the biggest mine for the amount of work done he ever saw, and paid me cash $500, for stock, would say one show any stronger evidence of his faith.

We are now sinking a double compartment shaft 215 feet north of the old works in the same ledge, and are now 65 feet deep, ore from the surface, we will sink this shaft 200 feet deep with drifts to connect with drifts in the old shaft.

The Value of a Developed Property

It is well enough to talk about the possibilities of striking ore, at the same time let us note the distinction between a mine and a prospect and admit that a mine with a large reserve of ore back of it, insures steady employment in the immense shoots already opened and guarantees continued profit.

The Pocahontas enterprise has, in addition to its demonstrated worth all of the development work has only served to more fully demonstrate the value of the holdings and to make certain the steady earnings of the property with the presence of a mill to concentrate the ore.

It is well to bear in mind that this large mineral estate is located in a section where big things are being accomplished continuously, it is always well to mine in a country where mining pays.

This company is not going before you for the realization of any profit through the flotation of this enterprise. The money is not wanted to go in search of some possible body of ore. This proposition resolves itself into the construction of a milling plant that will successfully handle the ore that is already blocked out, and at the same time operations will be continued to open further reserves.

Two of the largest banks of the territory are at Prescott, Ariz., they have made a goodly portion of their wealth by dealing in mines. THEY WILL LOAN US MONEY ON SIXTY DAYS TIME. With their mining engineers in the field to inspect property, don't you think they know what they are after?

We are out of debt, and do not propose to make any entangling alliances, do not want that kind of help, we do need your help, and it is your opportunity of a life time to make an investment that should be a dividend payer for years.

We need about $10,000, are selling stock at 25c cash, or 1-4 cash and balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

GRIEF AND GREED.

Sorely Afflicted, Yet He Kept an Eye on the Main Point.

The following communication was recently addressed by a grief stricken German husband to the secretary of a life insurance company in Germany:

"Sir—Deeply afflicted, I take up my pen to inform you that my dear wife, Anne Maria, nee L——, insured in your company for the sum of $750, has suddenly died, leaving me a victim to the deepest despair. This grievous blow fell on me this morning at 7. Kindly endeavor to let me have my insurance money as promptly as possible. The policy bears the number ——, as you will find by reference to your books.

"I may say very seriously and in all sincerity that she was a faithful wife and an admirable mother. In order that all formalities may be settled with promptitude I inclose herewith a certificate officially recording her death.

"Her illness was but a short one. Nevertheless she suffered intensely, which naturally renders my grief all the more poignant. I have no doubt that you will afford me partial consolation by sending on the insurance money as promptly as possible.

"In return I hereby formally promise to have my second wife insured in your company for $1,500, double the sum for which my defunct darling was insured.

"My grief is immense, yet the conviction that you will afford me consolation sustains me during this terrible ordeal. In the hope that we shall soon draw our insurance money, my children join me in," etc.—Exchange.

CAME ON THE JUMP.

A Signal That Brought the Busy Waiters In a Body.

To get a waiter quickly in a big cafe is at times very difficult, but a Germantown man recently learned a method from a New York friend which is guaranteed instantly to bring not one but several waiters. This Germantown man was giving a dinner in one of Philadelphia's swellest cafes, with the New Yorker and two women as his guests. After a long delay a waiter came and took the order. Then one of the women decided that she must make a change in her order. The host signaled one waiter after another without avail. After about ten minutes of violent gesticulating on his part the New Yorker said:

"You don't know how to attract their attention. I'll bet you $5 I can bring a waiter to this table within thirty seconds."

"I'll take the bet," said the Philadelphian, drawing out his watch. The New Yorker reached over into the middle of the table, picked up a thin, delicate glass and deliberately dashed it to the floor. Instantly every waiter in the room came rushing up to see what was the trouble.

"Charge one tumbler up on the bill," said the New Yorker laconically, "and change one of these oyster orders to Blue Points."

As the waiters dispersed he added, "I guess you owe me a five spot, old man."

Fishing Snakes.

While fishing in the Fort St. George moat, at Madras, a correspondent of Country Life saw a snake fifteen inches long come out of the water with a fish in its mouth. On catching sight of the writer it dropped the fish and bolted, leaving the fish on the bank alive. On another occasion, while fishing in a reservoir near Ghazipad, he again saw a snake emerging from the water with a fish in its mouth. This snake was about twenty-four inches long, and on killing it he was able to identify the fish as a common species of Indian fresh water fish. Later on he saw a viper, nearly four feet long, lying in shallow water. The writer hooked it ashore with his tackle, upon which the snake attacked him, leaving a large yellow fang in his fishing rod.

Nature's Armor.

Lobsters and crabs are familiar examples of armor bearing creatures. The lobsters have wonderful coats of mail suggestive of those devised by human warriors in the age of chivalry. They combine perfect security with ease of movement, owing to their jointed structure. The manner in which crabs when at rest tuck their legs beneath them so as to bring them under the shelter of the hard carapace is interesting. The crab is doubly protected, for it resembles a water worn pebble, and thus looks to large fishes which like to eat the crustacean—so long as it keeps still—very similar to the objects with which it is surrounded.

Cutting the Finger Nails.

Cutting the finger nails appears to have been the most indispensable service the ancient Roman barber rendered to his patrons. Martial, chaffing a dog who had tried to dodge the barber by using plasters to remove his beard, asks triumphantly, "How are you going to manage about your nails?" And the miser in Plautus collects the parings of his nails from the barber to make something out of them, apparently never dreaming that he could save money by cutting them himself.

No Excuse.

Waiter (whose attention has been called to a gross error in addition)—Very sorry, sir; but, even if you hadn't found out the mistake, the firm would have benefited, not me. Diner—Then you have no excuse!—Punch.

Right to the Point.

"He is a man of few words."

"Yes, and they are, 'What is there in it for me?'"

VICTIMS OF BLACKMAILING.

Some of the Schemes Framed Up to Get Money Away From Royalty.

It is said that no one in all the world falls a victim to the snare of the blackmailer more readily than a member of a royal house and in spite of the fact that all precautions are taken to guard royalty against unpleasant experiences of that nature. If the blackmailer has the faintest shadow of a "hold" it is impossible to fight it out in court and the unhappy prince must grin and—pay it.

The German Crown Prince is the latest victim. When he was at Ploen College he struck up a friendship with a young German noble, Count Hochberg, who was also a student at Ploen. The friendship was kept up after college days were over, and for some time letters were exchanged regularly.

The count fell on evil days and had to emigrate to America, where he became chauffeur to a man named Barnes. After some time he dropped his own name and, having adopted that of Barnes, vanished from the sight and hearing of his friends.

Recently he has reappeared—with the crown prince's letters. These he threatens to publish unless his imperial highness cares to buy them. The prince's attitude resembles that of the Duke of Wellington in a similar situation: "Publish and be hanged!" He says there is nothing in the letters he wrote to Count Hochberg that is worth paying a penny for.

Recently King Leopold of Belgium received an anonymous letter from Liege saying that the writer was an accomplice in a plot to blow up the royal palace at Brussels and to kill the entire royal family. He demanded $5,000, which was to be placed at the foot of a certain tree in the Kinkempois wood near Liege. In return he would reveal what he knew about the plot.

The King sent messengers to the place named with orders to place an envelope at the foot of the tree and then watch what happened. The watchers had not long to wait. A man who had evidently been keeping an eye on them was seen to take the envelope.

The messengers promptly closed with him and he has had an opportunity of thinking out fresh schemes in prison.

The "Czar" of Bulgaria had once to pay dearly to recover certain compromising documents. He had left some important papers on his desk and a palace official glancing through them discovered their marketable value.

From the Austrian capital he wrote demanding to be "squared." Ferdinand set the Austrian police on his track, but the blackmailer evidently expecting this had already left for Russia. In the end the new "Czar" had to pay up and look pleasant and vow to be more careful of his dangerous secrets in future.

The Weight of Touch.

A wonderful instrument is that which has recently been invented for the purpose of measuring the sense of touch. The device consists of a series of little disks, suspended by fine, delicate threads from wooden handles, the last being stuck into holes around a block. The lightest disk is taken out and brought into contact with the skin of the subject, the latter having closed his eyes. If nothing is felt a heavier disk is employed, and so on till the pressure become noticeable. Through the medium of these disks it has been found that the sense of touch is acute on the forehead and temple. A touch of a disk weighing 3-100 of a grain was observable on the temple, one weighing 8-100 on the nose or chin, and one weighting 9-100 on the inside of a finger.

The Generous Scot.

An Edinburgh tourist arrived at King's Cross station one day, accompanied by his wife and daughters and an enormous quantity of luggage. One of the porters attended to the latter, taking about a quarter of an hour to convey it to the cab outside.

When he was done, the canny Scot produced his snuffbox and said:

"Man, ye've been very obleegin'. Wad ye tak' a pinch o' snuff?"—London Scraps.

Method In Madness.

The visitor (watching a lunatic wheeling a barrow upside down in the asylum grounds)—"My dear chap, that's not the way to wheel a barrow! You should turn it the other way up."

The Lunatic—"Wrong! Go down one. I tried it that way, but they filled it full of bricks."

A Neat Retort.

"I thought," said the American who was seeing Europe for the first time, "that your people had a lot of interesting ruins over here?"

"Once we had such things," the native apologised, "but your heiresses have come over and had most of them put in good repair."

LAND OF GIANTS.

Some of the Popular Beliefs Regarding Cornwall.

About the Land's End the land is bare, harsh, and scarred; here and there are fields of stunted grass, stony and hedged with low hedges of bare stones, like the fields of Galway; and, for the rest, haggard downs of flowerless heather, sown with grey rocks, and gashed with lean patches through which the naked soil shows black. The cliffs are of granite, and go down sheer into the sea, naked, or thinly clad with lichen, grey, green, and occasionally orange; they are built up with great blocks and columns, or stacked together in tiers, fitted and clamped like cyclopean architecture; or climb rock by rock, leaning inwards, or lean outwards, rock poised upon rock, as if a touch would dislodge them, poised and perpetual. They are heaped into altars, massed into thrones, carved by the sea into fantastic shapes of men and animals; they are like castles and like knights in armor; they are split and stained like bulwarks of rusty iron, blackened with age and water; they are like the hulls of old battleships, not too old to be impregnable, and they have human names and the names of beasts. They nod and peer with human heads and wigs, open sharks' fangs out of the water, strut and poise with an uncouth mockery of motion, and are as if mysteriously and menacingly alive. This is the land of giants; there is the Giant's Chair at Tol-Pedn, and the Giant's pulpit at Boscawen, and the Giant's Foot at Tolcarne, and the Giant's Hand on Carn Brea. And there is a medieval humor in Cornish legends which still plays freakishly with the devil and with the saints. Here, more than anywhere in Cornwall, I can understand, says a writer in Harper's Magazine, the temper of Cornish legends, because here I can see the visible images of popular beliefs; the Satanic humor, the play of giants; the goblin gambols of the spirits of the earth and sea. The scenery here is not sublime, nor is it exquisite as in other parts of the county; but it has a gross earthly gaiety, as of nature untamed and uncouth; a rough playmate, without pity or unkindness, wild, boisterous, and laughing. There is an eerie laughter along these coasts which seem made not only for the wreckers who bloodied them, and for the witches whose rock chairs are shown you, where they sat brewing tempests, but for the tormented and ridiculous roarings of Tregeagle and the elemental monsters.

Rosalind and Orlando.

How old some of our favorite actresses and singers are getting! Miss Ellen Terry was sixty-one a week or two ago. Mme. Patti is actually sixty-six, while the other day Mrs. Kendal completed her sixtieth year. Mrs. Kendal, by the way, is still thought of by older patrons of the theatres as the sister of "Tom" Robertson. She was his very little sister. "It is amusing," she once said, "to hear people talk and write about my eldest brother Tom and me playing together as children. My mother married when she was eighteen, and my brother was born when she was nineteen. I was born when she was forty-eight, and was her twenty-second child. So my brother was a grown man with a moustache when I knew him. I was brought up with his two children, little Tom and Maude, my own nephew and niece." Mrs. Kendal was married forty years ago, and the story has often been told how, owing to a death in the company, she and her husband were obliged to act the parts of Rosalind and Orlando on their wedding day. And what a reception they had when they came to the passage, "Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?" Orlando: "I will, as fast as she can marry us."

"As Self-Respecting Men."

Rev. F. B. Meyer, who has left England on a six months' mission tour, has many stories to tell of his flock in Lambeth. He got the men together by giving them an attractive service on Sunday. "Look 'ere, guv'nor, is this a blanket and coal society?" he was asked on one occasion by a man who thought of joining the Pleasant Sunday Afternoon Brotherhood. "For a moment," says the reverend gentleman, "I didn't catch the drift of the question, and then answered, No, brothers, I have no cash to spare to give you blankets and coals, but I will show you how to get them for yourselves.' 'All right, then, we will come along, but if it had been the other way round we would have got it too hot from our mates.' Ever since then," concludes Mr. Meyer, "I have dealt with my brothers as self-respecting men."

A Curiosity of Age.

One of the most curious instances of longevity is found in Miss Louisa Courtenay's "Notes of An Octogenarian." A witness in a will case in which Bellenden-Ker, the great English conveyancer, was engaged, was asked if he had any brothers or sisters. He replied that he had had one brother, who died 130 years ago. The court expressed incredulity, and documentary evidence was produced in support of the statement. This showed that the witness' father, who married first at the age of 19, had a son who died in infancy. The father married again at the age of 75, and had a son who lived to appear in the witness box at the age of 94, and make the above startling statement.

Missionary Goes to Prison.

H. M. cruiser Cambrian, conveying Colonel W. E. Gudgeon, Resident Commissioner at Rarotonga, has just visited the disturbed island in the Cook group, South Pacific. The leader of the movement, a dismissed teacher of the London Missionary Society, has been tried and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. Four others were sentenced to lesser terms for hauling down the British flag, unseating the judge, and restricting trade. The leader received a further sentence of two years penal servitude for embezzling the church funds.

HOW TO TELL

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore, —that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, color bleaches, spirits droop.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"When I was so stooped and back weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharp twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles, and joints lack of appetite, and loss of sleep, touch the same. Cure the kidneys. Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands. 25c at all dealers.

Early Fishermen was Caught

An early fisherman yesterday morning was caught red-handed with a tangeby inspector Watt, according to a report received from "one who was there." He had speared a beauty above the Hunter street bridge, and feeling secure in the seclusion of the hour he was cleaning it and had its head cut off. The inspector appeared suddenly, commanding the spear and line, and a settlement which has been made or will have to be made for the fun of fishing out of season.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Sheep's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. (And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Sheep doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Sheep's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Sheep's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Committee of the Whole Held Special Meeting

A meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council was held last night when several matters were introduced. A couple of deputations were heard and a couple of letters were read, including one from Mr. W. J. Francis stating that he would made the necessary report on the Smith street bridge for $100.

OUTSIDE THE TREE LINE.

A deputation was present headed by Mr. Kidd, asking for a sidewalk near the Normal school outside the tree line. Their petition had asked for that as the council had secured additional property for the roadway they thought they should have it on the outside. The engineer, however had started to work on the inside.

On motion of Ald Turner and Ald. Buller that the engineer not proceed with the work for the time being and that this matter be referred to the Board of Work.

Ald. Morgan said the Board of Works had already decided to build no walks outside the tree line, he would move in amendment that the walk be built outside the tree line. Ald. Metheral seconded the amendment.

Ald. Buller stated that he understood the walks outside of the tree line would be on top of the water mains. If that was so the walk could not go there.

Mr. Kidd stated that the walk could be laid outside and be within 18 inches of the main at the narrowest place.

The original motion was carried.

SUMMER SERVICE.

Mr. Mulligan and Mr. Fife were present on behalf of the Gospel Hall people. They thanked the council for the privilege of using Central Park last year and asked that they be granted the same privilege again this year.

On motion of Ald Metheral and Duffus the request wasgranted.

COST OF REPORT.

A letter was received from Mr. W. J. Francis stating that he would be glad to place himself in the services of the city. He said his price was $50 per day for such work as going over the plans of the city engineer on the Smith street bridge. But knowing the thoroughness of Mr. T. A. S. Hoy, he would state as a price $100 for the work.

On motion the chairman of the Board of Works was instructed to complete arrangements with Mr. Francis.

Upon the recommendation of Ald Morgan, the Reception Committee was instructed to prepare an address of welcome to the Grand Orange lodge of Ontario, which meets here this week.

BUILDING BYLAW.

Ald. Turner introduced the matter of amending the building bylaw. He said that as it stood now it was not satisfactory, and did not meet the requirements of the city. He suggested several changes so that the thickness of the solid brick walls would be more in proportion to the size of the building. The aldermen will prepare his amendments and submit them to the Board of Works at the next meeting.

DOGS AT LARGE.

The dogs running at large destroying property, was another matter introduced by Ald. Turner. He was very fond, he said, of all dumb animals, but he considered that dogs should be put under constraint. There are altogether too many canines running loose and wild and the owners should be compelled to keep them off the streets. The matter will also come up again.

Big Financial Interests Behind Purity Ware, Limited, Peterboro'

Aldermen Met the Promoters and a Representative of the Money Interests—Proposition is More Favorable Than Ever—The Aldermen Are Optomistic

There is not an alderman in the city or any other person who has looked into it, who are not thoroughly satisfied that the Purity Ware Limited of Peterborough, is one of the best manufacturing propositions which has been submitted to any town or city, in the Dominion for a long time. As a matter of fact the aldermen are more enthusiastic than ever over it. A meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council was held last night when the promoters of the company and a representative of the financial interests behind them were present.

The main topic of discussion was the financial end of the new company. When a concern as large as the Purity Ware Limited, is talked of the interest is naturally centered in the money end. The Purity Ware is a big concern, and it will not be long before it will be one of the largest manufacturers in in this city, and the people are already pretty generally satisfied with that fact.

The representative of the financial interests stated to the aldermen that the stock was being taken care of by some of the most influential financiers in Canada, who are also backed up by strong financial English houses. The stock is being taken all in one block, and the men who are behind it are in such a position that the success of the undertaking is assured. It was also stated that these capitalists are mostly from Montreal, and are interested in many of the largest corporations in the country.

These gentlemen, when the promoters submitted their proposition went to New York and interviewed the company in that city, which is supplying the machinery and which is taking so large an interest in the Peterborough firm. The Montreal men were satisfied with what they saw and arrived at an understanding with the American firm. The bylaw embodying the agreement between Peterborough and the new company has been carefully examined by the capitalists, and that meets with their approval in every respect. As a matter of fact every thing is going along fine and there will be some very valuable information handed out to the public at the Board of Trade next week.

One feature of last night's meeting was that it united the aldermen and aroused their enthusiasm. They know that the finances are forthcoming and that the men behind it are among the most capable business men in the country. The aldermen are also prepared to meet any opposition to the bylaw which may crop up, and it is rumored that some personal interests are being aired against it. The opposition is known and the object is known, and very little is feared from that source. The Purity Ware Limited is a new concern with all the capital stock in the hands of a few wealthy gentlemen, who not only intend to make the concern a profitable one but are determined to do so. The only thing for the people of Peterborough to do is to get out on Tuesday, June 1st, and vote for the bylaw. Build Peterborough up. The only way this can be done is by securing new industries. In the Purity Ware the city will get one which will equal any of the new factories being located in Canada.

Price of Oranges will Drop 40 Per Cent.

Denver, May 14.—Henceforth the Florida orange crop will be marketed direct, according to J. C. Swingling, president of the Florida Fruit and Citrus Growers' Association, who was in Denver last night.

"The orange crop of Florida this year," he said, "will exceed that of any other year since 1895, and we can produce half as much as the entire crop of California.

"For years we have submitted to the abuses of brokers who practically regulated the market, making big profits and keeping up the prices of oranges. From now on we will market the Florida output direct, and this will reduce the price of oranges 40 per cent.

Cannot Hold New Inquest---Proceedings are Closed

Hamilton, May 14.—"They can't reconsider their verdict. The coroner's inquest on the Kinrade case is closed, and in order to go into the matter again a new precept would have to be issued, a new jury empanelled, the body would have to be disinterred and viewed again, and only then could there be any change made in the verdict which has been delivered."

The above was the statement made by Coroner Anderson this morning in reply to a question from a reporter as to whether or not the jury had expressed a desire to meet, and reconsider their verdict.

Some of the jurymen were exceedingly indignant at the reports which have been published to the effect that they are now dissatisfied with the verdict which they brought in, and are regretting that they did not make it stronger. They are inclined to criticise Mr. R. B. Spera, foreman of the jury, very strongly for "talking too much" about the matter, and re-opening the discussion as to the verdict which should have been brought in. The letter which Mr. Spera wrote to the attorney-general's department and which was published this morning, comes in for an especial expression of ire.

"I think Spera should be ashamed of himself," was the way one juryman put it. "He's gone insane over this thing."

A STRONG VERDICT.

According to these men there are only four of the jurymen who are dissatisfied with the verdict rendered, and who are now talking about what they should have done. They are Mr. Spera, Mr. H. F. Stonehaugh, Mr. Wells and Mr. Hooper. It is understood that these men advocated a stronger verdict.

This version of the verdict was turned down hard by other members of the jury, however, and the fact of the matter being reopened led some of them to express themselves very freely this morning.

NO DESIRE TO ALTER VERDICT.

"They are chasing these people around the country," said Mr. Willoughby Ellis, "and it does not look right. With all the information we had, there was not a particle of evidence that Florence Kinrade ever did one immoral act."

"If I sat for ten years on the case, with the information we had, I could not alter my verdict."

"We were looked upon as a body of sensible men when we brought in that verdict, but with all this talk the public are beginning to look upon us as a bunch of mutts."

"I'm not going to swallow myself," said Mr. John Work, another juryman. "I was perfectly satisfied with my verdict. We could bring in no other under the circumstances."

"How do we know what the government is doing. We have nothing more to do with the case. They may be doing everything possible. How do we know?"

A PRIVATE LETTER.

Mr. Spera told a reporter that it was "all talk" about the jury going to hold a meeting and send in a resolution. He was incensed at the publication of the letter he wrote to the attorney-general's department.

"That was a private letter, expressing my own personal opinion," he said. "If that's the way they do business, no wonder they don't find out anything."

That there was some foundation for the rumor that the jurymen were to meet was admitted by Coroner Anderson, although the meeting was not to be for re-considering the verdict. He received a letter from Mr. Blackstock relating to the fees which were to be paid to the jurymen, and "one or two other matters," and he had intimated to the juryman that if they met at his house he would read the letter to them. It was understood that the meeting was to be last night, but only one juryman was there. Coroner Anderson denied that the letter had anything to do with the case itself, the evidence submitted, or the verdict rendered.

It is understood that the jury may not get the double fee which it was said would be given them for their arduous work on the case.

LEAVING OLD HOME.

Mr. T. L. Kinrade, Gertrude Kinrade and Earl Kinrade went up to their former home at 105 Herkimer street, the scene of the tragedy of February 25, and made preparations for what is evidently to be a final flitting. They tore up carpets, and a great heap was made in the back yard of carpets, mattresses and old clothes. These were sprinkled with coal oil and burned. The three members of the family are still staying at Nurse Walker's.

Wild Rush of Prospectors to the North

Cobalt, May 14.—The Upper Ontario Steamboat Company started its regular trips from Latchford to Mountain Chute, Montreal River, yesterday. Twenty-six passengers went up. The river above Mountain Chute is not opened, but the company expect to get through Saturday or Monday at the latest. A large number of canoes have gone up this week, but they cannot get farther than Mountain Chutes, as Mountain Lake is full of ice. Several hundred prospectors are camped there.

Work started this morning on the Nipissing Central Railway for street railway connection between Haileybury and Cobalt. The work is being rushed, and they expect to have the cars running between the two places by November. The railway will not enter Cobalt, owing to the town refusing the company a franchise, but will end at the foot of Argentine street, about a hundred yards from the square.

A SPECTACULAR RUSH.

Cobalt, May 14.—The rush north promises to be spectacular. Down at Latchford they are waiting all along the banks for miles for the river to open, and up here all the hotels are full of people waiting till navigation opens. The first of next week will probably see three lines of steamers making trips.

Asquith Would Change the Coronation Oath

London, May 14.—A comprehensive bill for the removal of Roman Catholic disabilities, and providing for an alteration in the accession oath taken by the British sovereign was introduced by William Redmond in the House of Commons today.

The same opposition that hitherto has defeated any similar effort, however, again showed up today in the form of a petition signed by 300,000 persons against the removal of Roman Catholic disabilities.

Premier Asquith spoke early in the debate, and gave his cordial support to the object of the bill. He declared that the exclusion of Roman Catholics from the Lord chancellorship of Great Britain and the lord lieutenancy of Ireland was unjustifiable on the grounds of either logic or policy. Regarding the oath of accession, the premier said that this declaration was dated during the worst period of British history, and the time had come to put an end to it.

Midland League Players are Not Elligible this Year to Play Intermediate

The Intermediate City League had quite a warm time last night at their meeting. The fun was over the admission of players who were eligible to play last year but who had played once or twice in the Midland League. Half of the members favored admitting all players who held certificates last year, while the other half objected and insisted that only those who had not played in the Midland League should be elligible. A resolution was introduced by the former clique and the vote was a tie and President Langford voted against it. This shuts out a lot of good players and the class of ball this year will necessarily not be so fast as otherwise it would have been.

Park street Baptist church club was admitted to the league and this will necessitate the changing of the schedule which was drawn up. The Park street boys also offered the league the use of their grounds for practice or league games and as these are one of the best grounds in the city the offer will be accepted.

Water Works Dam Power was Again Discussed

Another conference, with the electric power available at the new water works dam as the subject of discussion was held yesterday afternoon in the city clerk's office between the Special Power Committee and the Water Commissioners. The original idea of the Power Committee was to appoint the Water Commissioners power commissioners. This these gentlemen refused to accept until such time as the city has decided upon a definite power policy and the people have given it their approval. Next the commissioners were asked a number of questions regarding the amount of power and also what they would advise. The commissioners, however, had no suggestions to offer.

Those present were;—Power Committee, Aldermen McIntyre, Phelan, Morrow, Gillespie, Bradburn, Hicks and Mayor Hall.

Water Commissioners—Messrs. T. F. Matthews, W. H. Hall and Henderson.

The object of the meeting was to confer with the Water Commissioners in reference to the power development at the water works dam. A resolution was passed by the committee asking the commissioners to meet the committee.

Ald. Hicks said that the resolution was passed because the Campbellford Company wanted to do business with the city, and the committee wanted to know the amount of power that would be available at the water works dam, if there was to be any, or not to be any.

Mr. Matthews stated that the commissioners were going ahead with their plans and were enlarging their forebays and tail races, so that a power house could be erected. As yet they have secured no further information than was contained in Mr. Kennedy's report. He said there was no doubt but that there was a surplus of power there, but Mr. Kennedy thought that if the city grew in the next ten years as it has in the past ten years the water works would require all that power.

Ald. Gillespie asked when the Water Commissioners as power commissioners?

Mr. Matthews stated that he could not say when this could be done but he knew when he would be willing to take it over. The other commissioners might think differently. But he would not consent to taking over the power part until the council had decided upon its policy and had received their approval of the people.

Mr. W. H. Hall said he also thought that was the proper time for the commissioners to take it over.

There was then some discussion as to the amount of power available and the amount the commissioners would require. It appears that for every million gallons of water pumped it would require 100 electric horse power. The new pumping system will be six million gallons and we old require 600 horse power.

Ald. Hicks said his idea was to secure a much larger quantity of power than can be secured from the water works dam. The city should at once go in for a larger power policy and especially as things are now.

Ald. Morrow said that the views of every member of the council was to get more power but he thought the city should use what power it has now and owns. He pointed out that if there is enough power there now to do the street lighting it could be worked satisfactorily as the water works people use the most water and power in the day time, while the street lights come on after dark.

Ald. Hicks said the business way appeared to him was that if the Seymour Power Co. will give the city power at a given price and that price was lower than the cost of developing the water works dam, then what was the use of going in for the development.

The Burleigh power will ultimately come to the city, and when that comes and the water works still has a surplus that power could be stepped into the Burleigh power.

Ald. Morrow said that if the city had several hundred horse power running away the council would not be doing its duty if it did not develop it. With 500 or 600 horse power on hand the city could sell that to a manufacturer.

Ald. Hicks stated that it would cost more to develop the water works dam than to buy power.

Mr. Moore stated that the city could not depend upon the water works dam power. The engineer, Mr. Kennedy is very careful on what he says about the power available. Mr. Moore also stated that he would be very much disappointed if there was not 1000 horse power at the dam after the new dam and the new turbines are installed.

The commissioners are preparing for the development of electric power at the water works dam by leaving the necessary openings in the dam. Ald. Gillespie said if that was so then the city could wait until the dam was completed and then find out what power was available.

The commissioners at the present time have no proposition to offer. They will, however, attend the meeting next Wednesday evening when the Power Committee meets the Seymour Power Co.

BAND CONCERT.

The band will be in attendance at the Roller Rink this afternoon, and they will render a good program of music.

Those Wishing to take Part in "Toys Awake" Meet this Afternoon

A number of the ladies of the city met Mr. Ford and Miss Adams, the producers of "The Toys Awake," the great spectacular children's play in which over two hundred of the young people and children of the city will take part, in the parlors of the Oriental Hotel, yesterday morning and discussed the preliminary arrangements for its presentation here at an early date. It is to be given under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society. Great interest was manifested by those present.

A business committee consisting of Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. R. F. McWilliams, Mrs. W. H. Hall and Mrs. E. L. Goodwill, will act in connection with Mr. Ford and Miss Adams in making the affair a success. The first meeting for perfecting the charters will take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Collegiate Assembly Hall and all those who desire to take part should be on hand as early as possible. A number of the leading ladies of the city will act as patronesses. Their names will be printed as soon as the list is completed.

Report on Western Sewer

A letter was received by the council from Mr. Chipman, stating that he would be in Peterborough on May 14th, with his plans for the new system for the east part of the city. His draughtsmen are working on the plans, but would not have them ready for a short time yet.

Mr. Chipman was present at last night's meeting, and explained the cause of the delay in getting out his plans for the southwestern sewer system. He has however completed his work in the west and is now working hard on the Peterborough plans. He has one of his men here now checking over the work done by Mr. Herbert. That gentleman will be here for a day or two yet. Still Mr. Chipman said he would have his report ready for the council in June.

The Junior Church League is Ready

There were four teams represented at the Junior Church Baseball League meeting last night, viz., George street, All Saints', St. Andrew's, and St. Peter's. Fifteen certificates were issued to each team and these must be returned before the first game is played. The teams paid their entrance fee of $1, and they will also have to put up $2 each for balls. The league will supply all balls this season. It was decided to start the games at 7.15, and try to play seven innings. Bonnell field has been secured for grounds.

Many Weddings for the Month of June

According to the little bird that tells tales a large number of young people of this city during the month of June will embark upon the matrimonial ship and endeavor to sail the rough and troublesome but sometimes calm waters in the voyage through life or in other words, get married. Peterborough has always done its share towards furnishing part of the joy and trouble in this world and next month will make a further addition. There are still eighteen days more for some of the sterner sex who have the notion to pop the question or in the case of the gentler sex to see that it is popped, but while this time is sufficient for some people it will take eighteen years for others to get up the necessary nerve to make the first move in the greatest game that was ever known to have been played.

Mr. Cosmos makes jokes at the expense of Provincial rights, but this is a form of humor for which the Ontario Liberal party may have to pay a high price.

Catarrhozone

The only cure for Catarrh Endorsed by the Medical Profession.

Physicians boldly state that every requirement of a perfect cure for Catarrh diseases is fulfilled in Catarrhozone, and on this account it is prescribed by almost every intelligent doctor.

It is the most powerful antiseptic known. When the lungs are filled with its germ-killing vapor the air-cells which cause and maintain the unhealthy condition of the mucous membrane die immediately. Disease germs cannot exist where Catarrhozone is used.

Although very penetrating, Catarrhozone is a soothing and healing treatment. It quickly heals the raw spots on Catarrh's irritation and congestion of the mucous membrane.

When using Catarrhozone you don't have to wait all day for relief; it comes with every breath taken through the inhaler. Head and throat are cleared (and permanently) at once. Dropping in the throat, headache, coughing, and sneezing, and all other disagreeable symptoms of catarrh are banished by a few days' use of this superior remedy.

Catarrhal diseases of every description yield without much difficulty to Catarrhozone. When used for Bronchitis, Lung Trouble and Colds, it affords not only instant relief, but cures in a very short time.

Croup, Whooping Cough and Winter Flu simply won't live any time if Catarrhozone is inhaled four times daily, and as a safeguard for Pneumonia and Consumption it has no equal.

Better get a Catarrhozone Inhaler; use it occasionally, and you won't have a cough or cold in the head or catarrh. These afflictions can be prevented by Catarrhozone as well as cured. Complete outfit, full two months' treatment, costs $1. Small size, 25 cents. Sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

GOING TO HATCH GAME FISH

At Sparrow Lake the people have taken public-spirited action and are about to build a local fish hatchery with the object of re-stocking the Severn River with pickerel. The Orillia and Morrison township councils have each contributed $50 towards the enterprise, and Mr. Harry Miller, secretary of the organization, has written the town of Orillia asking for a contribution of $25. He says that building will be started at once, and that an experienced man will be placed in charge of the hatchery. It is estimated that a million and a quarter of fry can be placed in the waters of the Severn under conditions favorable to success.

This is said to be the first purely local enterprise of the kind in Canada, and if it proves a success, as no doubt it will, it may be the forerunner of many local and useful hatcheries that will do wonders in the way of replenishing with game fish the lakes and streams of the province.

There are some things that individuals can do better than governments, just as there are some things a man can do for himself better than anybody else can do for him. When by distant and official authority parent fish have been placed in local waters in the hope that they would reproduce their kind, local opinion has not always prevented poachers getting away with these parent fish, thus defeating the whole experiment. But when the people of a district put up their own money and spend their own energies in trying to improve the fishing, they are bound to succeed. Success, too, means a great deal. When game fish are netted and sold commercially they are worth to the country just so many cents per pound. When they are preserved strictly for anglers, they bring into the country, just as many dollars per pound as they would cents if netted illegally, tumbled into barrels and shipped away. However, it is not the people who angle, but the people who live in the regions where there is no angling, who lose by the looting of the lakes, both in pleasure and it is local public opinion only that can intervene to save the game fish.

USELESS SOUVENIRS

A Kentucky colonel imported three thousand casks of water from the River Jordan expecting that it would be in demand for baptismal purposes. The demand did not exist, and at last the water has been thrown away.

We need not infer from this that the name of Jordan has lost its charm. The attitude of the public is rather a warning against the practice of collecting souvenirs which in themselves suggest nothing, and must be labeled in order to show their origin. Statues, buildings and magnificent tombs have been purchased by tourists who wanted to carry away something like a stone or clod as mementoes of their travels. A good story is told of a traveler who collected a heap of pebbles in one place, and labeled them as coming from Jerusalem, Athens, Rome, Cairo, Paris, and various other points of historic interest. They were worth just as much or as little as if they had been genuine.

A collection of Lincoln relics contains chairs, stools, and other articles of furniture which have come value as illustrating the homely life of the hero. But as much cannot be said for a plank from the floor of a house in which Lincoln once lived, or for bits of the rope with which the pictures of his assassination were hanged. Many museums and historical collections are loaded up with rubbish of this kind.

The modern traveler, instead of collecting bottles of water, pebbles, and chips of wood, may provide himself with genuine and valuable mementoes of his wanderings by means of the camera. A photograph of a famous temple or statue is a real reminder of the original. The camera is a great civilizing agency. In some cases it has taken the place of the gun, giving us, instead of a corpse a picture of the bird or the squirrel quivering with life in its forest home.

Vancouver should not be unkind to the visiting Japanese fleet. A man may not be fond of his neighbor, but there is no sense in quarreling with his bunting.

Words of praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you.
It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

WILD MEN OF AUSTRALIA.

Northern Part of Island Contains Many Degenerate Whites.

The wild white men of the vast "Never Never Land," of Northern Australia, to whom Rev. T. Major is conducting a mission, are known to our colonial cousins as "white blackfellows," an expression that, while involving a certain contradiction in terms, nevertheless fits them to a nicety.

Some of these [illegible] descendants of runaway convicts who "took to the bush" in the bad old days of transportation. They live amongst the aborigines, aping their manners and customs, and subsisting on the same always scanty and frequently loathsome food. According to Mr. Major, they are exceedingly shy and difficult to approach, fleeing at the first sign of a "tame" white man.

The mere idea of individuals of our race and color sinking to this low level is revolting. Yet the Australian white blackfellow has his counterpart in other quarters of the globe, notably in the Guiana hinterland, where whole colonies of white savages are known to be interspersed amongst the bush negroes, than whom no more degraded race exists anywhere on earth. Like the wild whites of the Never Never Land, too, these unhappy people are descended from runaway convicts, mostly French.

Then, again, there are the small isolated communities of white Indians, so-called, which recent research has revealed living at various points near the head-waters of the Amazon. Ethnologists have been completely puzzled as to their origin. They possess the Caucasian features, and in the dialects they speak can be traced many more or less archaic Spanish words and phrases.

This has led to the theory being broached that they are the descendants of some of the followers of Orellana, the discoverer of the Amazon, some hundreds of whom are known to have deserted their leader and wandered aside into the pathless forests during the first stage of his arduous and ever-memorable journey.

First Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. Reginald McKenna, who is very much in the limelight just now on account of the navy discussion, has a genius for figures, and more than once has swamped his critics with an avalanche of hard facts and figures when they were speaking in generalities. He is one of the younger members of the Cabinet, being now in his forty-fifth year. Before he entered Parliament he practised as a barrister. He is one of the athletes of the Commons, rowing bow in the Cambridge University eight of 1887, and winning the Grand and Stewards' Cups at Henley. It was in this race, by the way, that the celebrated Oxford coxswain, Mr. D. H. McLean, broke his oar when the Dark Blues were gaining ground as the result of a spurt.

It may be remembered that Mr. McKenna was married last year, a fact which recalls rather an amusing incident. Mr. McKenna was arguing in the House of Commons one night in favor of the Government's Old-Age Pension scheme of 5s. for people living alone and 7s. 6d. for old couples living together. "It is relatively cheaper," he said, "for two persons living together than for one." The House began to chuckle, for it was only a fortnight since that Mr. McKenna was married. "Well, you ought to know by this time," commented the burly Labor man, Mr. Will Thorne, in chastening tones. The House roared. Mr. McKenna blushed.

Get Hubby's Job.

A Hull couple's wedding has just been postponed owing to the bride, who is a typist, having obtained her intended husband's employment. This singular sequel was the result of an arrangement between the parties, made at the bride's request, that she might help in swelling the household income for a few months. She was already in employment, but an advertisement offering a higher salary for a typist tempted her to write for the situation. She was successful in obtaining the appointment. A few days later her fiance told her that the wedding must be postponed because he had lost his employment. It then transpired that she had obtained his work at a reduced salary. The bride was sorely perplexed, but in the circumstances, she could but accept the inevitable, and the preparations for the wedding were countermanded. The bride had cherished the ambition that she would have been able to accompany her husband as he would have been but for this contretemps, to and from work.

Didn't Believe the Duke.

Stories of amusing situations caused by the Duke of Rochdale's negligence in dress are still going the rounds. A short time ago he observed that some members of the party who had assembled had damaged some of the foliage on his estate, so, going up to the offenders, he began to remonstrate with them. "Ain't the duke got any brains," confided one of the men, politely, "that a little chap like you should interfere?" The duke smilingly replied that he happened to be the duke himself. But the tripper wouldn't believe it. "Go on!" he said, laughing heartily. "Why, the duke goes to dine at Marlborough House, and they'd never have a little man like you even in the servants' hall."

"It Never Too Late to Learn."

It is not very often that a man starts learning a foreign language when he has reached the "seventies." Lord Brassey, however, who has been giving his views on the naval problem, is a firm believer in the saying, "It's never too late to learn." Two or three weeks ago he celebrated his 73rd birthday, and it was only last year that he started to learn German in order to read Prince Hohenlohe's "Memoirs." He adopted the system that when he did not know a word he put a number over it and in the margin, and looked it up in the dictionary. When he began the book he had to look up twenty-five words of a page, and slowly got down to five.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

HE COMPROMISED.

A Story John B. Gough Told in His Temperance Lectures.

John B. Gough, the temperance lecturer, was noted as a story teller, and his stories were always well suited to his arguement. W. A. Mowry in his "Recollections of a New England Educator" recalls one of them:

Compromise, compromise! What does compromise mean? I will tell you. A colored man met a friend one day and said:

"Sambo, Sambo, do you know dat teder night I was sorely tempted? You know I used to steal. Well, since I j'ined de church I stopped stealing, but you know Mr. Jonsing's shoe store? Well, teder night I was in dat shoe store, and I looked on de shelf and I see a pair of boots, jes' de nicest pair of boots—jes' my size, No. 14.

"Dere was de debil, and he say, 'Take 'em, take 'em.' Den de Lord say, 'Let 'em alone; dat's stealin'.' But I wanted dem boots; mine all cut at de bottom and sides. Dere was de debil and me, and we both say, 'Take 'em.' But de Lord say, 'Don't you take 'em; dat's stealin'.' Now, dere was a clear majority of two against one.

"Jes' den Mr. Jonsing he meb de store, and he look me all alone. Den de debil say, 'Take 'em quick and skedaddle.' I could take dem boots and chuck 'em under my coat and go right away an' Mr. Jonsing would never know nottin' about it. But, bress de Lord, I 'stood de temptation! I compromised and took a pair of shoes instead."

HER LOST COAT.

The Sequel to a Ladies' Afternoon Card Party.

A number of women were putting on their wraps preparatory to going home from an afternoon card party in the upper residence district of New York one afternoon last winter when a valuable fur coat belonging to one of them could not be found. There was, however, another fur coat of inferior quality in the dressing room, which the hostess said had evidently been left by mistake by the woman who had taken the other garment. The available coat was taken away by the woman whose wrap was missing in the hope that the mistake would be rectified without much trouble.

Several days passed, and no claim was made for the coat the guest had worn away from the house, and the woman took it to a dealer, where her garment had been purchased, hoping that some mark on the substituted coat might be found by which the owner could be identified. The plan was successful, and, much to her amazement, she discovered that the inferior coat was the property of her card hostess.

The "lost" coat was found, and on its return the matter was to be hushed up, but the promise of silence was evidently poorly kept. No more invitations for afternoon card parties have been issued from the house where the "mistake" was made.

Maori Women.

Maori women of New Zealand know nothing about kissing. Noses rubbing is their form of salutation, and when two friends meet they hold each other by their hands, bend their heads until their noses touch and then rub them gently from side to side. This form of greeting is not confined to the women, but is practiced by the men. They seldom meet without rubbing noses. In times of lamentation the Maori women will sit for hours with their noses touching and moan for the loss of some chief whom they have in all probability never seen. The loss of a brother or friend is enough to start them off for days, all moaning and howling piteously. They are essentially a sympathetic race, and the sorrows of one are the sorrows of all.

Too Good to Waste.

A churchgoer and a backslider met on the hillside. The churchgoer was bound double quick for the church at the foot. The backslider, oddly enough, was going up.

"Hi! You're going the wrong way!" called the churchgoer.

The backslider yelled back, but his answer was lost.

"Say," he demanded of the churchgoer the next day, "did you hear what I said?"

"No."

"Well, it's too good to waste. You said I was going the wrong way. I said you seemed to be going downhill pretty fast yourself."

Gave Her Room.

A gentleman who had a very large nose while walking in a street in Leeds the other day was subject to a few remarks about it. The height of impudence, however, was reached when a woman stopped a few yards in front of him apparently to have a good look at it. The gentleman also stopped and, taking hold of his nose with his finger and thumb, pushed it on one side and calmly said:

"Now, then, missus, can you pass now?"

She went on.—London Tit-Bits.

A Pair of Suits.

Here are a couple of Irish bulls. A son of Erin, seeing a very tiny coffin, exclaimed, "Is it possible that that coffin was intended for any living creature?" An Irish judge thus addressed a prisoner, "You are to be hanged, and I hope it will prove a warning to you."

Artificial Beauty.

One reason why women suppose the men are fooled by artificial beauty is that most of the men are too gallant not to pretend that they don't know the difference.—Chicago Record-Herald.

ALFRED COONEY.

HERO AND BURGLAR.

Gallant Career of English Laborer Smirched by Crimes.

A tragic example showing how men can fall from heroism to crime was given recently at the Old Bailey Police Court, London, in the history of George William Owens, a Walthamstow laborer, aged 31, who pleaded guilty to two burglaries and to stealing in all jewelry worth $1,250. He was sentenced to eighteen months' hard labor.

The police evidence showed that Owens had been sent to the Cornwall, a reformatory ship, as a boy for a petty theft. From the date of leaving the ship to the end of last year he had striven to live honestly, but had been unfortunate in losing his work. During the year 1908 he had become an expert burglar and shopbreaker, and there was reason to believe that he had made a considerable sum by his crimes.

The prisoner's counsel, Mr. Metcalf, told a touching story of his earlier and nobler career. In the Cornwall he distinguished himself by his good conduct and rose to the rank of a band sergeant. He saved another boy from drowning at the risk of his life, and a dinner was given in his honor by the officers of the ship, at which Gen. Buller was present.

In the disaster at the launch of the Albion at Blackwall in 1893, when a sudden backwash swept 200 people into the water, he once more displayed splendid courage. He plunged gallantly in to the rescue of the drowning and saved three persons from death—one a girl who afterwards became his wife. For his behaviour on this occasion he was awarded the Royal Humane Society's medal. Thus from first to last he saved four lives only to end in the dock. He did not take to crime until he had tried earnest playing in the streets, after all hope of obtaining employment had been lost.

"There never was a bad man that had ability for good service," said a great thinker. Judging by the good service which Owens had rendered at the risk of his life there will be hope for him yet when his sentence is served. Such a man cannot be incurably bad.

PREMIER'S DOUBLE.

New Zealander Is Mistaken For the Prime Minister of Victoria.

A New Zealand gentleman, who happens to bear a close resemblance to Sir Thomas Bent, the Premier of Victoria, had some amusing experiences while in Melbourne recently. This gentleman is Edmund Wickes, of Greymouth. The story he tells was related to a Christchurch reporter on his return to New Zealand.

On landing in Melbourne, Mr. Wickes was astounded and amazed to see the policemen salute him. He boarded the Walmul, of which steamer his son is engineer, and his son was greeted with the remark: "Hullo, you're in good company; you've got Sir Thomas with you."

For five weeks Mr. Wickes underwent similar experiences. At that time Sir Thomas Bent was ill, and Mr. Wickes was being continually stopped by Melbourne citizens, who shook hands with him and congratulated him on his recovery. At his hotel there were numerous people who wanted to be introduced to "Sir Thomas," and even a close personal friend of Sir Thomas Bent was deceived by the resemblance.

One night Mr. Wickes decided to stay at his son's hotel. Rising at his usual time (6 a.m.) he found that breakfast would not be ready for some time, and he decided to get the meal outside. Entering a restaurant, he sat down at a table, but was invited by a waitress to go to the private room. Nothing loth, he complied with the request. Hearing some feminine giggling outside the door, he invited the waitresses in. To his astonishment, one of them remarked: "We know you, Sir Thomas; you have been out all night. Oh, fie!"

A Fish Which Is a Mimic.

Two species of fish belonging to Cuvier's family of perches, named the lesser weever, otterpike, or sting-fish, are not uncommon on the English coast. Both have a detachable portion of the dorsal fin, consisting of six or seven rays, which, The Lancet points out, when trodden upon or handled, can cause a painful wound, which takes a long time to heal. Dr. A. T. Masterman points out that the intense black color of the membrance of this portion of the fin must act as a danger signal, especially as it is in marked contrast with the rest of the skin and of the sand, in which the animal half buries and conceals itself, ready to dart out on the small crustaceans which form its prey.

Now, the right pectoral or upper fin of the sole has, especially in the young sole, a large, deep, black patch, the possession of which, the doctor suggests, constitutes a well-marked example of mimicry. The smaller fry of soles, like the weevers, inhabit sandy bays and shallows, and also partially bury themselves in the sand. Dr. Masterman has found that, unlike the turbot and plaice, which when disturbed make active efforts to swim or escape, the sole lies quiescent even to the point of simulating death, but at the same time erects sharply and spreads its upper pectoral fin, which thus forms a motionless black flag held upwards in a menacing attitude.

"Pig-Killer-in-Chief."

Dr. Montague Shane-Wigg, who is retiring from the Bishopric of New Guinea on account of ill-health, has had an adventurous life and many queer experiences. Once, not so very long ago, he acted as pig-killer-in-chief at a great carnival of savages. The bishop had objected to the native method of slaughtering swine for their great banquets, for it involved at least ten minutes' agony to the wretched animals, and he offered to show them a better way. There were 120 to be slaughtered for 2,000 savages. The bishop and one of his clergy set to work to shoot the animals, and in a very short time they had killed fifty.

Appetite Gone---Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter nearly tired her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Watmore, P.O., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headache. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfected. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength of every system that is weak, clokky or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Some of the American cottagers at Chemong Park have already opened their summer homes there. The majority of the cottagers from the city, however, will not open their cottages till about the middle of June.

Object to Paying License

A local bartender informed The Times yesterday, that in all probability the "men behind" would wage war against the regulation calling for them to take out a license. He stated that none of the 600 bartenders in Toronto had taken out their licenses for this year yet, and that it was probable that they would try to have the clause killed that called for them to do so. "I don't see how it is that a man can be forced to pay a license to work."

DIED

SHANNON—At Campbellford, on Thursday, May 13, 1909, Robert S. Shannon, aged 68 years and three months.

Removed from the G.T.R. station to Little Lake cemetery, Saturday morning on arrival of Belleville train.

The tender leaves of a harmless tree-healing germicidal shrub which give to Dr. Sheep's Cough Remedy its marvelous curative properties. Tight clothing or distressing coughs quickly yield to the healing, soothing action of this splendid preparation—Dr. Sheep's Cough Remedy. And it is so safe and good for children, as well. Commanding no opium, chloroform, or other harmful drugs, mothers should in safety always demand Dr. Sheep's. If other remedies are offered, tell them No! In your own judgment (told by all dealers.

PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Hunstberne were in the city yesterday on their way to Chemong Park, where they will summer. They spent the winter months in New York city.

Mr. Dawson Kennedy, after nine weeks' confinement in St. Joseph's Hospital, is sufficiently recovered to permit his return to his home. His many friends will be pleased to learn of his convalescence and prospects of complete restoration to health.

A "Knotty" Question

What about the provincial license of $500 a traveler for a liquor house is supposed to have if the house he represents is outside the province? This is the interesting point brought up in a local retail liquor store yesterday in the presence of a traveler from Montreal, his customer and the license inspector. The commercial man had a Dominion license, which he claimed gave him the selling privileges he required, but the law required travelers selling in the province to have a provincial license. The argument is that it would not be fair to make him pay the expense in connection with both. Inspector Stewart is investigating the point at issue.

All Colored Cheese

The opening meetings of the various cheese boards throughout the country have shown in some districts that a large percentage of white cheese was being manufactured. On enquiry it has been learned that this is only the case where the boards are known as white or mixed. With the latter the prevailing price determines whether the output will be colored or white. The Peterborough Board is colored and nothing but colored cheese is made in this district. Even in the Old Country markets it is known that the board is colored. It is expected that all the factories will be represented at the initial meeting of the Board.

LACROSSE

There is evidently a deadoe in the lacrosse team. Every time a team practice has been called it has rained. In the spring it was very hard to get a quorum at a meeting. Danny had better get busy and locate the evil spirit so that more favorable weather will smile upon them.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Sheep's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. Find here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Sheep's drugs dig the stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Sheep's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Sheep's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success in healing deepens everywhere to give it universal acceptance. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

The South Central School Won Game

St. Peter's school boys lost the first game of the season yesterday afternoon when the South Central boys defeated by a score of nine runs to eight. It was a good exhibition of ball and was played on St. Peter's grounds. Callaghan struck out 15 men, but he did not receive as good support in the field as he might have and the South Central boys got their runs at opportune times. Mr. Stacey referred with every satisfaction.

British Columbia Japs to Welcome Fleet

Vancouver, May 14.—"Great preparations are being made by the Japanese all along the coast, from Vancouver in the north to Los Angeles in the south, at San Francisco and Seattle, for welcoming the Imperial Japanese training fleet," says the Canadian News, a Japanese paper, published in Vancouver. "This welcome is not by the Japanese only. The United States government is preparing to receive the fleet with marked honors. We do not know the entire program of the welcome, but it appears that the coming of our training fleet is to be made the occasion of reciprocating the hearty welcome which our government gave to the American fleet in its round-the-world cruise. Admiral Swinburne in the command of the Pacific squadron, has been ordered from Magdalena Bay to San Francisco to await the arrival of our fleet, and after the ceremony of welcome at that port in order to accompany our ships to Seattle and Tacoma.

"The coming of a Japanese fleet to this coast is a rare occurrence. Two ships were sent on a cruise several years ago, but at that time our country's power was small and the visit of our ships attracted very little attention. When the Matsushima, the Tsushima and the Hashidate were on a cruise in 1907 after the Japan-Russian war, it was intended that the Pacific Coast should be visited, but just at that time the anti-Japanese feeling was at its height in the San Francisco region. For this reason our government on that occasion adopted an extremely humble and conciliatory attitude in order to avoid misunderstanding, and ordered the fleet to abandon the visit to the coast and return to Hawaii and pressed westward to Australia at once. This move was deemed necessary and right by our government.

Steadily Improving

The May number of "Outdoor Canada" is filled with special articles breathing the spirit of the great outdoors in Canada, and no one can read it from cover to cover without experiencing the longing that shall wisely may quickly cease and warmer suns and skies invite to the field and streams and the freer life under the bright canopy of Heavy.

Among the many excellent articles in one by A. St. Wheelwerton, on the Kootenay Lake Launch Club; another by R. A. Brown, on the Canadian Henley; another by H. J. P. Goode, on the King's Plate; D. M. Barton's contribution on Rowing and Swimming; a very interesting description of a summer's work in the Alaskan and Yukon districts fixing the international boundary line; and Rodon Kingsmill's always welcome contribution on general sports.

The illustrations in this month's issue are particularly good, the number and quality of the half-tones used excelling anything heretofore attempted. The new management of the magazine has this month made a change in the price, single copies of the magazine now being obtainable at ten cents, the annual subscription price remaining at $1 per year.

More and more this magazine is meeting the possibilities that have so long been undeveloped in the particular field to which it belongs, and with the reduction in price and the increased excellence of the magazine, it should easily and quickly take first rank in the purely Canadian magazine field.

Copies of the May number may be secured from newsdealers everywhere, or from the office of publication, Spectator Building, Hamilton, Canada.

When looking for souvenirs with hand-painted views of the public buildings on each, call at Times Bookstore, Hunter street.

ANY remedy that benefits digestion strengthens the nerves.

The nerve centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerve centers become anemic, and indigestion is the result.

Peruna is not a narcotic nor a stimulant. It benefits the nerves by benefiting digestion.

Peruna frees the stomach of catarrhal congestions and normal digestion is the result.

In other words, Peruna goes to the bottom of the whole difficulty, when the disagreeable symptoms disappear.

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, 61 Marchant street, Watsonville, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with my stomach for six years. I tried many kinds of medicine, also was treated by three doctors.

"They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months.

"I improved under the treatment, but as soon as I stopped taking the medicine, I got bad again.

"I took the medicine for two years, then I got sick again and gave up all hopes of getting cured.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Peruna, so I thought I would give it a trial.

"I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken several bottles and am entirely cured.

"I have gained in strength and feel like a different person. I believe Peruna is all that is claimed for it."

Nervines, such as coal tar preparations, are doing a great deal of harm. Sleep medicines and headache powders are all alike,—heart depressants, and should not be used. The nerves would be all right, if the digestion were good. Peruna corrects the digestion.

WAHSATCH MINING COMPANY

Capital Stock 300,000 Shares; Par $5; 20,000 10 per cent. Cumulative Preferred; 280,000 Common Stock.

Property at Bingham City, Utah, on the main line of the Oregon Short Line Railroad.

This property is the result of twenty years of labor and the expenditure of $120,000 by its President, H. C. Baker, director of the Commercial National Bank of Ogden. It is opened in fourteen places; there is a complete equipment and full line of supplies on hand. The preferred stock, which has been up to this time in the treasury, is being sold to provide for the working capital which O. A. Palmer, Engineer of the Ontario Silver Company, with a record of $15,000,000 in dividends, says is necessary to make a dividend payer. Enough stock has been placed to assure the running of the property. President Baker reports that within three months from the date of starting the mill the mine can net $11,000 a month. This means 10 per cent. on the preferred and 7 per cent. on the common.

Wahsatch will be listed at once on the Boston Curb Market and later application will be made to the Boston Stock Exchange. After listing on the Boston Curb, all offers will be withdrawn. Not a share of the preferred will be sold for less than par and not a share of common for less than $1.00. Further, I stand ready to take any or all offers of stock at these prices.

Now you can buy this stock before listing and sell within two months at an advance. Your preferred stock will positively sell at $7.00 and the common at par within a short while. Furthermore, to each purchaser of a round lot I will agree to transport him or his representative to the mine. I have held of a winner and shall use it as a clientele increaser.

O. A. Palmer, M.E., says, "To insure proper development and to get the best results in the shortest time, there should be a reserve fund created to draw on of at least $25,000 or $40,000 for the purpose, and from my examination of this particular section and long familiarity and experience with the mining districts and the largest producers of ore in the Wahsatch Range, there is no doubt that the Gold Bill Group of mines will, with this expenditure, be placed on a paying basis.

Bobbie Kerr's Athletic Meet a Great Success He will go to England

(Special to The Times)

Hamilton, May 15.—In Bobbie Kerr of Hamilton, Canada owns one of the best sprinters the world has ever produced. His prowess up to last year was confined to Ontario and the indoor meets at Buffalo, but like many other athletes, he acquired world fame in England last year, when he won the 100 and 220-yard championship at the English championship games, and the 200-metre Olympic championship, losing the 100-metre championship to Walker, the South African runner, whom he had previously defeated in the English championships. In this race, in which he ran third, just inches behind Rector, the Yankee athlete, his defeat is laid to over-training, and should these three runners ever meet again, many look for Bobbie to lead the trio at the wire.

Kerr, who is 28 years of age, is a favorite everywhere he goes, due to his fine personality and unassuming manner and good sportsmanship. Born of Irish parentage, Bobbie came to this country when a mere child, and has since resided in Hamilton.

The athletic meet held at Hamilton on Saturday was for the purpose of raising money to send Bobbie to England again this year to compete in the English championships and defend the Prince Hassan Challenge Cup and G. V. A. Sohofield Challenge Cup, which he won last year. The meet was the greatest success in every respect. Fully 3000 persons gathered at Britannia Park, and enjoyed the sports. There were 23 events, including a hundred yard dash by Bobbie, which he did in ten seconds flat on the slow track. The first race was started by his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario Hon. J. M. Gibson. Over 150 athletes from all parts of Canada took part.

Brintons and Bethany Played a Tie Game in Opening Soccer Game

When Referee Jack Sullivan blew his whistle for full time in the Brintons-Bethany game Saturday afternoon, the first of the Midland League series to be played in Peterborough this year, the rather unsatisfactory result of a tie, one all, was announced. The game was played on the Carpet Factory's grounds in the east of the Driving Park and was witnessed by a fairly large crowd, among whom there was a conspicuous representation of the fair sex.

It was a hard-fought battle, replete with action and marked by combination and end to end play, close checking, and, at times, fair combination. The Brintons are all Old Countrymen, and are well acquainted with the game, but they bumped up against a sturdy aggregation in the young farmers from Bethany. The Brintons may have shown more science, but the weather-hardened country boys were in the game all the time.

THE KICK-OFF.

Brintons won the toss, and, to mark the opening of the league on local territory, the honorary president, Hon. J. R. Stratton boosted the ball with the wind well up into Bethany's territory, and the game was on. The teams were well matched, and, as a result, the leather spheroid was led a merry dance, from end to end. Finally, about 13 minutes before half-time, the Carpet Makers after a scrimmage in front of Bethany's flags, scored on a corner kick, Dawson being responsible for the goal.

BETHANY EVENS UP.

The second session was very similar to the first. Bethany making good use of the wind, which was now at their backs. The pace was hard, but the Brintons responded well. Bethany evened up, five minutes before full time, when Deleng put a nice one past Giles. There was no more scoring.

The teams lined up as follows;

Brintons—Goal, A. Giles; backs, A. Rew and A. Bishop; halves, C. Downes; A. Ashton, and J. Apsey; right wing, T. Monk and D. Ferguson; left wing, H. Davis, and T. Williams; center, T. Moyle.

Bethany—Goal, H. Price; backs, W. Price and C. Morton; halves, Dr. Hamilton, W. Hannah and J. Staplin; right wing, Brenton and K. Gibson; left wing, A. Delong and M. Sherin; center, E. Roberts.

Referee—J. E. Sullivan.

Walter Price, at full back, for Bethany, and Tommy Monk, one of Brintons' forwards, were the stars of the game, but the latter did not receive sufficient support from his team mates.

AN ACCIDENT.

An unavoidable and purely accidental mishap occurred about three minutes before full time. Ferguson, who had been playing well for the Brintons, received a swinging kick on the leg. Had it been his shin, the bone would have been undoubtedly broken. It was received, however, on one side, and in a few minutes the injured part had puffed out like a toy balloon, and was very painful. Dr. Hamilton attended him and expressed his surprise at the size of the swelling.

The game, taken as a whole, was clean, and Referee Sullivan kept the play well in hand. The teams were very evenly matched, and from the side lines the play was pretty to watch. The Brintons have a good, strong eleven, and with more united work should nose out ahead of Bethany in the return game. They will have no walk-over in so doing, and will need hard practice in the meantime.

Mothers' Day May be a World-Wide Holiday

Philadelphia, May 15 — Mothers' Day, the day set apart to honor the "best mother who ever lived— our own," was celebrated here by men and women in every walk of life today. Everywhere the white carnation, the chosen symbol of the new celebration, was to be seen. Ten thousand of the flowers had been purchased by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, that their employes, motormen and conductors might do homage to their mothers. The marines at League Island navy yard also were provided with symbolic flowers.

The movement for the establishment of Mothers' Day as a world-wide holiday was originated in this city by Miss Anna Jarvis, whose mother died four years ago. Today was the second official celebration of the day. Mayor Reyburn issued a proclamation calling the citizens to celebrate the day, and Miss Jarvis had been notified that the governors of seven States, as well as mayors of cities in all parts of the world have officially recognized the establishment of the new holiday. She has received word from Acme, Turkey and Japan telling of the adoption of the idea in those countries.

Lame Back

This is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. It attacks the muscles in the small of the back. It often comes on suddenly and in so severe that the body can be moved only with great pain. Keep as quiet as possible, as every movement of the body aggravates the disease. Massage the affected parts with Chamberlain's Liniment three times a day until the pain, soreness and stiffness have entirely disappeared. It is prompt and effectual.

Struck by an Auto After Getting off a Car

Little Jack McCullough, son of Dr. T. P. McCullough, 168 Brock street, was struck by an automobile at 5.15 o'clock Saturday evening, narrowly escaping serious injury.

He was getting off a street car north of Brock street crossing, on George street, and commenced to walk to the pavement when an auto driven by Mr. G. L. Stevens, 684 George street, speeding northward, struck the little fellow, hurling him several feet. Fortunately it was only one side of the car that touched him. Mr. Stevens stopped within a few feet and carried the little fellow into Mr. T. Reader's store. He was shaken up and covered with dust, but was conscious. Mr. Redmor carried him to his home, where it was found that outside of a few scratches Jack was practically unhurt.

A Horrrible Butchery, Killed Wife and Children Then Committed Suicide

Boylesville, May 15.—While a neighbor girl lay trembling in bed, a witness to the mad tragedy, Henry Williamson today killed his wife and two children and committed suicide. He arose early, went to the bedside of his wife and children and shot all of them while they were sleeping. Then he beat his dead wife with a fire poker. He afterwards poured kerosene on the floor and set it afire. With the flames leaping around him Williamson placed the revolver to his temple and killed himself. The girl, sleeping in the same room, was awakened by the first shot that killed the wife. Horrified at the cold blooded murder of her little playmates, the girl covered her head and remained unmolested. In spite of her terror, she watched the table of the madman's acts and then called help to put out the fire.

Lord Kitchener to Study Jap Military System

A London correspondent says Lord Kitchener will hand over his command in India to Gen. Sir O'Moore Creagh early in August, and at once proceed to Japan. He proposes to make a long stay in that country and will closely examine the military system and army organization in time of peace.

From Japan he proposes to go to China, and he will traverse many of the battlefields in Manchuria, with the advantage of going over much of the ground with officers who took part in the Russo-Japanese War and who have been placed at his disposal by the mikado and the Japanese government.

It is expected that before he concludes his visit to Manchuria Lord Kitchener will be commissioned by the war office to return home by way of Australia and Canada in order to examine the local defence forces and to report to the authorities what steps should be taken to improve their organization and administration and how best their training may be co-ordinated. Should these suggested arrangements hold good, Lord Kitchener is not expected in England until the end of next year.

Gen. Sir O'Moore Creagh, who is to succeed Gen. Kitchener of Khartum as commander in chief in India, is not of the Kitchener school, or of anybody's school. It would be difficult to find a man with less bias for or against the particular notions of any of his predecessors or one who has less identified himself with this or that policy in India.

What he has manifested has been a capability for fine performances as a leader, especially in tight places. He earned his brilliant reputation in the Afghan campaign after another, and incidentally gained his V.C. His appointment is a reversal of policy so far as the age consideration is concerned, for he is nine years older than Lord Kitchener was when he went to India in 1902, but Lord Morley urged strongly the claims of his friend and colleague, holding that it was desirable that the new commander in chief should be a man of open mind and age a secondary consideration.

Won't Stand for Negroes in the House Restaurant

Washington, May 15.—Because W. T. Vernor, the negro register of the treasury, and a companion entered the public restaurant in the House office building yesterday and took seats at a table near that at which Representatives Garner and Dies, of Texas, were at luncheon, the two representatives and three others from the South left the dining room in great anger and threatened to boycott the proprietor. The three other representatives were Messrs. Sims, of Tennessee; Candler, of Mississippi, and Stanley, of Kentucky. They were all greatly incensed and loudly proclaimed their purpose to take the case to the speaker and have their rights as members defined, but when Representative Garner was told that the restaurant was a public one and open to anybody who desired to use it he curbed his anger and the incident will be dropped.

Mr. Garner and his companion had given their order for food, when Mr. Vernon and his friend entered. At another table the three other Southern members were preparing to eat. The entrance of the register was greeted with protests, and when he had seated himself Mr. Garner announced that his order would have to be cancelled if negroes were allowed in the restaurant. He was followed by his colleagues, and they immediately went to the proprietor to whom they expressed themselves in unmeasured terms. He declared that he was powerless to interfere and advised that the speaker be consulted. This was not done, but Mr. Garner heard from L. White Busbey, the speaker's secretary, that the restaurant was a public one, and that if Mr. Garner and his friends desired privacy they should go into the dining room set apart for members of congress.

The information served to cool the anger of the Southerners, although there are still mutterings about a boycott on the restaurant. Any one of the five members is also at any time to give out an interview on the "mush" he was forced to swallow.

In discussing the incident Mr. Vernon said today that he was sorry any one had been put to inconvenience on his account, and that he would never have entered the restaurant had he known that his presence would be objectionable.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Ascension Appeal

At the morning service yesterday in St. Luke's, the rector read the Ascension Tide Appeal for the Canadian missions and a special collection will be taken up next Sunday for this purpose. Special prayers were also said yesterday for the blessings of God upon the fruits of the earth, it being Rogation Day, as are also Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

BASEBALL

There was a big crowd of T.A.S. athletes at Roswell field at the baseball practice on Saturday afternoon. The T.A.S. are very anxious for a senior city league and they will put a team in if any two other teams or more can be formed. They have a lot of good players who are about out of the game this year by the intermediates' ruling unless a senior league is organized.

Blythe Asked Burial Beside His Dead Wife

Toronto, May 15.—Pages from life are of surpassing interest whenever they may be read and it is seldom that so moving a human document is penned by the hand of fate as was written out at Toronto jail, when news of his reprieve was brought to Walter Blythe, as he sat in his cell waiting death for the murder of his wife. When word of his respite was brought he had less than a day to live.

Chance had also assembled all the chief actors in this human drama within the jail walls when the news was received and the happening was filled with touching incident and even humor found its place in the momentous movement of the scene.

Gathered at the jail shortly before four o'clock, though brought there by various missions, were Sheriff Mowat, Governor Cambers, R. G. Kirby, who has befriended Blythe, borne the expense of his trial and seen to the welfare of his motherless, and as he supposed, soon to be orphaned children. Blythe, too, was there per force, and Canon Farncombe, spiritual adviser of the prisoner.

WAS READY TO DIE.

The telephone bell rang and T. C. Robinette, K.C., the prisoner's counsel, told the news. Blythe should live at least till June 17. There was almost chagrin in the good governor's voice. He had steeled his kindly heart to the ordeal. He had made it his hard duty to see that everything was perfectly in order.

"We had everything ready," he said. "His mind was fortified. He was ready to die. The sheriff had been down. Everything is arranged. Why even his clothes were neatly brushed and ready." When you consider what he took has been and still is, it is not surprising that Governor Chambers fell into unconscious humour.

Other preparations had also been made. Mr. Kirby, with Rev. W. F. Wilson, had seen Attorney-General Foy in the morning and secured from him a waiving of the statutory provision that the prisoner's body should be buried in the jail yard.

HIS LAST REQUEST.

Strange as it may seem Blythe's most earnest desire is now that his body should lie by that of his wife in the little churchyard at Agincourt. If he goes to the gallows, thanks to Mr. Kirby and Rev. Wilson, this wish will be granted.

Only one other permission of the kind has been granted in Ontario. That was in respect of the body of Fred Rice, of the notorious Rutledge gang, whose body was taken to Champaigne, Ill., for burial.

Elopers Located in St. Catharines--Girl Fell Heir to $150,000

Buffalo, May 15.—In a pretty little cottage in St. Catharines, Canada, just over the American border line, a reporter found Hazel Stuart Drew, the pretty seventeen-year-old heiress who eloped from Brooklyn on Christmas Day with Walter McGreal, the twenty-year-old son of Thomas F. McGreal, a retired United States naval pharmacist.

The bride fainted and her handsome young husband was on the verge of collapse when confronted with positive proof of their identity, but when assured that their unexpected visitor had not come to deliver the bridegroom into the hands of the law they admitted they were the elopers, and freely told the story of their flight and pursuit through the West and into Canada. On Monday Hazel became of age, and entitled to the fortune of $150,000 bequeathed to her by her grandfather, the late Daniel Drew.

The reporter found the runaways living together under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dismore, one of many pseudonyms they have taken since they have disappeared, and while recently they have come out of hiding and mingled freely with the people of the quiet little community, nobody was aware of their identity, although their pictures were published broadcast in the newspapers and photographs and descriptions of the couple have been in the hands of the police of all the American and Canadian cities since shortly after the pair eloped.

There is a warrant issued by Magistrate Dooley in the Adams street police court, Brooklyn, for young McGreal, charging abduction, but it will not now be enforceable, because Hazel is 18 years old. The happy bride will soon be baptized a Catholic, the religion of her husband, and immediately thereafter they will be married by a priest, and then start for home and seek the forgiveness of the girl's mother, who has been bitterly opposed to the match, and who has vowed that she will prosecute her daughter's husband to the bitter end.

Mrs. McGreal, a tall, slender girl, graceful of figure, with a mass of chestnut brown hair, and sparkling blue eyes, gazed fondly at her youthful husband as she told the story of their flight. A big strapping chap, he patted her affectionately as she chatted, telling of their joys and fears during the many weeks they fled from city to city to elude the private detectives put on their trail by Hazel's mother.

FUR COAT WENT INTO PAWN.

"I almost forgot to tell you what happened to my beautiful fur coat," said the young woman. "Oh course, I don't need it now, but just the same, it was Walter's Christmas present, and therefore I cherish it dearly. One day when things looked dreadfully black, and there was nothing in the cupboard, as old Mother Goose would say, and Walter, although trying to be cheerful, was freezing over me and the future, I stole out of the house in Montreal where we were rooming and just handed that beautiful garment over to Uncle; knew what that meant I pawned it.

"An old school chum of Walter's, one whom he could trust, as was later proved, sent us a few hundred dollars and I sent him my personal note. We were in Montreal, where we were living as Mr. and Mrs. Hector Duval when the starvation ghost loomed up, and it wasn't cold that it would freeze your nose off outdoors.

"The only objection my mother has to Walter is that he is not wealthy. Mamma was anxious that if I did get married I would select a man of means, but I made up my mind that it would decide for myself, and I have to my utmost satisfaction. According to the newspaper accounts which we have read, mamma pays my fortune left me by Grandfather Drew is $150,000, but "There'll be an awful uproar when mamma hears that I am about to enter the Catholic Church, but I was never baptized, and since I began receiving instructions in the Roman faith I am happier than ever. I intend to be a good, devout Catholic wife.

"When I am ebromened I am going to take the name of Mary, and immediately after that ceremony is performed a priest who has been teaching me the religion will marry us according to the rites of the Church. Then all the warrants and the detectives and human bloodhounds can go to smash."

Greek Meets Greek in Law Courts

Judge Morgan in the County Court today, in hearing the case of Louis Berdos of Peterborough against his fellow countryman, M. Pappas, arising out of a transaction involving the sale of the Alexander Restaurant on Queen street west, Berdos demanded $91.37.

Mr. Berdis, a partnership with one Christ Kasnos, sold the restaurant to Pappas for $600. Pappas says he has paid it all, even $60.26 too much, for which he sues in a counter-claim. Berdos declares that Pappas still owes them $91.37 on the sale.—Toronto Star.

Ocean Sanitorium for Consumptives

Medical science with the aid of philanthropic capitalists has studded the continent with sanatoria for the cure of consumption, writes W. T. Stead in the London Daily Mail. They are to be found everywhere, in the Black Forest, on the High Alps, on the sea shore, and on the confines of the African desert. There are many more than one hundred of them in Germany alone. Yet to this day the best site in the whole list remains unoccupied. What is still more strange this superb site is to be found in our own special domain. Obtain is free for occupation without rent, rates or taxes. I refer, of course, to the ocean. We hear much of the blue-water school of imperial defence, but no one speaks of the Blue Water Cure for the Great White Plague.

Yet, if the most eminent medical authorities of the modern world are right, the possibility that a consumptive patient will be cured in an ocean sanatorium is at least twice as great as if he were sent to the best sanitorium on land. Dr. Achille Blom, whose classic work on "Tuberculose et sanatoriums fleutants," has never received the attention it deserved in this country, commands the enthusiastic support of Dr. von Leyden, the most distinguished professor of medicine in the University of Berlin, who, on this subject is in entire accord with the most eminent members of the medical profession on the continent. Our own doctors are professionally reluctant to recommit themselves on such subjects, but the editor of the British Medical Journal declared in an article expounding the system, that its workings well be watched with sympathetic interest by the medical profession, and that there would be no lack of patients if the terms were not absolutely prohibitive. With such commendation approved on the part of the most distinguished medical authorities in favor of the blue water cure how comes it at this time of day a properly equipped floating sanatorium is still sought in vain on any of the seven seas?

CASE FOR OCEAN SANITORIA.

The answer is that what is everybody's business is nobody's business. Everyone agrees that the scheme is excellent, but on one man but either the personal interest or the inward call that compels him to devote himself to the conferring of this great benefit upon mankind. It is not as if there were any great sum of money wanted. The requisite capital for establishing an experimental Ocean Sanitorium is only £30,000, and it would pay five per cent. from the first. Philanthropy and five per cent. are usually supposed to be a strong patent enough to do anything, but they need to be yoked together before they can bring into existence the most beneficent of institutions.

The case for the establishment of an Ocean sanitorium lies in a nutshell. To cure consumption it is necessary above all things to shut out from the destroying bacilli with its the highest living the constant reinforcement of deleterious bacteria which arrive in battalions in every breath of impure air. Lord Lister's invaluable discovery of the importance of antiseptic treatment in surgery is based on the same principle. If pure air is the first desideratum, the second is that the temperature should be obtainable without ex-

Death for Peeping Toms Jury Ignores the Case

Cincinnati, May 15.—The grand jury today reported that it had formally ignored the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Forsythe, wife of a newspaper man of this city, formerly of New York, who shot and killed a printer named J. B. Plowman, who was peering through the window of her bedroom late at night, while her husband was away from home. Mrs. Forsythe fired twice at the man with her husband's revolver, both shots taking effect. The man had a room in the dwelling, and Mrs. Forsythe did not recognize him when she fired.

A few weeks ago a grand jury here dismissed a similar case, wherein a man shot and killed a peeper at a window while he was visiting a young woman.

Lyons, Kan., May 15.—Mrs. Myrtle Brewer, a well-to-do widow, visited the marshal's office at Little River yesterday and said that she had shot and killed Frederick Arn, a bridge carpenter, because he had annoyed her.

Mrs. Brewer said that when she was putting her young daughter to bed she saw the man crouching on the roof of the kitchen and peering into the bedroom window. She fired and the man disappeared. The next morning she found Arn's dead body in the yard.

GOD IN THE HEAD

What's the Sense in Sneezing and Sniffling, Dosing with Purgatives, or Bothering with Atomizers?

CATARRHOZONE.

A Convenient Inhaler Treatment is the Proper Remedy to Cure Quickly and Pleasantly.

Some people long ago abandoned the idea of "working off" a cold by means of laxatives and purgatives for [illegible] reason that the cure is as bad as the disease itself.

To cure a cold in about ten minutes use Catarrhozone. It is aromatic, delightful to inhale, clean and very simple to use.

Catarrhozone is a vegetable antiseptic and perfectly safe as disinfectant. Even children and infants can use it. The vapor is inhaled at the mouth and after passing through the respiratory organs is exhaled slowly through the nostrils.

Catarrhozone never disappoints. It stops sneezing, coughing, dryness of the eyes, by a few inhalations. Inflammation, congestion and all irritation disappear under the influence of Catarrhozone more quickly than can be told.

C. E. College, of Clarence Street, London, says:—"I had a confirmed cold in the head for years, and never used anything with such quick results as I derived from five minutes' use of Catarrhozone. I am delighted to find a remedy that cures colds in a few minutes. Catarrhozone cures every time."

To carry a Catarrhozone Inhaler in the pocket means you won't have colds, catarrh or any lung or throat trouble. It keeps these diseases away and is warranted to protect you against all the ills of winter. Complete outfit, with Hard Rubber Pocket Inhaler costs $1.00. Small size, 25 cents. Druggists or N. C. WOULD HAVE PEACE

The Peace Society of New York invited General Horace Porter to become one of its vice-presidents and thereby suffered some chaff at the hands of the New York Post. Samuel T. Dutton defends the action of the society. He says that record of General Porter made at the Second Hague Conference, and his well-known attitude towards the peace movement, are sufficient warrant of his eligibility not only as a member, but as officer of the Peace Society. "The mere representatives of the army and navy who are actually enlisted among peace workers the latter. Our most honored military heroes of the past hated war, and desired nothing so much as the peace of the world. The names of Washington, Grant, and Sherman are to be found upon the roll of those who have desired peace."

Some of those who are working for the establishment of big armies and navies are avowed friends of peace, and there is no reason to gainsay their sincerity, however we may dispute their logic. They believe that their own country is the most peaceable in the world, and that it is necessary, in order to preserve peace, to protect it against the designs of warlike nations. One is reminded by their attitude of Mark Twain's description of a peaceable peacemaker of the wild and woolly West. Said Twainhave: "He could lam any galoot of his inches in America. If ever him that put down the riot last election before it got a start; and everybody says he was the only man who could have done it. He walked in with a spanner in each hand and a trumpet in the other, and just fourteen men broke on a pleasure in hammering those skinners. He had that riot all broke up and prevented nine before anybody ever got a chance to strike a blow. He was always for peace, and he would have peace. He could not stand disturbances."

AMERICAN TARIFF REFORM

The hopes of genuine tariff reformers in the United States rest just again the supplied friendliness of the President and upon the coming conference between the Senate and the House of Representatives. The enquirer does say that the President would go so far as to veto a bill which does not afford substantial relief to the consumer. Against this is the general belief that the President dislikes spectacular or drastic action, and would not care to figure in the center of a storm. He is probably doing his influence in the direction of a genuine moderate of tariff reform, and the result of his work may be seen in the conference.

It is pointed out by the Washington correspondent of the New York Post that the conference committee cannot make a new tariff bill. It can take cognizance only of those schedules [illegible] on in disagreement. The [illegible] the duties on many raw materials, and the Senate reducing them. The Senate cut the duty on lumber and quarry to the Kingley rate, the House having advanced them seventy-five per cent. The Gangulse reduction hops play all the reductions made by the Payne bill can be completed with the reductions by the Senate, and that then a substantial measure of reformation is carried.

Another optimistic view is that if the bill as adopted is deeply disappointing, the popular movement for tariff reform will grow, and a future Congress will do the work that this has failed to do. The Democratic party is now in the wilderness with no definite aim or policy. It can hardly hope anything and may gain much by taking advanced ground for tariff reduction. The phenomena greed and trickery of tariff beneficiaries has been exposed in Congress, and in the Ways and Means Committee on whose investigations the Payne bill was based. If the Democratic party should nominate a tariff reformer for President it would be possible at least to make a test of public opinion.

The situation is interesting to Canada as a solemn warning. The protected interests have not yet cast a grip upon Canada as they have upon the United States, and every attempt to imitate the American tariff should be resisted.

KING JAMIE'S BLAST.

What the Learned Monarch Had to Say Against the Weed.

Within two centuries after the discovery of tobacco, the Indian and America in 1492, tobacco had conquered the world. But the spirit of progress has been breathed by well-meaning zealots at every [illegible].

Perhaps none of its opponents has been more bitterly antagonistic than those of the fifteenth century when it was struggling for a foothold in the Old World. The famous "Counterblaste to Tobacco" of King James was only an episode in a crusade against the habit that he carried on persistently during his lifetime. Besides his "Counterblaste" here are a few apothegms which history accredits to James:

"Tobacco is the lively image and pattern of hell, for it has by illusion in it all the parts and vices of the world, whereby hell may be gained, to wit:

"First, it is a smoke; so are the vanities of this world.

"Second, it delights them who take it; so do the pleasures of the world delight the men of the world.

Thirdly, it maketh men drunken and light in the head; so do the vanities of the world—men are drunken therewith.

Fourthly, he that taketh tobacco saith he cannot leave it, it doth bewitch him. Even so the pleasures of the world make men loath to leave them; and further, besides all this, it is like hell in the very substance of it, for it is a stinking, loathsome thing, and so is hell."

It is amusing to know that in the latter years of his life King James himself succumbed to the allurements of tobacco, and, though he pigheadedly continued to denounce it, smoked habitually in secret.

Their crusade against tobacco has been continued ever since. Unconsciously, and with the very best of intentions, this army of zealots has disseminated a great mass of misinformation which had no basis of fact and which was conceived in the fertile and imaginative brains of a trio of Park Row space writers. Take, for instance, the sacred fiction that the dark colored oil which lodges in the bowls of pipes and stains the fingers of cigarette smokers is the deadly poison nicotine. Chemical scientists know, of course, that this substance is not nicotine, but simply tar, tobacco tar, distilled from the tobacco just as coal tar is distilled from coal and pine tar from pine wood.

Maids of Honor and Their Work.

In England the maids of honor are chosen by the Queen herself from among the daughters of peers, who, if not themselves connected with the royal household, are personal friends of Her Majesty. A letter is always sent to the parents of the young lady requesting that, as a personal favor to the Queen, she may be permitted to attend at court. As the position is undesirable, and the salary is about $1,500 a year, the request is invariably accepted, and then the newly-chosen maid receives from the Lord Chamberlain the command for her first "wait."

The first thing brought to the maid of honor is her badge, which is a miniature picture of the Queen, set in brilliants, and suspended to a ribbon. Just before the dinner hour, the maid of honor in waiting has to stand in the corridor outside the Queen's private apartments. She carries a bouquet which, on entering the dining-room, she lays at the right hand of the Queen's plate.

The maid of honor sits at dinner next to the gentleman on the Queen's right. This rule is relaxed when royal guests are present. After dinner, unless otherwise commanded, the maid of honor retires to her own room, when, however, she is frequently fetched to read, sing, play the piano, or take a hand at cards.

Vegetables in England.

Until the end of the reign of Henry VIII., according to the historian, Hume, no carrots, turnips, or other edible roots were produced in England. The few that were used were imported, and the state papers contain numerous references to the dispatch of messengers to the continent for rare vegetables and salads to grace the table at important royal banquets. Cucumbers also were unknown until the 16th century, and celery owes its introduction in England to the French Marshal Taillard, who was imprisoned in England after his defeat by Marlborough.

Broccoli and cauliflower came from Cyprus in the 17th century, and the potato, brought to England by Sir Walter Raleigh about 1584, was not in general use until 1663, when the Royal Society directed attention to it and recommended its cultivation.

What Telepathy Is.

Telepathy is the transference of emotions and sensations between souls, while thought transference is the transmission of words, ideas or images from mind to mind. Thus telepathic communication is possible only between persons of a certain degree of dual development and between whom there is a degree of emotional sympathy, while in transference of thought one dominant, positive mind may affect another without there being any degree of sympathetic vibration between them—"Svastika."

Stevenson Bad Speller.

One of the most polished and painstaking of English authors regarded correct spelling as a totally unnecessary accomplishment. In his introduction to R. L. Stevenson's letters, Sidney Colvin writes: "I have not held myself bound to reproduce all the author's minor commonplaces of spelling and the like. As all his friends are aware, to spell in a quite accurate and grown-up manner was a thing which this master of English letters was never able to learn."

CANADA AND HER NAVY

D. D. MANN OUTLINES PLAN FOR NAVAL DEFENCE.

Railroad Man In National Magazine Argues For a Home Fleet Instead of a Contribution to England—Need Not Necessarily Be Used In Behalf of Britain If Canadians Did Not Will It So.

In the National Review for May D. D. Mann has an article on the question of a Canadian navy, which is a timely and thoroughly capable treatment of the case. Mr. Mann represents Canadian spirit and enterprise at its highest point, and he combines with this a national imagination and a literary ability of rare order. Mr. Mann in his article says, in part:

Those who anticipate a Canadian navy as pre-eminently an engine of Canadian patriotism may have a different point of view from many of those who, in the Imperial city, all the time think of the Empire first and its component parts secondarily. There is no necessary incompatability between the two points of view. The problem of Imperial statesmanship is to converge diversities of approach into confederated action. I wish to indicate the lines upon which, it seems to me, the creation of a Canadian navy might contribute to this end.

If we did not approach Imperial questions from the standpoint of "Canada First," we should be very interior Imperialists. Under any circumstances, our geographical and climatic distinction plus our nearness to an extraordinary republic of eighty millions of people, would determine our development on somewhat different lines from those which mark the progress of the Old Land. The best children are not always the most exact reproductions of their parents, even in early youth. And, when they marry and are given in marriage, they are bound to be affected by new surroundings and ideas. A young nation, like a young man, should be something more than a chip of the old block.

In Canada there is a remarkable inter-marrying of people and of ideas, which is a revelation to many older fashioned Canadians; and is doubly a revelation to those who come to us with the ideas and sometimes with the prejudices of the British Islands. The immigration returns of this century show that in Canada, and chiefly in Western Canada, there is a new population as varied in speech and racial characteristics as was and can be found in the most cosmopolitan city of the Old World. The Bible Society publishes the Scriptures in eighty different languages for use in the Dominion.

As the Empire is vaster than England, we do not seek merely to help our new population to become loyal to England. We very much desire their loyalty to the Empire, as we ourselves are loyal. But the first thing, the vital thing is to secure their loyalty to Canada, and as one of the most important steps in that evolution, I would place the creation of a Canadian navy.

The navy will be a natural consequence of placing the Canadian militia on an entirely Canadian basis, and controlled altogether from Ottawa. There is, of course, this difference between a militia and a navy—that a land force is entirely suitable to a country which has no foreign relations, and does not have to prepare for possible quarrels with states beyond the seas; whereas a navy, by the very fact of its existence, proclaims the country which establishes it to be, in some degree, at least, a world power.

It might be argued that, for a country which has no foreign ministers, to have a navy of its own is an impossibility in international politics; and that there is no halfway between a navy of Canadian origin, subject absolutely to the direction of the British Admiralty, and a navy, the instrument of a totally independent power. If precedents were allowed to govern policies, this argument might have some weight; but, if the Empire had always waited for precedents, it would have ended long ago. This generation is just as capable of creating precedents as its forerunners were. There is no more reason why a Canadian navy should be wholly responsible to the Admiralty in London, than there is reason why the Finance Minister of Canada should be a creature of the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"I do not conceive that Canada would propose to contribute to the cost of the Imperial navy, without direct representation on the Admiralty Board, and in the Parliament which reviews the cost and conduct of that body. We are quick to admit the force of the argument that inasmuch as the colonies are advantaged by the Imperial navy, they ought not to be entirely free from financial obligation. The fact that our share in the Empire is so essentially constructive, strengthens, if possible, the position on which great issues have before now been fought, with only one ending—that the people who provide the money shall absolutely control the spending of it. When the House of Lords controls money bills, and the Australian budget is revised in Whitehall, we shall no doubt receive gladly the idea that the Canadian people be taxed for the Imperial navy. We have read enough of English history and have had enough experience of our own, to know that the lynch-pin of self-government is this absolute control of taxes by the taxed.

Nor is it conceivable that Canada would desire to borrow or purchase vessels that have "obsolated" from first-class service in the Imdperial squadrons. It has been suggested, and endorsed in The Times, that the Admiralty should lend us two or three obsolete vessels for policing our fisheries, as the first step in the discharge of Canada's duty to the naval development of the Empire. It is unwise to be contemptuous of small beginnings; and much may be said for the scheme of obtaining a few sea policemen that are too small or too slow for active service with, say, the Channel Squadron. But, if we are to deal with the question at all, we had better begin as though we mean business. To make a debut in second-hand clothes is to be too economical of dignity. We must assist our new citizens to understand that we are partners in the Empire, and not merely one of its poor relations. Where would a couple of poacher-catchers belong? Would they be creatures of the Marine Department, or would a little Admiralty be created for their direction?

The first consideration in any attempt to realise the naval possibilities of a country that overlooks the Atlantic and Pacific oceans is that it must wear the appearance of a thoroughly Canadian origin. To allow the impression to spread that, primarily, it is the financial stress of England which impose new burdens on our people would jeopardise the movement. In starting a naval policy of our own there is no risk of establishing the idea that we have notions of a naval independence that will approximate to Holland or Greece. Our neighbors are rapidly emerging from the supposition that we are in a state of vassalage to England. By inaugurating a navy of our own, we should enhance the prestige of the Empire in the Republic; first because it would be such inter-dependence of parts with the complete acquiescence of the original power; and secondly, the establishment of a navy on a thoroughly Canadian basis, but ready to act with and for the Mother Country, would be a standing sign of our contentment within the Empire, and an effectual proof of the futility of supposing that the relation could be broken.

We must develop the naval spirit. We must begin by training our youth within sight of our shores; rather than by looking for poachers on the high seas. For maritime activity there is a natural, healthy craving in all nations. No one is so foolish as to suppose that Canada would ever dream of a navy finally, regardless of Great Britain. Every discerning man would perceive that, whatever Canada did, would by merely an evidence of the strength of decentralization in an Imperial Government, based absolutely on the will of the governed.

Our maritime assets, so to speak, are three—the Atlantic seaboard, the Pacific seaboard, and the Great Lakes. Hitherto, our defensive instincts have been served only by the militia. In view of the distribution of our population, I suspect that we have more drill halls and armories than England has. But it is anomalous that, with our great coast line in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and far Eastern Quebec, our young fellows, to whom sea legs come by nature, should be compelled into the militia, when their choice would be the marines.

The population of the interior should chiefly supply the militia force. But there is enough blood in the country which first came here in sailors to furnish a naval contingent—even if our many rivers and innumerable lakes did not swarm in summer with all kinds of pleasure craft, which promote a love of life afloat.

The pact which keeps armed vessels off the Great Lakes must never be broken. But there must be training stations on the eastern and western coasts. Halifax and Esquimalt are available. Nova Scotia has ideal marine conditions. British Columbia has, potentially, a great part to play in the Pacific. In winter the youngsters who had spent the summer on the lakes would be sent, some to the Atlantic, and some to the Pacific, to become masters of navigation by cruisers to Europe, to the West Indies, to Australia and Japan. When Canadian warships are brought to Canadian coasts they must be equal with the best.

It must not be supposed, though, that Canada beforehand, will unreservedly pledge herself to fight for Britain.

The partnership idea has not yet reached that point of sacrificing every principle on which her national development thus far has been founded. If there are Canadian advocates of such a pledge they are in a hopeless minority. Nobody would dream of Great Britain making a treaty with the United States in reference to Canada, without consulting Canada. Canada has no formal, constitutional locus in negotiations between Great Britain and the United States. But, in practice, she is at Washington all the time; and we have lived to see the British Ambassador to the United States paying a visit to Ottawa and addressing public audiences in Canadian cities.

The question of agreement with, or hostility to the Mother Country in any international quarrel, could never be governed by any hard and fast compulsion to fight in the Mother Country's cause. If the Mother Country could not win the sympathy of her kith and kin in her quarrel that would be a very strong presumption that her quarrel was not worth powder and shot. We are aware that sometimes war has to be risked secretly. But the risk is not so great as it seems, for no European powers will risk a serious war on some matter about which public feeling has not been roused. Wars are not made any more in the back parlors of irresponsible autocrats.

With the recent experiences of southeastern Europe before us—an experience which, fifty years ago, would have resulted in war first and discussion afterwards—we are quite willing to take our chances of agreement with the Mother Country without a formal contract being entered into beforehand. And, as we should expect that the commanding officers would be selected because of their capacity to command, we should not be afraid to take our fighting instructions from such chiefs. When the time came it would be seen that the loyalty of the French-Canadian, of the American, of the Galician—of all the one-time aliens—would be transfused into a loyalty to the Empire which is greater than us all.

If you've reached this state read what J. W. Jarrell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, late and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills—They possess mystic powers surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

OBITUARY

MRS. S. J. MUNRO.

The news was learned with general regret on Sunday that Margaret Jane McKeown, wife of Mr. S. J. Munro, had passed away about five o'clock that morning. The immediate cause of death was heart failure although the deceased had been suffering from nervousness for some ten years past and for several years required constant attention. Mrs. Munro was a daughter of the late Samuel and Mrs. McKeown of Cobourg and was born in 1862. She was married in 1888 to Mr. Munro, and has resided in this city for about eight years coming here from Lakefield. She was a member of St. John's church, and when her health permitted she attended service regularly.

The deceased is survived by her husband, one daughter, Miss Irene, and one son Harold, both living at home, and one sister, Miss Sarah McKeown, who has been with her sister for several years. To these the sincere sympathy of the community is extended.

The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock and interment will take place at Millside cemetery, Lakefield. Rev. Canon Davidson will conduct the services.

ROBERT RIDDELL.

The death occurred Friday afternoon at his late residence in Otonabee of Mr. Robert Riddell, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Peterborough. He had been ill for some time. The late Mr. Riddell was 71 years of age and was born in South Monaghan, where he resided until about three months ago when he took up his residence in Otonabee. The deceased served on the South Monaghan council two years, one of which he was reeve of the township. He was a man of many sterling qualities and lived a most exemplary life. He was unmarried.

In religion he was a Presbyterian and was prominently identified with the South Monaghan Presbyterian church. He was from 1868 until two years ago, connected with the Bemafort Sabbath school, as both superintendent and teacher. In politics he was a Liberal.

Two brothers, Messrs. Joseph, of Winnipeg, and John Riddell, Stonewall avenue, are left to mourn their loss.

The funeral took place at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, from the residence of his brother, to the Little Lake cemetery.

ROBERT SHANNON.

The funeral of the late Robert Shannon, who passed away in Campbellford on Thursday, took place on Saturday morning from the G.T.R. station to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. H. J. Keith of Knox church, conducted the funeral service. Many friends of the deceased here turned out to pay their last token of respect to the memory of the deceased.

Rheumatism

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the affected parts at each application. There is nothing disagreeable or unpleasant about this Liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is always worth many times its cost. Price 25 cents. Large size 50 cents.

Ocean Sanitorium

tremes of heat and of cold, so that the patient can without inconvenience live in the open air by day and by night. The third is that the patient should be removed so far as possible from all the worries and distractions of the rushing whirlpool of modern life and placed in a totally eastern paradise where he can breathe nothing but fresh air, and where he must breathe it all the time. Given these three considerations, and the distinguished medical authorities above referred to consider that a case of any consumptive patient whose malady has not reached its final stage can be confidently anticipated in two or three months.

All of these essentials for the successful treatment of tuberculosis can be found to perfection in a floating sanatorium, properly equipped, maintained, but on any, in the Archipelago of the Canary Islands. The medicine which alone cures consumption is pure air, and out air on land is so pure or so restorative as the salt laden breath of the soft sea wind. Oxygen and ozone matter are nowhere so deftly intermingled in a sea sanitorium in the latitude of those summer isles of Eden, yet in an arbor sea, where there is not five degrees Fahrenheit of difference in the temperature between midnight and midday, the patient would never be tempted to break the bounds to disobey the doctor's orders, while no echoes of the outside world would disturb his calm. It would be luxury merely to exist for a few months on board the ship of Health, which in its slow orgives around the islands would enable its passengers to make rapid progress towards the part of complete recovery.

EQUIPMENT OF THE SHIP.

In olden days, a long sea voyage, despite all the advantages of confined quarters, chance of bad weather, and constant changes of climate, was often prescribed with success, when all other remedies had failed to effect the cure of consumptives. How much greater the prospect of success when all the disadvantages of such a voyage are eliminated and the patient is enabled to enjoy all the advantages of the best sanatoria on land with life on the deep blue sea. It is proposed to purchase a roomy sailing ship of some two thousand tons burden and to refit her completely as a first-class sanatorium for fifty consumptive patients, each of whom would have a separate large and well ventilated cabin. The deck would be fitted up for verandah treatment. Every convenience of the most perfectly equipped land sanitorium, including swimming baths, reception rooms, etc., would be provided. The ship besides her sapcain and crew, would carry a complete hospital staff of doctors and nurses. She would be stationed in the neighborhood of the Canadian, where she would be able to obtain a constant supply of fresh food, milk and fruit, and whenever the wind blew cool she was threatened to become boisterous she would take shelter in some convenient roadstead. Patients would have gained their sea legs in the steamer bringing them out, and the soft, low swell of the tranquil sea would be but as a cradle lulling them to sleep.

From a business point of view the scheme, so far from offering any difficulties, offers positive temptations to the capitalist. Skin for skin, all that a man has he will give for his life. To buy a suitable vessel and to fit her up as a super floating hospital would not cost more than £25,000 at the very outside. Fifty patients at £20. a day would not only defray the whole working expense, but would leave an ample margin for liberal advertising, ample interest, adequate sinking fund, and still leave provision over that might be used for assisting less wealthy patients to obtain the necessary treatment. It is computed that to cure a patient on these terms would get average more than one hundred pounds per head! What is a hundred pounds for a life!

The Ocean Sanitorium is coming. The Germans are already thinking over the problem, and if we are not prompt they will get in ahead of us, and that ought not to be. For the sea is our domain, and it would never do for Britannia to allow the healing potency of the waves which she rules, to be first practically demonstrated by any but herself.

To Raise $20,000 in Four Days for a Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Hazard of the Y.M.C.A. returned yesterday from Oshawa when he took part in the meetings in connection with the Y.M.C.A. building fund campaign being started there. He reports the meetings as very enthusiastic and most successful. The leaders of the movement in that town have undertaken to raise $20,000 for a building in four days starting this morning and they are reasonably sure of success. They have an offer of $5000 from the McLaughlin Manufacturing Co., on condition that the citizens raise $15,000. A large block of that sum is already in sight.

Big Program Arranged for the Visiting Militia

There will be great doings in Peterborough on May 23rd and 24th and should the weather be favorable one of the largest crowds were gathered together in the city will be seen. Besides the two visiting regiments from Brantford and St. Catharines and the 57th, there will be a large turnout of the dragoons and artillery from this district.

The program for the two days is a big one. The visitors will arrive early Sunday morning and will detrain as quickly as possible and pitch their tents at Central Park. At 9 a.m., the three regiments will parade at the armories, and at 9.15 will march to St. Paul's church, accompanied by all the bands. The parade will be over 1000 strong. In the afternoon one of the visiting bands will give a concert in Central Park and the officers of the 57th will entertain the visiting officers to a drive around the city. In the evening another concert in Central Park will be given by one of the visiting bands.

Monday morning at 9 a.m. the three regiments will fall in at the armories and at 9.30 will parade to Riverside Park for review by the officer commanding the Eastern Ontario command. Afterwards they will return to the armories to take part in the opening ceremonies, for which Hon. Wm. Pugsley will be present. At two o'clock in the afternoon the soldiers will be taken over the lift locks in steamers. In the evening the 57th Regiment band will give a concert in Victoria Park from 7.30 to 9 o'clock, and all the visiting officers and the Minister of Public works, will be entertained at a banquet to be given in the Oriental Hotel. The visiting regiments will leave for home by special train at about 11 o'clock that night.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

The military services will last from 9.30 until 10.30. The special preacher will be Rev. Mr. Ker chaplain of the 19th regiment, while he will be assisted by Rev. Mr. Ashton, chaplain of the 39th regiment, Rev. Canon Davidson, Rev. Dr. Ladgfeldt and Rev. Dr. Telling. The St. Catharines band will lead the musical service in place of the choir.

At the formal opening on Monday an address of welcome will be read by his worship the mayor, on behalf of the city, Mr. R. R. Hall, Hon. Wm. Pugsley, on behalf of the government, and Col. Gordon, commanding officer of the Eastern Ontario command, on behalf of the militia.

The steamers will leave Wolfe St. wharf at 2 and 4 o'clock, and will be open to all men in uniform, but no civilians will be allowed. For the benefit of the civilians the steamer Otonabee will run similar excursions. The officers will also enjoy a trip over the lift locks.

57th Regiment Band Concert Friday Night

A great musical treat is in store for Peterborough next Friday night when the band of the 57th Regiment will give a grand concert in the Conservatory Music Hall. A Times representative stepped into the hall last night and heard several selections played by the band in practice, and was delighted with what was heard. Under Prof. Glidden the boys have made great progress during the winter and have prepared many new selections. One of these is a grand pastorale and dancing fantasie "Le Fremersberg," by Kretschmann. It will be heard Friday night. The following is a synopsis;

The Margreve's horn, echoed by the mountains, is heard summoning the huntsmen, and the fanfare, heard first in the distance, then drawing nearer, indicates their approach, the signal for the hunt to commence. During the rustic scene which follows the horn are heard both near and in the distance. Then comes the song of the country folk—solo with refrain and chorus. During the dance a storm approaches, the wind rises and the peasants' dance becomes more animated. A peal of thunder stops the dance—the peasants rush shrieking away to seek shelter. The lightning flashes; the storm grows in intensity; at last it bursts forth in full fury; rain falls in torrents; the thunder crashes.

The Margreve, who has been overtaken by the storm, is heard crying for help—in vain—the cries of the storm drowns his appeal. Overcome by weariness the Margreve falls to the ground. Suddenly he hears the monastery bell and chant of the monks. Following the sound he finds the Fremersberg. The storm ceases, and the retainers who have been seeking the Margrave, find him in the monastery. All join joyfully in the Te Deum.

Boys' Department Have Big Week

The latter part of this week will be an active one in the boys' department of the Y.M.C.A. On Thursday afternoon there will be the school boys' trial for the one mile relay race. On Friday afternoon at 4.30 the kite flying contest at Armour's Hill, and on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 at Nichols Oval the 3-mile walk for boys 14 and over, and a 2-mile walk for boys under 14 years.

LIGHT AND POWER CO. SEEKING 30 YEAR FRANCHISE OF STREETS

Mr. J. H. Larmonth Laid Plans Before the Council—Desire to Enlarge and Improve Property—The Manufacturers' Committee to Take the Matter in Hand

The council has before it now a pretty large proposition, and it is also one which will require a great deal of thought from the most far-sighted members. It is an application from the Peterborough Light and Power Company for a 30-year franchise to use the city streets. The company's franchise expires in five years but they want to have it extended to 30 years. The Manufacturers' Committee and the city solicitor have the matter in hand. Mr. Larmouth laid the plans in an informal way before the aldermen last night and several subsequent meetings will be held before it is finally settled.

Mr. J. H. Larmouth, president of the Peterborough Light & Power Co., explained the reason he asked the mayor to call this meeting. He said that the company was proposing to make more extensions to their property and to improve their plant. He said that the company desired to consolidate their indebtness and to issue bonds for the same. The bonds will be for 30 years. Everything had gone along well until they suddenly woke up to the fact that their franchise for a pole line on the streets only lasted for five years. This stopped all financial business as it would be impossible to issue bonds for 30 years to a firm that had only a five-year franchise. It did not suppose that the city would turn them down at the end of the franchise period, and he also said that the financial men had faith in the city and the company but they asked that the city and company endeavor to arrive at an understanding. Mr. Larmouth asked that the company be given a 30-year franchise. He said that the company's pay roll ran up to $60,000 and $25,000 a year and that they always employed a large force of men.

Ald. Phelan and Ald. Duncan moved that the matter be referred to the city solicitor to report on.

The motion was changed upon the suggestion of Ald. Hicks so that it was referred to the Manufacturers' Committee to consult with the city solicitor and then report to the committee of the whole.

Ald. Hicks said that this was the time when the council should frame up its future policy for the control of the pole line on the streets, and there were several other matters also to be settled upon. Ald. Hicks also said that a small committee could round this matter up better and quicker and then report to the committee of the whole when it could be threshed out and settled.

This motion was carried.

Ald. McIntyre stated that he did not think the council should consider the Light & Power Company's application for a minute. The lighting contract would expire in five years.

Ald. McIntyre was assured that all these things would be looked after by the Manufacturers' Committee.

Five Mile Race on the Holiday

The only special attraction at the Y.M.C.A. on the holiday will be the 5-mile scaled handicap race. The entries for this close on Friday. The fee is 25c. for members and 50c. for non-members. The business boys train for the 10-mile relay race from Lakefield will also be held. This race takes place on May 29.

Will Look at the Proposed Site

The Peterborough Canoe Co's request for a fixed assessment of $6000 and a grant of land at the rear of their present factory of one-third acre upon which to enlarge their factory.

The feeling of the committee was that if the company got the land they desired and a reasonable assessment on the new building they would be treated very generously. The company should also give a guarantee to put up a certain sized building and to employ a certain number of hands.

It was moved by Ald. Hicks and Ald. Methegal that the Manufacturers' Committee meet at eight o'clock in the morning, and look over the ground.—Carried.

Skilled Labor is Employed

There is a feeling in some quarters that the Purity Ware people will employ a number of girls and more or less cheap labor. The Times made enquiries as to this feature, and Ald. Gillespie, chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, stated that the Purity Ware Limited would employ practically all skilled labor at high wages and no girls. In the New York factory there are even no girls in the office. This is good news for the ratepayers as a firm the size of Purity Ware employing skilled labor will make a great improvement in the city.

Capt. Hains Sentenced to from 8 to 16 Years

Flushing, N.Y., May 17.—Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., U.S.A., who was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree for killing William S. Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club last August, was sentenced today by Justice Garretson in the Supreme Court to an indeterminate sentence of not less than eight years nor more than sixteen years of hard labor in State's prison.

Capt. Hains was brought into court from the Queen's County Jail early, and there was considerable delay before Justice Garretson took his seat on the bench.

John F. McIntyre, counsel for the defendant, made the usual motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, and also contrary to law. Justice Garretson denied these motions.

Mr. McIntyre then raised the point of jurisdiction of the Supreme Court

Serious Situation Facing Ontario Farmers

St. Mary's, May 17.—Perth County is one of the richest farming centers in the Province, but unless a period of dry weather comes immediately a poor crop is likely this year. Since the heavy snow-storm two weeks ago it has rained almost incessantly. That storm put acres under water, and the land has had no opportunity to dry up. This district is made up of hills and hollows, and this week and a newspaper representative made an inspection of the surrounding country, and it is pitiable to see acres and acres of land submerged.

From information gathered, 20 acres seemed to be the maximum amount planted by any one farmer. There are hundreds that have not any seeding done at all yet. Apparently the only salvation for the crops is a late fall. Even now the late seeding will have a detrimental effect on business, as farmers will be wary of spending money in consequence of the uncertainty of the results of the crops.

The situation at present cannot be bolstered up by forced optimism, but is undoubtedly serious in Western Ontario.

Held Prisoner by Big Mollusk while Tide Creeps Upon Him

Long Beach, Cal., May 14.—Roy Sprattly, a visitor from Wyoming is confined to his bed with nervous collapse, the result of a trying experience yesterday. Sprattly went over to White's Point to get shells and rooting under a rock to gather what he thought was a turtle shell found his fingers caught in a vise by a big shalmo.

After trying to break loose he used his pocket knife to pry open the shell, but broke both blades. To add to his terror the tide began to creep up and soon the water was up to his knees. For two hours he was held prisoner until finally his cries were heard by a Japanese fisherman, who succeeded in releasing him.

Cobalt, May 17.—The first through boat on the Montreal river from Latchford to Elk Lake City arrived in Elk lake on Saturday afternoon, and the Upper Ontario Steamboat Company, started their regular service this morning. A very large crowd of prospectors and miners were up on the first boat this morning, and on Saturday nearly a hundred were taken from Mountain Chutes to Elk Lake.

Successful Comedy at St. Peter's Hall

The captivating farce in two acts "My Aunt's Ehiress," was given a splendid presentation at St. Peter's Hall last night by the Young Ladies' Society of St. Peter's Cathedral, before a large and highly pleased audience. All the characters were excellently assumed, and the play was most successfully presented.

Earthquake Shock in the West Caused a Great Deal of Alarm

Winnipeg, May 17.—Despatches this morning show that the earthquake shock Saturday was felt distinctly in most parts of the Western Prairies extending from Medicine Hat to a little east of Winnipeg. The shock traveled from west to east, as was shown by general reports of the rocking of furniture. The tremor was particularly strong in the southern portion of the three provinces, while in the north it was scarcely perceptible. Moose Jaw and Regina were apparently the centers of the disturbances, as the shock was longer and more pronounced.

FELT IT ON TOP FLOORS.

In Winnipeg it was felt by hundreds of people, but most thought it was a distant explosion. On the top floors of high buildings and in apartment blocks the quake was very active, and there was considerable alarm. The telephone girls were kept busy answering inquiries. No damage is reported other than broken furniture and cracked walls. At both Regina and Moose Jaw there was considerable alarm. The shock came at 9.15, when the stores were crowded with Saturday shoppers, and there was a general rush for the streets.

FOUR SHOCKS IN A MINUTE.

Brandon, May 17.—At 10.16 last night a most distinct earthquake shock was felt in this city, and was followed by three others, all taking place within a minute. The inconvenience that followed was experienced most at the electric light plant. The wires from the dam seven miles west of the city, where the electric power is generated, were interfered with to a certain extent, and caused the lights to go out later in the evening for a short time.

The C.N.R. wires in the city were very slightly affected, but did not stop the work on them. Wires of the Great Northwestern Telegraph fell in the west portion of the city, and were put out of commission for a time. Telephone connection was impossible for a few minutes on account of no electric current, and all the lights in the city went out. People in their homes felt most distinct tremors, which caused windows, doors and other loose fixtures to rattle.

Twenty are Accused of "Blindpigging"

Cobalt, May 17.—Chief of Provincial Police, George Caldbeck, and License Inspector Stuart Blackwell got busy in town during the early hours of the morning and as a result nearly forty charges have been served to twenty keepers of blind pigs in the town. Two of the places charged are at North Cobalt.

The cases come up before Magistrate Atkinson this afternoon, and as several of them have been up before, fines will not be accepted, and it is probable that some of them will have to go to jail.

This is the largest raid made on blind pigs in the town for some time, and the police are bound to stop all the illegal sales of liquor in the district.

Kermit Roosevelt Loses His Way in African Wilds

Nairobi, British East Africa, May 17.—It was learned here early today that Kermit Roosevelt lost his way from his father's camp, near Machakos, last Friday and spent an entire night alone on horseback riding in a region unknown to him. On Saturday morning he turned up at Kiu, a station on the railway, inquiring there the way to camp. He was given the desired directions.

The region in which Kermit Roosevelt is reported to have been lost for a night in Africa lies between the Athi river and the Uganda railway. Kiu, where he finally came upon signs of civilization, is a town about 50 miles below Nairobi and about 30 or 40 miles southeast of Machakos. There is an old cart road from Machakos to Kiu, but otherwise the country and region thereabouts is sparsely inhabited by natives of the Wakimbo tribe, a peaceful people, engaging chiefly in agriculture.

Fine Class of Settlers Arrive in Ontario--Are Worth Over $60,000

Toronto, May 17.—The Private Bills Committee Room at the Parliament Buildings was the scene of great activity this morning. Mr. J. M. Clark's party of newly arrived English immigrants were taken up there and given their final instructions and tickets to the places where they will commence work on Canadian farms.

The party numbered 127, and of this number twenty-nine are women. Several of these are accompanying their husbands. Of the unmarried girls very few came on to Toronto, as they nearly all had secured places as domestic servants before leaving the boat.

The party has a total cash capital of $12,000, and all of this is to be invested in Ontario farms. Only twenty-two of the men in the party do not intend to purchase land for themselves.

Just as quickly as possible the men were given notes of introduction to the farmers for whom they will work for a time, a ticket, and all the instruction necessary. They then left the buildings to see Toronto until train time. By tonight they will all have left the city.

"We have five offers of positions for every one man we have," Mr. Clark said. "These men are all trained agriculturists from the south and south-west of England, and are a superior class of men all through. Before I left England with this party an overflow party had been started

The Agony of Piles

ONLY those who suffer from piles know the misery it brings! It robs life of its pleasure, steals the brightness from existence, and substitutes days of dull pain and moments of acute agony. Most so-called "remedies" give ease only for a time, and then—thick comes the trouble and pain and misery! Zam-Buk cures Piles! And cures permanently. Proof of this lies all around you. Women and men in all stations of life have proved it—possibly some of your friends! Let it cure you!

Mrs. Wm. Hughes, of 253, Hochelaga Street, Hochelaga, Montreal, says:—"I was a sufferer for years from blind, itching, and protruding piles. The agony I suffered no one knows. Remedy after remedy proved useless. Day followed day and there was no relief for me—pain, loss of strength, dulness, misery, this was my experience until Zam-Buk was introduced. I know now that there is nothing on this earth like it! It cured me of piles, and once cured, I have had no return of the evil. I would like all women who suffer as I did to know that Zam-Buk will cure them!"

Besides being a specific for piles, Zam-Buk cures eczemas, blood-poisoning, abscesses, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, scalp sores, ringworm, bad leg, festered sores, insect stings, blistering, sore feet and all skin injuries and diseases. GRAVEYARD COUGHS AND COLDS

Cured Quickly by Catarrhozone.

A cough or cold this season of the year paves the way for pneumonia or consumption. The best remedy is "Catarrhozone". It eases a cough in five minutes, and colds cannot exist just a few hours where it is used. Mrs. H L. Chesewith, residing at Glendive, Montana, was worried by a "graveyard" cough. In the following letter she tells how Catarrhozone cured her in one week:

"I had a bad cough for several months that fell that settled on my lungs. I was worried very much to think that nothing I used could shake it off, but reading in the Halifax "Presbyterian Witness" of the wonderful cures Catarrhozone was effecting, I decided to try it. The irritability and soreness was taken out of my throat in a few days, and in less than one week it entirely cured my cough.

"It is with great gratitude and pleasure that I recommend Catarrhozone. I am sure it will benefit and cure all who use it."

(Signed) Mrs. H. L. Chesewith.

The reason Catarrhozone always cures is that it goes right to the core spot, which it heals and makes well quickly. It is antiseptic and destroys disease germs in every part of the system. For Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis, nothing compares with Catarrhozone. It is very pleasant and simple to use, contains no injurious drugs, and is warranted perfectly safe to use. THE BRITISH BUDGET

Mr. Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has introduced a radical budget which is received with a storm of protest from the representatives of those who will have to foot the greater part of the bill. He's task was to make provision for an estimated deficit of nearly $70,000,000. This he has done by increasing the income tax, the death duty, the succession duty, the excise duty, the liquor license duty and the tobacco duty, and by imposing mining royalties, and a small tax on land values. All of these new tax burdens, except the license fees and the tobacco duty will have to be borne by the rich and privileged classes. "Bear ye one another's burdens" is an injunction which Mr. Lloyd-George interprets, liberally, believing that the share of the burden ought to be proportioned to the bearing capacity of the burden-bearers. About half of the large deficit is due to the new system of old-age pensions, and the cost of this plan of relief for the aged poor must be borne by the rich.

It is probable, however, that the keenest resentment against the new budget will not be shown by the rich. The increase in the tax on liquor licenses and tobacco will be resented by the mass of workingmen; for they will tend to increase the cost of liquor and tobacco. Indeed, Mr. Redmond has already protested against this feature of the budget as being unfair to frishmen. In view of political contingencies, it would not be surprising if these features of the budget were modified, and the poorer classes were relieved altogether of any share in the additional tax-burdens.

The tax on land values is the most important of Mr. Lloyd-George's proposals. This is a revenue-producing expedient which is capable of indefinite expansion, and the introduction of it by the Chancellor of the Exchequer may be regarded as the insertion of the thin edge of a very powerful wedge.

Perhaps the most significant remark made by Mr. Lloyd-George in his budget speech was his declaration of the necessity of increased naval armament. "It would be stupendous folly," he said, "to refuse adequately to provide for national defence." As the Chancellor of the Exchequer is generally regarded as the leading advocate in the Cabinet of a peace policy, this admission ought to disgust of the unjust charge that those who are urging the necessity of increased naval armament are influenced by partisan motives.

If your Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organ must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success in healing druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

HOW IT BEARS ON THE POOR

The lot of the city's poor is decidedly hard. They have little money and the infrequent necessity of purchasing only a few cents' worth of a given article at a time forces them to pay high prices. Often they must give five or three times as much for the necessities of life as do persons in good circumstances.

The cost of distribution in large centers is the reason of this disparity which keeps ever busily upon those already carrying the heaviest burdens. The extra handling makes the difference. Coal is much dearer by the bushel than by the ton, and flour by the pound than by the barrel. It seems difficult to devise a means of supplying the poorest with food at the prices charged their well-to-do fellow citizens.

It seems a cruel thing that the purchasing power of the poor man's slender means is cut in two or three by the economics of distribution. But at least it should be seen that he gets full weight and measure with his meagre purchases. The New York superintendent of weights and measures reports that the poor people of the State are annually robbed of $20,000,000 through fraud, adulteration, cheating scales and false standards of quantity. It is surely the public imperative to see that weights and measures are properly adjusted, and that the dealers who cater to the poorer classes do not make a practice of robbing them.

A WELSH REVIVAL.

Converts Writhe in Agony or Laughed Insanely Under Emotion.

Strange "revival" scenes have been witnessed at a mission at the Park Hotel in Cardiff.

At a recent meeting a few Welshmen were present, but most of the people came from places as far away as Nottingham and London. The leader was Smith Wigglesworth, who thundered forth the following welcome: "Come on, brethren, come on, come on. Ha! ha! ha! Glory, glory, glory! Blood, blood, blood! Amen."

A middle-aged man writhed in apparently agonized emotion, and cried and sobbed like a heart-broken child. One man's body was fearfully contorted. When physical collapse seemed inevitable the penitent burst forth in wild laughter. "You are coming on, brother," said Mr. Wigglesworth. "Persevere, brother." Then, pulling a small scent bottle from his waistcoat pocket, he poured the liquid contents on the kneeling man's head. The effect was magical, and the man became subdued.

A disheveled, crimson-faced woman looked with haggard stare into vacancy and then threw herself on the floor, where she screamed and groaned and laughed, agony and joy alternating. Another woman, on her knees in an obscure corner, gave vent to sounds resembling the cry of a lamb.

A woman rose in the hall to say that for three years she had suffered from cancer and had been in constant pain, but she had that day "received the blood" and been healed and was now whole. This announcement was received with cries of praise and hysterical laughter.

Several women converts advanced to the table making pitiable manifestations of emotion and bursting into laughter, while one rolled over on the floor shrieking wildly. As if by contagion others began to utter most uncanny noises. Mr. Wigglesworth had a screen drawn across the room to hide the suppliants.

The scene continued for three hours, relieved occasionally by hymns and the sobering advice of one leader, who prayed that brethren should not overstep the mark.

Negro Jury Try White Man.

A remarkable story of the conviction of a white man by a jury of West African negroes is revealed by the action of [illegible] Secretary recently in ordering the release from Parkhurst Prison of Mr. Vivian William Denton, of Gravesend, chief engineer and dredge master to a gold mining company on the West African coast.

The white man's camp was raided and $200, a revolver, and a quantity of goods were stolen. Suspicion fell on William Johnson, a negro, who had absconded. He was tracked down, and confessed to the robbery, but escaped from his captors by swimming a river and concealing himself in the bush.

He was captured and taken to Axim, and charged with the theft. The Aboriginal Society provided him with legal assistance, and he was let off with one day's imprisonment.

Mr. Denton, who had been a witness in the prosecution of Johnson, for whose capture he had offered a reward of $25, was now charged with an alleged brutal assault on Johnson. He was tried by a judge and jury of several negroes, and was found guilty and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. An eye-witness on whom Mr. Denton relied died before he could give evidence.

Mr. Denton was sent to England to serve his sentence, and arrived early in January. His friends, both in Africa and at home, were convinced that a great injustice had been done, and, with the assistance of Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., they made strong representations to the Home Secretary, who ordered his release.

"Lal" Brough.

Mr. Lionel Brough, the favorite London comedian and story-teller, was born as far back as 1838, though he does not look his age. As a youth he first entered business life as a clerk to Mr. John Timbs, editor of The Illustrated London News. He instituted the system of selling newspapers in the streets, and was for five years on the staff of The Morning Star. In 1862 he joined the theatrical profession, and has since played in almost every first-class theatre in the United Kingdom, America, and South Africa. "Lal" Brough—so all his many friends call him—is devotedly attached to dumb animals, and his house is a perfect elysium for beasts and birds.

Stromboli's Flames.

Stromboli rarely pours out streams of lava, for this Aeolian crater vents its flame persistently and sends spasmodically. The "lighthouse of the Mediterranean" has been known to stick to its function of torchbearer for the space of 2,500 years. Whenever the tiny, regular eruption takes place the steam drop back again into the crater. While the ancients regarded Stromboli variously as the smithy of Vulcan and the headquarters of Aeolus, the man of the middle ages looked upon it as the main highway to purgatory.

The Gargoyle.

The word "gargoyle" is closely akin to "gargle," for "gargoyle" is simply the French "gargouille" (throat). It was a good name for the architectural monster through whose mouth the rain-water was carried off. But all idea of the throat had disappeared in the terrible Gargouille de Rouen, the dragon which wasted a French district until St. Romanus threw it into the Seine. In after generations a huge sham gargouille used to be carried around the city once a year in memory of this deliverance.

Press-Gang Up-to-Date.

If Great Britain should be involved, a press-gang would seem hale being, but its object would be to seize motor-cars, not motor-men.

An amendment has been quietly introduced into the army annual bill making it clear that for the purpose of mobilization motor-cars and locomotives may be impressed.
